$325M for Winter Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to spend about $325 million this winter on special projects that it hopes will generate 140,000 jobs.

The figures were announced today by Finance Minister John Turner and Manpower Minister Robert Andras when dealing with a $500-million program aimed at reducing winter unemployment over the long term.

The two ministers announced:

—The local initiatives program (L.I.P.) will receive another $80 million immediately, which, added to appropriations made this fall, brings the winter total to $165 million.

—$10 million more for the federal on-the-job training program, raising the total for this program to $50 million this winter.

—$60 million to various federal departments for labor intensive works and activities during the winter.

—Expenditure of between $50 million and $100 million this winter on a new three-year provincial-municipal capital works fund.

In the last case the total fund for loans and grants to municipalities to finance capital projects is $350 million.

Under this program loans will be made available to provinces and municipalities up to May 31, 1975. Part or all of the cost of labor will be refunded, depending on circumstances.

Mr. Turner said the new program will raise his cash requirement for the current fiscal year to $2.2 billion dollars from the May estimate to $2 billion.

He said this includes the heavy and unanticipated government expenditures for the unemployment insurance fund. He did not give a clear explanation of why he needed so little extra money, except to say that there have been some increases in revenues and some cuts in expenditures.

The finance minister said to the estimated $325 million to be spent this winter should be added a $50-million carry-over of spending from last year's employment loans program. This would bring total expenditures to $375 million.

The expenditure compares with about $300 million that Mr. Turner estimated was spent on winter works a year ago.

The government cannot be certain how much of the new money will be spent this winter under the new provincial-municipal capital projects fund.

Mr. Turner said that half the on-site labor costs incurred before the end of the program in 1975 will be deducted or forgiven from the amount of individual loans.

The government would pay 100 per cent of these labor costs if the work was incurred during the low-employment period of Dec. 1 and May 31.

The fund would assist in such capital projects as roads, streets, schools, public buildings, recreation centres and "similar priority projects" of municipalities and provinces.

As the government cannot be sure how much of these loans will be required this winter, it cannot say what its total winter-works outlay will be.

But Mr. Turner estimated that between $50 million and $100 million will be loaned this year.

Cold Will Stay

Victoria's cold spell is firmly entrenched according to airport weather officials, and freezing temperatures are expected to continue for several days.

Slightly less wind is forecast however, after two days of steady 35 to 40 m.p.h. blow which brought an extra chill to temperatures that ranged in the twenties to low thirties.

Weathermen say there is no sign of more snow.

Tomorrow will be sunny and cold with the mercury dropping to 20 degrees overnight and rising to a high of 32 during the day.

Officially, the temperature at the Vancouver International Airport fell to 22 degrees. But the weather office said that when coupled with winds that reached 45 miles an hour, it produced a chill factor of about three degrees above zero.

Homes in parts of West Vancouver and North Vancouver were without power for almost three hours during the night after a tree—toppled by the winds—crashed down on a power line.

The temperature was 11 degrees in Prince Rupert overnight and 10 below at Williams Lake — both record lows for Dec. 6. It was 34 below at Germansen Landing and 17 below at Prince George.

In east-central Alberta passenger and freight trains are restricted to 30 miles an hour because cold weather is shrinking the rails on Canadian National Railways' main line.

The speed limit on 40 miles of the line east of Edmonton was imposed, a CN spokesman said Tuesday, because the gaps at some rail joints had grown to five inches.

Homeward-bound Christmas holidayers at Vancouver are finding that it's easier not to wrap their presents until they reach their destination, because Air Canada personnel are tearing off the fancy paper to examine contents if any metal is detected. It's all part of anti-hijack security.

Guards, Baggage Checks Ordered at U.S. Airports

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — U.S. Transportation Secretary John Volpe announced Tuesday two new anti-hijacking steps — the posting of armed guards at passenger gates before every flight, and mandatory inspection of all hand baggage.

Cost of these, however, will be borne by the airlines not the U.S. government.

Meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers said that the United States and Cuba now have a "foundation of an agreement" on a hijacking treaty.

Rogers' comments were echoed in Montreal by Captain Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association, who said a Canada-Cuba treaty for the extradition of aircraft hijackers is "virtually ready to be signed."

Capt. Simpson said "there are a few minor hitches left to be ironed out."

Volpe said that the mandatory inspections of hand baggage — to be done by airline employees — would begin no later than Jan. 5, and that airports would be required to deploy armed guards by Feb. 6.

At a press conference, Volpe reiterated the administration's opposition to a federally-financed airport police force and said that the costs of the new anti-hijacking measures would ultimately be recovered by higher air fares.

Initially, however, the airlines would have to absorb the expenses of the baggage inspections, and airport operators — city and county governments, or special airport authorities — would have to pay for the guards.

Tuesday's announcement was immediately greeted by protests from airport operators and lobbyists for U.S. cities, who said that airport policing should be a federal responsibility and that the extra costs would strain local tax resources.

One official of the Airport Operators' Council International estimated that about 80 per cent of the country's airports don't meet expenses with airport revenues (such as landing fees, parking income, and concessions) and, therefore, must be subsidized out of general tax revenues.

Although there were no reliable estimates of how much the new steps would cost, John Shaffer, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said that fare increases reflecting the high airline expenses would be no more than $1.

Volpe said that as many as 3,000 guards might be required at the 531 airports with scheduled service. The AOCI said the cost might run as high as $75 to $100 million.

Before leaving for Brussels Tuesday, Rogers met for 40 minutes with Silvia Masnata, the Swiss ambassador to Havana, and handed him what Rogers called "an American draft" of a hijacking agreement for Masnata to carry back to Havana.

Although much remains to be negotiated, the state department said, both sides now agree that a hijacking treaty should cover both planes and ships.

It is understood in return that the United States will agree to restrict terrorist activities mounted against Cuba by Cuban exiles from U.S. territory.

'I'M SHOT! HELP . . .'

BELFAST (CP) — Three young children watched their father die on a village sidewalk late Tuesday as one of Northern Ireland's worst days of violence drew to a close. Five men were killed within 24 hours.

The confirmed death toll rose to 655 in more than three years of communal violence in the province.

The father who died was a Protestant militiaman, William Bogle, 27, who had taken his family for a drive in County Tyrone. They were in the Village of Killeter when four shots hit the car.

Bogle staggered to the sidewalk and collapsed, crying: "I'm shot! Help me, I'm shot!" He died in his wife's arms.

Gov't Readies Car Insurance

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Highways Minister Robert Strachan said today that the government has hired the treasurer of Saskatchewan's public car insurance plan to put together British Columbia's scheme.

Strachan also promised the legislation will be introduced for final adoption in the Legislature in the spring session.

The earliest date for implementation would be six months from the time the legislation is passed, Strachan said, but added it could take longer.

Hired as an "adviser" to Strachan is Norman Bortnick, 47, at an annual salary of $25,000. Bortnick will begin work Monday, Strachan said.

Bortnick started in the Saskatchewan government insurance office as executive assistant in 1953 and has held a number of posts in and out of that office since then. He is a chartered accountant.

Strachan said he would give out no more details of the program between now and the time the legislation is introduced.

But he said he already knows the alternatives involved and the next decision is which of these is best. The car insurance may or may not be tied to the issuance of car and drivers licences, he said.

He said he could make no statement on whether rates would drop for certain types of driver, but said bad drivers would not be getting low rates because of subsidy from the public.

NICHOLSON STAYING ON

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced today that Lt.-Gov. J. R. Nicholson of British Columbia will remain in office "for the time being."

Lt.-Gov. Nicholson announced earlier he would resign at the end of November for personal and family reasons.

Ottawa to Hike Forces Spending

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Canada told the North Atlantic Treaty Organization today that it plans to increase defence spending this year and improve the quality of its NATO forces.

James Richardson, the new defence minister, outlined the plans in a report to NATO ministers meeting here. (See also Page 2.)

Afterward he told newsmen it was too early to give a precise figure on the defence budget increase. Spending has been frozen for a number of years at about $2 billion.

"I would like to think the people are proud of their armed forces, think they are necessary and important and are not unduly concerned by the expenditure," he said.

Richardson said the budget must rise to meet increased costs and new equipment needs. He told his NATO colleagues that Canada is preparing to consider proposals from the defence industry for a new long-range maritime aircraft to replace the Argus now in use.

He mentioned a new radio relay system in Europe and improved anti-tank systems as examples of how Canada is moving to improve the quality of its NATO forces.

Canada is continuing to consider ways in which the effectiveness of its NATO forces can be improved without a significant change in size, Richardson told his colleagues.

He said he warned them that all NATO countries must expect further public pressure for reductions in defence spending as negotiations progress with the communist bloc, leading toward detente in Europe.

SOCRED ELECTION COSTS: $911,169

Expense statements filed with the chief electoral officer in Victoria show the Social Credit League spent a record amount in the Aug. 30 provincial election.

The league spent $911,169.40 compared with reported expenses of $526,000 in 1969. This does not include amounts spent by candidates themselves.

The Liberal party reported spending $223,754, compared with $156,000 spent in 1969.

Earlier, the New Democratic Party reported more than doubling its 1969 campaign expenditures of $79,000 by spending $190,867.61.

The Conservative party reported spending $159,566.19 while the Communist party said it spent $4,800.08.

Popular Cold Pills Worthless: MDs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Popular pills heavily advertised as remedies for the common cold — such as Contac and Coricidin — can't even relieve runny-nosed symptoms, let alone cure them, medical experts testified today.

Two doctors with long experience in colds research told a U.S. senate subcommittee the ingredients used in over-the-counter cold remedies — particularly anti-histamines — are worthless in treating colds and come in doses too small to do any good anyway.

They said the same held for non-prescription cough syrups. Americans spend close to $1 billion a year on home remedies to treat their coughs and colds.

"What is disturbing is that the American public spends large sums of money treating their colds with over-the-counter combinations which contain some ingredient that are essentially ineffective, and others, although at least potentially effective, in too low a dose to be genuinely useful," said Dr. Philip Norman, a medical professor at Johns Hopkins University.

Both he and Dr. Carl Arbesman, a medical professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo, said that virtually all cold pills contain anti-histamine compounds supposedly effective in relieving runny noses. But they said anti-histamines, while effective in allergies, don't help colds at all and that this has been proved by numerous studies.

"In summary, then, the 'cold remedies' obtainable without prescription have not been proven to be effective," Arbesman said. "The ingredients are not anti-viral and cannot cure colds."

Arbesman also warned that at least seven brands of cold pills contain aspirin but contain no warning on their labels to alert persons who are allergic to it.

Running down a list of several popular brands of cold pills, Norman described their contents."

—Coricidin contains the equivalent of one Aspirin tablet and one-half the usually prescribed dose of an anti-histamine.

—Super-Anahist contains two anti-histamines, each one-quarter the usual dose, a bit less than one aspirin tablet, and a nasal decongestant at one-quarter to one-half the usual therapeutic dose.

—Dristan is composed of an anti-histamine at less than half the prescribed dose and a decongestant doctors only prescribe for external use.

—Contac contains small amounts of anti-histamine and decongestant in a time-release form that "retards absorption" so that it is impossible for the drugs to do any good.

Further, he said, Allerest claims to be for relief of "allergic colds," an ailment Norman said doesn't even exist and so must have come "from the imagination of an ad writer."

Winter Jobs

into account such things as seasonal factors, population and unemployment record, this is the anticipated allotment of the entire $350 million fund:

Newfoundland $12 million, Prince Edward Island $3 million, Nova Scotia $14 million, New Brunswick $13.8 million, Quebec $113.9 million, Ontario $106.4 million, Manitoba $13.4 million, Saskatchewan $13.1 million, Alberta $22.2 million, British Columbia $37.3 million, Yukon $300,000, and Northwest Territories $600,000.

REQUESTS ON HAND

The two ministers said more than enough applications for L.I.P. projects now are on hand and it was hoped that early decisions could be made on them so that work can commence.

In a statement distributed at a news conference, the ministers said the provincial-municipal plan is focused on seasonal unemployment and "the need for a longer planning period for major capital works."

FOR PUBLIC WORKS

They said the $60 million allocated to federal departments will be used for such things as harbor and wharf improvements, canal repairs, airport construction, school and housing works, and other labor-intensive jobs.

Mr. Turner, asked if his proposals should not have been brought forth earlier to help reduce unemployment this winter, said some money already had been allocated to L.I.P. and on-the-job training.

But late in the fall it became evident that there was a levelling off of the economy in the third quarter of the year.

This was caused by a number of factors.

Bad weather hit the agriculture industry in Eastern Ontario and Quebec, causing a fall-off of employment amounting to between 80,000 and 100,000.

STRIKES HURT EXPORTS

Strikes in the first 10 months of the year had cost 6.7 million man-hours. They had closed ports, hurting Canadian exports.

Exports also had been hurt by strikes that closed European ports.

All these meant that the government had to do some more employment priming. The minister said it is evident the economy is once again turning upwards in the fourth quarter of this year.

Both ministers said that one of the criteria for selecting projects under all programs will be whether they will take people off welfare and unemployment roles.

In the past this was not specifically applied to L.I.P. projects.

WANT A CHANCE

"Canadians want a chance to work and this new program will provide an opportunity for many people who now are drawing benefits to make an active contribution to the country," their statement said.

"The great bulk of the funds being allocated for direct job creation will flow as grants and loans to provinces and municipalities to help finance local services repair and maintenance projects and capital works."

It said the ministers are confident that as a result of contingency plans already prepared on the basis of experience of the last few years, the three levels of government can move quickly to make good use of the additional funds to finance new or expanded employment-creating projects this winter.

But they added that there is a limit to what the government can do in the way of direct measures to reduce winter employment.

"The adverse effects of our rigorous Canadian winters inevitably force shutdowns or slowdowns in construction and many basic industries in Canada."

And Mr. Andras said that his department cannot go on funding some L.I.P. projects forever. Somewhere along the line individual projects must find their own financing.

STRESS SOCIAL ASPECTS

He said he hopes to use $10 million of the new money to help finance projects of social betterment by private sources.

In this case an industry that must lay off people because of seasonal conditions might decide to go into a community betterment project.

This could be revenue-producing to the extent that it might become self-sustaining.

There were other ideas of using private, non-profit organizations under L.I.P. that were being considered by his department officers.

He estimated that of the 140,000 jobs created this winter, 125,000 will come under L.I.P. projects. He said 80 per cent of the jobs created under L.I.P. last year became permanent.

$399,000 Sought

Blasting the top from the huge rock alongside the Memorial Arena is one of nine projects listed in a $399,000 Victoria submission for the federal government's local initiative program.

City council's public works committee, which endorsed city engineer James Garnett's suggested list Tuesday, was told the net cost of the city if the entire proposal was approved would be $266,000.

The rock has been suggested as a suitable site for a second ice surface in the city. Council has made no decision on the matter, but levelling the big rock is seen as a necessary first step.

Estimated cost of the project, which would employ eight men for four months, is $45,000 of which the city would recover one-third.

Also included in the submission is $45,000 for reconstructing the Ross Bay seawall.

The total program would provide 285 "man months" of labor — that is, it would employ 285 men for one month or 142 men for two months or 71 men for four months.

Saanich will re-examine its public works, lands and planning objectives with a view to making further application for federal funds announced in plans today.

Acting mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore said "we are very interested in extension of winter works funds," noting that Saanich has already applied for approval of $809,000 in projects that can be undertaken this winter, $559,000 of the total borne by Saanich.

But he said the municipality is in a "quandary" because it has been given no indication of how much of the program will be accepted by the senior governments.

Premier Barrett's immediate reaction to the winter works announcement was that he wants time to study the details of the program.

But Barrett did say that it is late in the winter for a winter works announcement to be made. And he added that there does not appear to be much money to be divided between ten provinces.

the weather

Cold Arctic air continues to blanket British Columbia with little change expected in the next day or so. The Arctic air pouring out of the interior produced strong gusty winds in coastal valleys and inlets which added greatly to the chill factor. Afternoon temperatures today and Thursday will climb to near freezing in coastal areas but will remain well below freezing in the interior.

Sharp Will Demand Viet Clarification

BRUSSELS — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will press for clarification of the conditions under which any international observer group in Vietnam would have to operate when he begins meetings Thursday with foreign ministers of the NATO alliance.

Canada, Indonesia, Poland and Hungary have been mentioned by the United States as the countries which should form such a team if a cease-fire in the Vietnam war is negotiated in Paris.

Ottawa has laid down stiff conditions which must be met prior to Canadian participation. These have been passed to the American and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris but no reply has been received.

Sharp is likely to meet bilaterally with U.S. State Secretary William Rogers to try to make certain the conditions will be met although official sources say some compromises are possible.

The U.S. has suggested up to 1,400 Canadians might be needed on the observer force.

This would require about 3,000 back-up personnel and would cost between $70 and $100 million a year.

In Paris, Henry Kissinger met Le Duc Tho for 5½ hours today. No statement was issued at the close of the session.

This was the third meeting between Kissinger and Tho since President Nixon's security adviser returned to Paris Sunday. They held two sessions Monday, each lasting 2½ hours, then called a 24-hour pause Tuesday.

North Vietnamese sources said the Tuesday break was requested by the American side. During the break, a White House spokesman said, Nixon sent new instructions to Kissinger.

In Saigon 53 Russian-made rockets slammed into Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base and the nearby area today killing nine people and wounding 54, the South Vietnamese command said.

It was the biggest rocket attack against Saigon since February, 1968, when the Tet offensive was launched with an 86-round rocket barrage against the same installation.

Oak Bay Swap Offer Voided

Farmer Construction Co. has withdrawn its swap proposal to Oak Bay council to build a sports complex in exchange for being given the Victoria Riding Academy land.

Made last summer, the proposal was to build the complex on municipal-owned land near the Oak Bay junior high school in exchange for being allowed to construct three nine-storey highrises and 50 townhouses on the 9.3-acre academy site.

Company president, George Farmer, in announcing the proposal has been withdrawn, says the provincial government's announcement that it would pay one third of the cost for recreation facilities costing less than $1 million has put a different complexion on the academy site's development.

Selling price of the site has been set at $1.3 million, the money being earmarked for construction of the sports complex.

Farmer says if the site was priced lower it would be feasible to put in fewer apartments and still make a profit, although he still would prefer highrises with more clear space between.

Mayor Frances Elford describes the provincial announcement as a "godsend" and says she will be meeting with Oak Bay MLA G. Scott Wallace, who has written Premier Dave Barrett and offered assistance to council in obtaining the grant.

Greater Victoria service stations and tire dealers have been reaping the benefits of this week's cold spell.

Many local tire dealers are trying to replenish their stock today after selling out of some sizes Tuesday.

Service stations in some areas have been unable to cope with calls for assistance in starting cold cars — both old and new.

Saanich police reported 21 minor car accidents and estimate 14 "nonreportable" collisions.

Oak Bay reported seven accidents, Victoria six, Sidney three, Esquimalt one and Colwood 10.

People coming into town from the Langford-Colwood area Tuesday spent between one and 1½ hours in bumper-to-bumper traffic getting here.

Pat Bay Highway traffic was a little faster than Trans-Canada traffic.

Traffic on both highways was moving faster today.

Colwood RCMP said there is "bare pavement" on the Malahat with the exception of "ice ridges" in the middle which may cause problems when overtaking another vehicle.

CUPE-Schools Mediator Named

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour has been appointed to assist in the contract renewal dispute between the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 382, and the Greater Victoria School District.

Details of the issues have not been disclosed. The current contract expires at the end of December.

Breakdowns, Weather Plague Ferries

Engine problems and concern about subjecting passengers to rough seas upset B.C. Ferries schedules Tuesday.

The Queen of the Islands, the medium-sized ferry that runs between the Gulf Islands and the mainland terminal at Tsawwassen didn't make one Gulf crossing in Tuesday's windy and cold weather.

Her skipper was concerned that the seas would be too rough in the Gulf of Georgia so the ferry's passengers were diverted to Swartz Bay and then taken to the mainland by larger ferries.

Although the water around Swartz Bay was quite rough the stretch across the gulf was relatively calm.

Engine problems put the Queen of Vancouver, recently refitted, out of commission on the Swartz-Tsawwassen run. She is now at Tsawwassen where her crew are carrying out replacement repairs. She is expected to be operational again Sunday.

The Queen of Vancouver was replaced by the Queen of Nanaimo, which was taken off the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run.

The Queen of Nanaimo was half an hour late leaving on the 7 p.m. run from Tsawwassen because she waited for the bus diverted from the Queen of the Islands. She was also 30 minutes late leaving on the 9 p.m. run from Swartz Bay.

The Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run will not be short-shipped by the pulling of the Queen of Nanaimo until Friday when the weekend service is normally three ships, not two as during the rest of the week.

Also crippled by engine problems Tuesday was the Salt Spring Queen, which operates between Swartz Bay and Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

The Pender Queen will take her place until her repairs are completed, which will probably be late Thursday.

Meanwhile, officials said, repairs are being carried out on the Queen of Victoria, following her recent engine fire in Active Pass.

She is expected to be readied in time for the Christmas traffic.

Killer Gales Batter U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Winter gales battered the British Isles and surrounding seas today, killing at least six sailors and two motorists, flooding roads and homes and causing widespread damage.

Thirteen other seamen are missing and believed drowned.

The bodies of five of the dead sailors were discovered under an overturned liferaft in the English Channel. The coast guard said they were from the 1,957-ton Greek freighter Gold Coin, believed to have sunk off the coast of Kent. The ship had a crew of 17, and the other 12 men are missing.

A sailor on the British nuclear submarine Courageous was swept overboard off the Outer Hebrides and was presumed to have drowned.

On land, two men were killed when their car, buffeted by high winds, skidded into a truck on the icy Alloa-to-Dunfermline road in Scotland. A third man in the car was seriously injured.

Canada Refuses Entry To Stokely Carmichael

MONTREAL (CP) — Stokely Carmichael, leader of the All African Revolutionary Party, was refused entry into Canada Tuesday by immigration officials and deported back to the United States.

Carmichael, who was to appear at McGill University Tuesday night for a taping of the television program Under Attack, was ordered to fly back to Washington, D.C. following a 2½-hour meeting with his lawyers and immigration officials.

He had been declared inadmissible by Canadian immigration officials upon arrival and launched an appeal.

A second immigration officer was ordered to conduct what officials called a "further examination" and Carmichael was refused entry.

John Martin, producer of Under Attack for Screen Gems of Canada, said Carmichael had been in Montreal in the past for tapings of the program, sold to numerous private television stations across Canada as well as the major networks.

His last public visit there was in 1968 when he gave a speech before 1,500 student delegates to the Black Writers' Congress at McGill.

Martin said he "did not think the deportation was justified."

Immigration officials said he was deported under section five of the Immigration Act which decalres inadmissible "any person convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude."

They refused to comment on the nature of Carmichael's conviction.

Moon Trip Era In Final Hours

Times News Services

CAPE KENNEDY — An era comes to an end tonight when the astronauts of Apollo 17 leave the earth, the last men to voyage to the moon in the $25 billion Apollo program begun 11 years ago.

Astronauts Eugene Cernan, Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans are due to depart at 6:53 p.m. PST, making them the last of 11 Apollo crews to fly into space, the last of nine to voyage to the moon and the last of six to land on the lunar surface.

"We've been too busy to get philosophical or nostalgic about this last scheduled mission to the moon," Apollo program director Rocco Petrone said at a pre-launch press briefing Tuesday.

"My personal belief is that the true meaning of the Apollo program will take many years to unfold, that the impact will only happen when man awakens to the limitless frontier that space exploration is."

The space agency permitted a night launch because of an increased confidence in its ability to rescue the crew in case of an emergency abort at liftoff. Previously, manned night launches were not allowed.

The world again will be watching as the trio make their journey to the moon, but will see less on television than during past lunar expeditions.

Citing decreased public interest, the three major television networks have trimmed special coverage of the voyage.

CBS, for example, has scheduled about five hours of special coverage through the 14-day flight of Apollo 17.

Last April, the network procided 13 hours 13 minutes of live and tape special reports on Apollo 16.

Three years ago, when the Apollo 11 spaceship took man to the moon for the first time, CBS devoted 36 hours 21 minutes of air time to the event.

For Apollo 17, a total of 21 hours 17 minutes of space television will be beamed back to earth and be available to the U.S. networks.

NBC will provide the most extensive coverage of Apollo 17, with 10 hours 30 minutes of special programming scheduled.

A spokesman said the network provided 51 hours of coverage for Apollo 11 and about 15 hours for Apollo 16.

ABC has scheduled about six hours of coverage.

BARRETT MEETS B.C. TEL HEAD

Premier Barrett met briefly with B.C. Telephone president Ernest Richardson Tuesday, but neither men made any statement about the talks.

"We didn't get any busy signals and we promised not to tap each other's lines," Barrett joked when asked about the meeting.

The premier, who has affirmed since his August election victory that government takeover of the utility is inevitable, said he and Richardson have been corresponding and both wanted the meeting.

Richardson confirmed in Vancouver that B.C. Tel was a topic of discussion, "but no decisions were made."

Guess-Work Is Not Enough

To read the summations of what various municipal council aspirants say they will work for if elected at next Saturday's polls is to come face to face with the perfect municipal government. It is difficult to understand how municipal councils can make the mistakes they do, encounter so many impenetrable problems, and generally fall short of perfection, when such aldermanic material is available. But err they do. There is many a slip betwixt the hopeful candidate's cup and the working alderman's lip.

In Victoria this year, the physical aspect of the city's growth is by far the most important issue, particularly in regard to highrise development, neighborhood zoning and preservation of historic or natural amenities. Few aldermanic candidates, if any, can be pinned down as favoring construction of highrise apartment complexes, yet some have it on their records. The complication in recent highrise controversies is that city council has been struggling with the aftermath of decisions by previous councils, and the legal limitations of their own powers. In almost every case it has been a losing battle.

Aldermen who eventually voted for both the Reid and Mace projects, and who didn't realize what they were doing until they saw what they had voted for on the View-Quadra site, still think of themselves as being against highrises, or so present themselves. In some cases there were changes of philosophy in the face of an aroused public opinion, in others an honest belief that council was morally bound by the judgments of its predecessors, and in some a lingering belief in the representations of highrise promoters that vertical development is the true path of progress and civic sophistication. Voters will have to unravel these intricacies in coming to a decision.

The basic flaw in some aldermanic thinking, as in the general conduct of councils, has been the lack of sound planning principles and an over-all philosophic plan for the city. Almost all the major building proposals in recent years have been tackled on an ad hoc basis: the project has been judged on its own merits — or those claimed by the promoter — without reference to the wider concept of the city's character and style.

Thus, some otherwise acceptable constructions have been badly located; some objectionable ideas have been made to seem plausible by neglecting their effect on the environment. Candidates who have obviously studied Victoria's history and character and are prepared to work toward achievement of a planned and harmonious result should have a preference in the voters' choices. But the degenerative process of binding successive councils by their predecessor's mistakes should be halted while the city still has a chance of survival. The mistakes should stop.

In the adjacent municipalities there is a similar public concern with planning. Oak Bay has its problems of apartment regulation and commercial centres; Saanich residents have recurrent confrontations with zoning decisions; Esquimalt likewise has frequent decisions in regard to allocation of this site or that for a specific purpose. These areas, too, need the guidance of an over-all plan for development so that individual, localized and hotly contested quandaries would not so readily arise — and future councils would not find themselves bound by actions which prove contrary to true progress, and very costly to undo.

A Dwindling Evil?

The encouraging report of Harvard researcher John Newmeyer, that heroin addiction is passing, or has passed, its peak in San Francisco, is qualified by critics who suggest the area of research was not broad enough to cover the whole question.

It leaves out of consideration, say the critics, the trend among black addicts, since the Newmeyer studies were largely based on statistics from the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic which serves a disproportionate number of white, middle-class youth.

A significant feature in the report is drawn from the researcher's questioning of heroin users and those who might be drawn into the habit. Newmeyer says drug use is cyclical and more young people now regard heroin as anti-erotic, counter-revolutionary, too expensive and out of fashion. If he is correct in that belief, the trend could be virtually as significant as a new medical breakthrough on treatment.

The best cure is prevention and if the young are actually turning their backs on narcotics, the decline of drug appeal could save hundreds, or thousands, of useful lives.

Rescue for the Skagit Valley

There is heartening news not only in Environment Minister Jack Davis' assertion that the Skagit Valley will escape flooding but also in the confident manner in which he makes it.

The valley, on the southern British Columbia border, was threatened with inundation if the Ross Dam, downstream on the Skagit River, were to be raised to provide additional hydro power for Seattle. The former B.C. government thought this was a good idea, at a compensation price of $35,000 a year. Resources Minister Williston even called for tenders for cutting the timber in the valley, before the deal had been finalized and all questions answered.

Fortunately, the protests of conservationists both in Canada and the United States, and the fact that international complications involved both Ottawa and Washington in the matter, led to delays. Now it appears that Ottawa — and the new B.C. government — are taking a definite, negative stand and that the valley will be saved for recreation.

It may well be that compensation will have to be paid to the Seattle power interests, with the amount to be settled by recourse to the courts. But Canadians are used to buying their country back from foreign owners or controllers. At any reasonable price the Skagit Valley will be well worth it.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

'Hiss and Snarl'

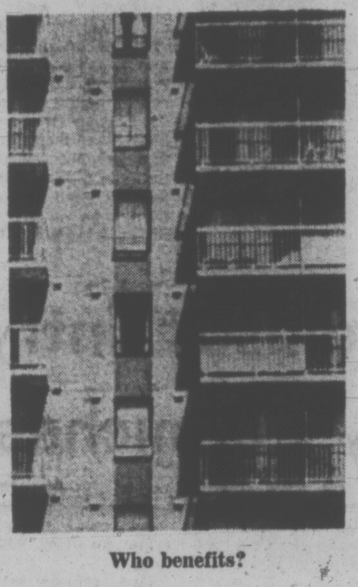
Recent newspaper reports indicate that Mayor Pollen has suggested that Mr. Stewart is not a strict adherent to the philosophy of ethics. On the other hand, it is inferred from the newspaper reports that Mr. Stewart, generally speaking, agrees with Mayor Pollen but states, in effect, that Mayor Pollen should not say such things about him since he, Mayor Pollen, is himself not as well acquainted with the discipline as he might be.

The question of the substance of any of these allegations is irrelevant. From an apolitical point of view, these men have a perfect right to hiss and snarl at each other privately, but when they employ means of public communication as platforms from which to hurl at one another puerile and pointless invectives and generally indulge themselves in intellectual degeneracy, then the worth of both men should be carefully measured. — R. C. Martin, 1523 Regents Place.

Down the Hill

Despite public opinion and lack of planning, and abetted by council's inability to learn from past mistakes, Mace Developments appears to have the go-ahead to build another obsolete highrise. I wonder, does anyone in control ever read about the ill effects highrises have had on other cities, primarily in the field of social interaction? Do they not know the higher rates of crime, neurosis, suicide and plain old loneliness that goes with the human's ability to relate to tall, impersonal, concrete people-traps? Have they read any articles on the principle of "defensible space", do they know there is a direct relationship between the height of the building and the degree of crime it engenders? Is there anyone who enjoys the psychological and physical "fencing" of their environment with such over-lighted tombstones? And by the way, who benefits by such things as the View Street necropolis? Certainly not the public.

Never have I seen succeeding councils bucking the wave of the future with such dogged incomprehension and blaming turn by turn, like the Mad Hatter's tea party, the preceding council. To date we have one super-expensive pool in a park, with attendant miseries like roadside stands and parking lots; one pseudo-inspirational cardboard cut-out look-alike of Toronto's city hall to be built in Miami Modern style; the View Street building, aforementioned; Orchard House and its attendant development designed not only to blot out the public's view of the Olympics, but each other's view as well; and in the background rising and levelling all in its path the three-storey frame apartment house marches on, block by tasteless block, swallowing the land that remains and spitting out parking lots.



Who benefits?

Some not too distant morning the crucial moment will arrive for Victoria and her citizens. After that it will be all downhill. — Thomas R. Palfrey, No. 327-440 Simcoe St.

Hydro Bills

Recently I wrote to B.C. Hydro suggesting that consumers should be billed every other month after the meter has been read. This practice, normal in other provinces, would considerably reduce the costs of paper, envelopes, mailing and cheque charges for both Hydro and its customers and, for Hydro, programming and computer time, both very expensive.

By this saving, Hydro could advertise it was contributing to the anti-pollution drive.

I received a reply, over a photostat signature of Dr. G. M. Shrum, in which one paragraph read: "We live in an age when most people are buying on credit and paying their bills from a very tight budget. If a customer's heating bill for gas in the winter months averages $50 per month and then we add the electric bill there would be many cases where he would be unable to pay an account of $50 plus $50 plus $12 plus $12 equals $124."

Frankly, I don't believe this argument. This is the age of the consumer. If you think B.C. Hydro could become more efficient by billing only every other month, and you are prepared to accept this change, please write to me.

Incidentally, a B.C. Hydro official, who shall be nameless, says that you don't have to pay the interim statement you receive if you don't want to. Just pay the invoice which gives you the actual meter reading. — K. W. Lines, 27 South Turner St.

Nomansland

If we do find it expedient to change the name of our province, for goodness sake let's find something better than the awkward, cumbersome "Canadian Columbia"! In North America the word "Columbia" is associated with the U.S.A., and Columbus never came within thousands of miles of here, so "Canadian Columbia" would be like putting our stamp of approval on the economic and cultural takeover that we are trying (?) to reverse.

How about "Pacicana" (Pacific Canada), with all the a's pronounced as in "calm"? — W. F. Reeves, 3147 Sherman Rd., R.R. 4, Duncan, B.C.

Education

I think it is a good idea to go to Goldstream Park in the spawning season. We have learned many new things. We can see how hard the salmon need to swim to get upstream and the hardships they need to overcome. I think it was very worthwhile. It teaches a lot about nature and the strange things that happen. Many children have never seen chum salmon in the spawning season, fighting to get upstream to lay their eggs. We should encourage more parks like Goldstream to teach youngsters about fish and nature. It would teach us more about the world around us. Goldstream Park is valuable to our education. — William Chan, George Jay Elementary School.

JAMES RESTON

Mr. Kissinger's Problem

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's decision to keep William Rogers as Secretary of State in the second term seems to suggest that Dr. Henry Kissinger will remain in the White House as assistant to the President for national security affairs, but this is not a settled question.

The President has asked him to do so and he has agreed to stay on until the end of the Vietnam negotiations, which could be a life career; but actually he expects a cease-fire within a few weeks at most, and thereafter plans to take a long vacation and decide during that interlude whether to stay or resign.

Most men of power in Washington drive themselves to the point of exhaustion and occasionally vow to go back to the quiet life, but usually the mood passes when they get a little sleep and begin to wonder what the quiet life would be like, assuming there's any such thing these days.

Dulles Conviction

Former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles often talked of going home, but he always managed to persuade himself that the Republic might not survive such a loss. So he stayed on until his health broke, and by the end he didn't know where home was.

Dean Acheson managed to tolerate the law after he left the State Department by ignoring it and writing graceful and witty essays about the more amiable or foolish qualities of great men. After tossing governments, continents and newspaper columnists around for a few years he found it intolerable to waste his time trying to get more money for legal clients who didn't need or deserve it.

Oddly enough, the soldier statesmen of our time, who are supposed to love power more than anybody else, gave it up more gladly than most. Gen. Eisenhower found golf in retirement to be more challenging and perplexing than running the world, which it undoubtedly is; but even though he never learned to putt after over 50 years of unremitting effort, he was happy at the end. So was Gen. Marshall who had the good judgment never to play golf at all.

Bill Rogers, like his predecessor at State, Dean Rusk, has agreed to stay on in the second term, and one can only hope that he doesn't regret that decision as much as Mr. Rusk did. Still, when a President, and particularly an old friend who doesn't specialize in friendship, asks you to stick around, it is hard to put on your hat and go.

Kissinger has a more awkward problem. The book publishers are after him, and would probably pay him enough cold cash for his memoirs to establish a university of his own, but he doesn't see how he could write about China, Moscow, Vietnam and all those girls as long as Mr. Nixon is in the White House, and this is probably good judgment, for Mr. Nixon has never liked to be scooped.

HENRY KISSINGER

... nowhere but down

Henry's problem is that he peaked too soon — or too late. If he had discovered China in his twenties or in his thirties, the future would have been easier for him; but he will be fifty next May, and at fifty, a man is a little too old to keep on working the 48-hour day and a little too young to trade the White House for the Harvard yard.

He has another problem. He has the gift of looking at problems objectively, including the problem of himself and his own role in the Federal establishment. It is a rare gift around here. He has not only defined the foreign policy problems for Presidential decision, but gradually and against his original intention, exercised independent judgment and influence over decisions when he was asked.

Moreover, he has been the principal briefer, negotiator and spokesman in his field. He has covered more ground in the last four seasons than Larry Brown, and travelled the world in airplanes fitted out like the board room of the Chase Manhattan Bank. But he is just scholar enough to keep wondering what kind of government this is that would give a professor like him a job like this.

Beyond His Brief

Especially, since he is not a great believer in personal diplomacy, or centralized policy-making shielded from questioning by executive privilege. Lately, he has been involving the State Department more and more in the Vietnam negotiations and has been rewarded for his pains by being charged with going beyond his brief in the Paris talks and falling into pitfalls from which he had to be rescued by the State Department pros. It's not true, but that's what happens when you begin to get a little democracy into diplomacy.

No doubt Henry will manage to overcome his doubts when he thinks about the alternatives of writing books, teaching Tallyrand to skeptical students, and riding up to New York on the shuttle to attend teas at the Council on Foreign Relations. The facts are fairly plain: from here on out he has nowhere to go but down. He might just leave and he is clearly pondering the question. But as the man said: How do you keep 'em down on the farm after they've seen Peking?

Open Doors on Musty Rooms

Many long-standing thought patterns have been challenged in the past decade and many doors and windows opened onto musty rooms that had either gone unnoticed or had been shunned as forbidden territory. The process has been agonizingly slow, however, in comparison with the orbital speed with which technology is changing our life patterns. Indeed, we are being warned that if we do not rev up our thinking we may be destroyed by that technology, so apparently there are other musty rooms which ought to be lighted and ventilated.

Science and technology forged ahead because they applied logic to their special problems. Yes, and boldness, too, because they allowed few rooms to remain closed. We like to think we are applying equal logic to human affairs.

We may be, in the rooms we are using, but there are too many that we aren't. They contain attitudes that have been with us so long we have come to consider them as beyond dispute. We excuse ourselves by saying that human affairs are too emotion-packed, that they involve too many variables and "x" unknowns to be as open to logic as, say, the physical sciences.

For several years this writer has been looking for some central point from which to view the labyrinth and has settled for the human Individual. He has drawn up an experimental list of the basic demands of the Individual's body, his mind and his spirit. Of each we should be able to ask, "How is it being met today and what are the possibilities for the future?"

In the process, it should be possible to open some of those doors and windows for a critical examination of the social and economic thought patterns which our forefathers created and which we accept out of habit — things like theories, systems, principles, taboos, loyalties and prejudices. Of each we should ask, "To what extent is it helping or hindering him today?" Some may be just as sound as they ever were; others may be open to question because of the changes technology has made in our life patterns.

As that daring window-opener Marshall McLuhan has said, "Value judgments have been allowed to create a moral fog around technological changes such as renders understanding impossible."

Anyway, my study has reached a point where it is beyond the scope of any one person. Dialogue has become essential, and for this reason I should like to gather a small group of reasonably literate, alert people to informally kick these ideas around, come the New Year. The group would have only two purposes: first, to set the Individual and his needs alongside old and new thought patterns so they can be related and compared; second, to open doors with a boldness to match that of the business community and its technologists (who have not even hesitated to bulldoze walls if it suited their purposes).

A high degree, perhaps an impossible degree of objectivity is called for. The group would be neither a place for any existing "ism" to be promoted nor one for any new "ism" to be developed. I cannot see it as even an action group, except that it might publicize whatever anomalies it is studying.

The writer finds that this approach has given him a fresh outlook on events and more coherence of thought. It might do that for you, too. If you are interested please phone 388-5689 anytime Sunday or any other day before 2:30 p.m. — Pane Pusher.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of December 6, 1912:

TORONTO — Of the naval policy the Star editorially says the whole thing is poor in spirit. It is a splurge where it should have been a policy. It will, when thought over, fail to satisfy Canada and fail to gratify Great Britain. The Admiralty have too much diplomacy to criticize Canada as a bringer of burdens to the parent state, but the British people, when they begin to talk about the Borden burden will not be so diffident.

Untouchable Caste Custom Dies Hard

By LEWIS M. SIMONS
The Washington Post

Tara Chand (right) listens to patriarch of Chulkana Untouchables

CHULKANA, India — In the winding lane of mud huts where Tara Chand lives, the air is heavy with the smell of human faces and cow dung.

Tara Chand and his family are Untouchables. Outcasts from the Hindu social system, their role in this Haryana State village is to clean up the droppings of their fellow villagers and collect dung for use as fuel.

In keeping with their lowly station in life, the Untouchables are forbidden to enter the village temple. They may not draw water from the same well as caste Hindus. No caste Hindu will share a meal with them.

"We are unclean," says an old man of the village, a patriarch of the Untouchables' quarter. "It is because we are dirty that the others will not sit with us."

But Tara Chand is not unclean. At the technical training school he attends in Delhi he wears a white shirt and trousers every day. He does not sweep privies or collect dung. He is studying to be a stenographer in a government department. In his classes he sits alongside other young men from all castes, even Brahmins of the priestly caste. They eat their meals together and sleep together in the same dormitory room.

When he returns to his village as he did one day recently, he argues with the old man, even though the old man is past 70 and represents the Untouchables on the village council and Tara Chand is just 20 and must touch the old man's feet in greeting.

"It is nothing to do with being dirty, father," he says respectfully, his eyes averted from the old man's wrinkled face. "It is because we do not get together and stand up for our rights. The law of the country is with us. I want equal rights for all."

Perhali Devi is embarrassed by her eldest son's arguing with the old man. Yet she is proud, too, and the pride flashes in her eyes for an instant before she tells a visitor, "these are very old customs. No one can change them."

Tara Chand is right about the law. Untouchability was outlawed by the constitution of India in 1950. "The enforcement of any disability arising out of Untouchability shall be an offense punishable in accordance with law," the constitution states.

Small Changes

And his mother is not quite right about the inability to change old customs. Some small change has already come, due mainly to government efforts.

Beginning in 1935, the Untouchables were "scheduled" for special treatment under British rule. The term "Scheduled Castes" became the official government designation for Untouchables. In the last 18 years, the central and state governments have spent nearly $470 million on "special planned programs for the welfare of backward classes," according to the latest report of the social welfare department.

If Tara Chand were living 25 years ago, before India won its independence, he would surely not have gone to school at all. In those days he may have had to ring a bell or shout aloud that he was approaching as he walked along a road — so that Brahmins would not have to look at him or worse, have his shadow fall across them or far worse, be defiled by his clothing brushing them.

Now these things are changed. Tara Chand has friends of all castes. During his village school days, they all sat together in class. They drank water from the same brass tap outside the school.

When Tara Chand returned to Chulkana to visit his mother, he met a young Brahmin who was his friend. They met outside the Hindu temple, which Tara Chand was pointing out to a visitor. The two friends shook hands. They sat down together on the temple stairs and chatted about Tara Chand's course, about Delhi and about the Brahmin boy's inability to get a job.

Move to City

This, too, is a change: that a young Brahmin should be concerned about a job while a young Untouchable receives specialized training and is assured of a government job in a big city.

But that's the catch: the job will have to be in the city where, although every man and woman who cleans toilets and gutters is an Untouchable, there's a chance that anonymity will make possible upward mobility. Tara Chand, if he is to be rid of the curse of untouchability, must stay in the city. In his village — despite his training, his clean, white shirt and trousers, his green nylon socks and black leather sandals, his nodding acquaintance with the English language — he is still an Untouchable.

Yet if he walks just 20 minutes from his village, to the small city of Samalkha, he is no longer known as a Balmiki — a sweeper — one of the 3,000 subcastes in India. There he could sit in any tea stall of his choosing and be served hot, milky tea and chupattis by an upper-caste Hindu.

And if he took a crowded, rickety bus 50 miles down Kipling's storied Grand Trunk Road to Delhi he could, if he were qualified, be hired as a cook or a waiter in a posh hotel restaurant, handling food to be eaten by government ministers, film stars, socialites and tourists.

But not in Chulkana. Here it is as though his caste were printed in big letters across his forehead.

A foreign visitor to Chulkana finds it all but impossible to separate villagers by caste. Walking along the dusty lanes, the visitor passes from one quarter into another without realizing that he's stepped across an unseen line dividing privilege from deprivation.

In Chulkana, the house of the Brahmin and the house of the Untouchable are usually indistinguishable. Most are like Tara Chand's one-room house, made of mud bricks covered with more mud. Inside, the floor is of packed mud hardened with a paste of cow dung and water. Seven brass dishes stand on a narrow shelf alongside a row of painted photographs, one showing Tara Chand's father on his wedding day, in a gorgeous red coat and turban.

There are two beds made of woven rope, a few blankets slung from a ceiling beam and a small mud cabinet where the grain is stored. That's it. Although Perhali Devi did not know her son was coming home, and bringing a visitor, all is clean and neat.

Like their houses, the people of Chulkana look alike too. In a backroad Mississippi hamlet, the poor black is immediately distinguishable from the poor white. But here, color, features, dress and language are all the same and the visitor would have no trouble believing that Tara Chand and the young Brahimin were brothers.

No Escape

In Chulkana and the thousands of other villages where 90 per cent of India's 80 million Untouchables live, everyone is known to everyone else. There is no escaping from caste and all its implications, including the age-old alignment of certain occupations with certain castes. And so those born Untouchables must be the carriers of nightsoil, the removers of carrion, the sweepers of gutters.

For, as every Hindu knows, Untouchables are being punished for sins committed in a prior incarnation.

Caste originated as a means for the conquering fair-skinned Aryans of central Asia to control the darker Dravidians of the subcontinent more than 3,000 years ago. In fact, the Sanskrit word for caste, "varna," means "color."

Since then, the system has been cemented into Indian life by being linked to the Hindu religion. For centuries, Hindus have been taught that the lowest among them have been born to serve their betters and that to aspire to the rightful privileges of another's caste is to sin against the basic tenets of their religion.

This kind of indoctrination has effectively convinced the upper castes that it is their right to maltreat the Untouchables. Furthermore it has convinced the Untouchables of the same thing and kept the thought of revolt against the system far from their minds.

So even Tara Chand, who argues with his elders for equal rights, accedes to the village ways when he returns. Like his mother who collects dung in the fields outside the village and his father who cleans toilets in a government building near the Taj Mahal in Agra, he does not enter the temple; does not drink from "their" well; does not eat with "the others."

"He and I are friends," he says of the Brahmin youth in front of the simple, white washed temple, "but there can be no chance for us to come together for a meal — not in his house."

"If he invited me to his house," says the Brahmin, "I would go. I wouldn't mind eating there. But I could not ask him to visit my house. My parents would get angry."

"All may enter here who love God," says the pundit of the village temple. Sitting in a lotus position beneath a huge peepul tree, sandalwood paste daubed on his forehead and several days' stubble on his chin, the priest sweeps his arm from the dark green water of the bathing tank to the temple. "I am a humble servant of God," he says. "These doors are closed to no one."

But Tara Chand knows better. Even though the constitution and the Untouchability Offenses Act of 1955 forbid the barring of any Hindu from temples and bathing tanks because of caste, no Untouchable of Chulkana would dare enter. "It would cause a lot of trouble," he says.

Learn New Skills

There has been a lot of trouble in some villages lately. And young people like Tara Chand are partly to blame for it. They go to the cities and learn new skills and some return to the villages to practice them.

A boy whose father spent his life disposing of animal corpses becomes an electrician. Under a rural electrificiation program his village receives power, and he decides to return. Because he is the only electrician in the villages, he must enter the houses and even the kitchens of those who can afford electricity.

"This gives them the feeling that there is no difference between castes," says R. D. Sonkar, an official of the social welfare department in New Delhi, "and rightfully so. But this also causes resentment among the upper castes. And there is backlash."

The backlash is seen in the reportedly increasing number of atrocities committed against Untouchables or as Mahatma Gandhi named them, Harijans — "Children of God." Newspapers regularly contain reports of villagers sacrificing a Harijan child to appease an angry god, of a Harijan being thrown into a well or burned alive, of Harijan women being raped by gangs, of their houses being destroyed and their possessions stolen.

In many villages Untouchables are still forbidden from using public roads at the same time as caste Hindus, and barbers will not cut their hair or shave them.

Bonded labor, just slightly better than outright enslavement, is common in many rural villages. Most rural Untouchables are landless and, like Tara Chand's mother, are paid for their services in small amounts of wheat or other grain at harvest time. As a result, they are easy marks for money lenders and frequently end up as bonded laborers in order to work off their debts.

Landlessness, according to many authorities, may be the prime factor in perpetuating the plight of the Untouchables. There is a growing disbelief, even among the lowest of the low, that their fate is predestined, these authorities contend. But because of their utter dependence on landlords, most rural Untouchables are afraid and unable to take positive action.

Dressed in white homespun cotton from his little Congress Party hat to his dhoti, or sarong, his sandals discarded behind a huge desk, Ram admitted that the long-awaited process of land redistribution "has not really yet started"' But, he said, "it is problematical how redistribution will help my people. We are the poorest of the poor. And you cannot farm simply because you are given a piece of marginal quality land."

Government officials involved in the eradication of caste often tend to be overwhelmed by the magnitude of the problem. In a country of 550 million people, all figures tend to be enormous.

Jiwanlal Jairamdas, the secretary of the Harijan Service Association where Tara Chand is getting his stenography training, believes that the caste system is going through a period of transition.

Education the Key

"Education is the key to change," he says. In 1947, at the time of independence, there were 1,500 Untouchables in colleges throughout India, he noted. Today there are 175,000.

In the technical training institute 234 students are taught such skills as carpentry, machine tool operation, tailoring, electrical wiring and stenography, both in Hindi and English. Most of them find work in their fields when they graduate, says Jairamdas.

But what effect do 234 students a year have on the overall problems of the Untouchable community? "Precious little," Jairamdas concedes. "a drop in the ocean. But we must go on trying."

The Legacy Of Language Fanaticism

By ROGER BRUNEAU
Quebec L'Action

Because the French-Canadians have, for a long time, been the victims of the fanaticism of a certain Anglophone element, many of them thought that in emancipating Quebec, the French homeland of Canada, it should turn fanaticism against our English-language compatriots. From this point of view have been born many unrealistic and excessive ideas which advocate forbidding all use of the English language in Quebec, including schools and businesses. To believe those who support this vengeance theory even the teaching of English as a second language should be halted.

Reflection and logic lead us to more realistic and less radical solutions which are more advantageous for our people.

A Quebec where no one learns English as a second language any more would become a ghetto, an enclave isolated, from all points of view, from the rest of the people on the North American continent.

By brutally condemning this language, which two centuries of fanaticism has taught us how to fight — to detest in some cases — we would have broken the cultural, social and economic ties that link us to 200 million Anglophones who surround us, we would have irreparably condemned isolated French communities in other provinces to be subjected to the vengeancy of our adversaries. Such a move would be against all historical logic.

But this regressive thinking only exists in the minds of some narrow-minded persons.

For several years now, more acceptable and modified reasoning has been proposed. All who have set themselves up as leaders dedicated to the defence of French in Quebec have recognized the necessity of English as a second language and the importance of communicating to our children in our schools a working knowledge of this language.

Come Fly Away With Me

By RICHARD J. NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

Pardon me (said the man at the bar) but I notice you're drinking Gilbey's Triple Crown rye, an excellent brand of which it's said that after one shot you think you're Mackenzie King; after two, you think you're the mad King of Bavaria; after three, you think you're the Magi; and after four, they send you home on a camel.

I have a story to tell you, sir, concerning of all things airlines, squarelines, darelines, whatever one might wish to call them. My dear old mother in England recently advised me that she had won a lot of money on the football pools, and I decided I had better hustle over there in case some unscrupulous rogue cheated her out of it before I could cheat her out of it. Accordingly, sir, I made the rounds of the airlines, seeing which would fly me the cheapest.

★ ★ ★

At the first of them, I was told, "You'll adore flying Blissair. As each passenger boards our 747 he gets a great big kiss from the stewardess and a hearty handshake from the captain: If he's from Ottawa, of course, it's the other way round. As the plane takes off, each male passenger gets a bottle of champagne, which he can use to zonk the kid who's whining and nattering in the seat beside him. Each female passenger gets a bottle of Channel No. 11, and that's not all, such food as you would never believe — mushroom umlauts, candied fruits, baked Alaskans, Arctic charwomen, pickled beasts, New Brunswick fuddleheads, Hungarian goulash made out of real Hungarian ghouls, crafty cheese, smoked heels, chile con Carnaby, Salisbury mistake, and a consomme devoutly to be wished."

I replied, "Look, Buster, for all I know you've got a flying version of Maxim's or Antoine's or the snack bar in the Eglinton subway station. What I want is the cheapest flight to London I can get." He said it was $222 on a 22-45-day excursion, and I departed thence, cursing and muttering.

At the next airline office, I was told, "You are wise to fly with Air Chance. Our seats are the most comfortable ever made in the history of the world, and will instantly adapt themselves to any physical oddity, such as having three legs or a 60-inch hip measurement. Passengers using them often fall into a catatonic trance similar to that of a community college student, and the captain must snap them out of it by flying upside down. I might add, sir, that the fabric used in these chairs is hand-woven by Tibetan peasants, using only the finest wool from the backs of Abominable Snowmen."

I snarled at him. "Forget about it, just tell me how much the flipping ticket will cost." He quoted me the same $222 rate as Blissair. At my third airline counter, I was told, "Practical people fly with Siberia, on account it's as safe as the Gardenia Expressway at 5 p.m. or the Doom Valley Parkway on a Friday night or a pedestrian crosswalk at any time. Our captains have all been flying since the Wright Brothers invented the squareplane, though naturally we pension them off at 95." I said to hell with safety, and demanded the price, and got that $222 figure all over again.

The male clerk at SOS winked heavily at me as he said, "Flying SOS is a fun trip. Our stewardesses are chosen not simply for their delightful faces and figures, but also — how shall I put it? — for their friendly and helpful attitude toward unattached males. Would you believe, sir — " and he started whispering such things in my ear as to make me blush scarlet, whereat he concluded, "Who knows what deviltry takes place 36,000 feet over Kipper's Flippers, Newfoundland? Only SOS knows," and he let out an evil cackle.

Once again, I had to press him for the price, and once again was told $222. In desperation, I finally went to Saltina, which informed me, "The giant movie screen in our 747 has five pictures showing on it simultaneously and at once, such as Walt Disney, Doris Day, Shirley Temple, Rudolph Valentino, and Lassie. There are seven sound-tracks you can switch on, which makes for interesting permutations and combinations, e.g., watching That Darned Cat while listening to Robert Stanfield read the BNA Act backwards. In French, yet."

Once again, the price was $222, and that, sir, is why I'm sitting at this bar, drinking and thinking. Let me tell you what I've come up with. I'll buy a 747, and rip out everything. Then I'll pack the passengers in like so many sides of meat, piled on top of each other. No food, no booze, no movies, no concerts, and no stewardesses. No magazines, no chairs, no anything, just a horrible flight at the reasonable price of $100. Yes, I'd rip those out as well; and if anyone protested, the co-pilot would come back and slug her with a baseball bat, saying, "Just hang on there, madam, hang on; we'll be coming down at London in four and a half hours."

Saanich Park Report Disturbs Council

Three Saanich aldermen expressed concern Tuesday at the number of parks recommended for "reserve status" by planner Tom Loney.

Ald. Ed Lum, chairman of the parks committee, said he is "quite disturbed" by Loney's report in which he recommends that 34 of the municipalities 53 parks be specially reserved.

The reserve classification is a compromise between permanent dedication of parks and the flexible method of merely designating a park by bylaw.

Lum agreed with Ald. William Noel that changing land patterns can affect the status of parks and making parks permanent fixtures is not appropriate.

Lum said a situation could arise where a smaller park might be "consolidated" into a larger one as land use changes.

The loss of flexibility in determining the best use for municipal lands has been a deterrent to park dedication in the past, he said.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he did not oppose park dedication, but he felt a lot of the ones mentioned in Loney's report are "borderline situations."

Ald. Alan Newberry noted some parks obviously will remain so and it was important to dedicate them, he said.

"I think the staff should be congratulated for this report," Newberry said. "At long last we have a clear, detailed report."

The parks committee agreed with the planning committee, which earlier had expressed support for the recommendations, to discuss the report in detail with the parks administrator later.

TRAP DRIVES RATS CRAZY

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Franklin Porath and six associates believe they have built the better mousetrap. This one drives rats crazy.

The transistorized device gives off a high intensity pitch which is unheard by the human ear but "makes any rat within hearing distance wish he were someplace else," Porath said.

Pylon Site Proposed

Victoria's land development committee recommended approval in principle Tuesday of allocating land at Smith's Hill Reservoir for construction of a 75-foot microwave tower needed by B.C. Telephone Co.

The committee asked municipal manager Bill Hooson to explore the advantages of selling the land to the telephone company, at a negotiated price of about $120,000, as opposed to a long-term lease.

Mayor Peter Pollen commented that if the former method were used "we would be selling at today's prices," whereas a 50-year lease adjusted at 10-year intervals could take account of increasing land values.

Aldermen were reluctant to see the land used for that purpose, however, as the site of about 5,000 square feet is located in a recently-established 21-acre park.

LUMP AMONG WEEDS FETCHES $86,000

LONDON — Arthur Davey sold his "work of art" Tuesday, the one he dug up on his farm. He got a record $86,360 for it, and that is only half the tale.

It was in May that Davey, 39, was attacking garden weeds with a hoe when he struck a tiny lump of bronze. He rubbed off a bit of dirt, saw it was the figure of a man less than four inches high, and stuck it in his pocket.

His wife wanted to scrub it in the kitchen sink, but Davey said it was a "work of art" and wouldn't let her. His son tried to swap it with a friend for a toy car, but the friend only had a toy tractor so the deal fell through.

Eventually Davey's brother- Eventually Davey's borther-in-law took the statuette along one day when he was delivering pig swill to the local squire. Lt. Col. John Freeman took one look, and that was that.

Christie's art auction house experts and those from the Victoria and Albert Museum identified the statuette as 12th century French The gilt bronze figure is of St. John the Evangelist. He stands in an attitude of mourning, the left arm holding the folds of a cloak and supporting a gospel.

The experts said it probably was part of a crucifixion group and probably was made in the Meuse region of France.

The price was a world auction record for sculpture earlier than 19th century. The previous record was for a work by Benvennu to Cellini.

"You did a good job," Davey told auctioneer Paul Whitfield after the auction.

School Board Hopefuls Zero In On Curriculum, Ward System

Greater Victoria school board is "working with a massive machine" and the wheels turn very slowly, Trustee Walter Donald said Tuesday.

"I originally ran for the board two years ago because many of the kids I worked with in youth groups were bored and turned off by school," Donald told an all-candidates' meeting at Hillcrest school.

"When I became a trustee I found myself making appointments, transfers, doing salaries, budgets and so on. But I do think one thing we've been able to do is hire the right people, which is one of our important areas of responsibility."

John Duffus said he did not expect to spend less money on the school system, but he felt long-term planning through five-year plans was the best prospect. He said bad teachers should be fired, even if it meant a change in the Public Schools Act. He said there should be no repetition from year-to-year in the curriculum.

UNETHICAL

"It is unethical to pretend to teach a student something he already knows. The student should have the right to sit for an examination, when he feels ready, to obtain credit in any academic course. There are too many drop-outs through boredom."

Incumbent Lavinia Greenwood said the two most important items in the school system were involvement of students and choice.

Choice of schools is a democratic right and we don't have much of it in B.C., but if we can all get together we can change. An "at-large" education system is vital to choice of schools, she said.

"When a school is full, it is full, of course, but we can make the process of switching easier."

PARENTS

"I would like to see lots of involvement of parents. I don't think a ward system or allotting trustees to schools is much good. We must consult parents about movement of students."

"We must study modernization of the elementary curriculum, introducing in particular French and physical education, and we must study the classroom management in elementary schools," Mrs. Greenwood said.

Incumbent Philip Ney said there used to be a time when what you got taught in school was sufficient for later life — "but it's getting to the point where you never graduate. You have to learn all your life, and the crucial thing is to learn how to learn."

METHODS

"The curriculum must be changed so it suits the actual development of children. They have to learn first about themselves, so they must be taught their anatomy and so forth, then they must learn scientific methodology to explore their world."

Mimi Robertson said today's children aren't interested in yesterday's education. "They are bored and tuned out."

BRIGHTER AGE

"I blame this on 20 years of departmental restrictions. I want to be part of the brighter age that is coming."

"We should look into providing a school for children with learning difficulties and consider an occupational program with half-day on-the-job arrangements. There should be body development for young children."

"The good things going on at this school (Hillcrest) are not going on at all schools," Mrs. Robertson said. "I am in favor of renovating schools like Lampson and Victoria High. I suspect they want to build a little box at Esquimalt similar to High Rock which is crumbling after only 25 years. Foolish spending on building is depriving children of little basic niceties like doors on their toilets."

Ted Robbins said he was not a unionist or a professional — "I don't even have a degree. I paid for my own tutoring and managed to gain a reasonable standard of living for myself and family."

"I feel we can get more for our educational dollar. I support proposals for revising the curriculum to better prepare students for entry into the labor market."

"Change need not cost more. New courses arranged in consultation with businessmen can replace old ones in conjunction with businessmen's requirements."

"We should do more for slow learners, but we have to watch the budget. I favor the ward system then if a person wants action they can phone their trustee and get more attention than if they have a choice of nine, although I'm not criticizing the present board."

"If we want more personal atmosphere in the schools this is where to start," Robbins said.

Bill Ross said he attended school board meetings and found them heading to "what has been known as democracy in education."

"I spank my children. I think corporal punishment has a place in the schools. I'll become known as Big Bad Bill for saying this, but I think people agree with it."

"There should be better rapport between the teachers and the administration: this has not been well handled by the board. The Willows principal affair is evidence. I'd like to scrutinize this relationship and see what kind of productive rapport could be brought about."

Roland Zeitz said the dollar was not the real problem because most people did not mind "the extra dollar here and there providing children are getting the education they need to prepare them to take their place in industry and pay their own way."

"People who end up on welfare are not an asset to the country," said Zeitz, a member of the armed forces. "Dollars are better spent on education than later on welfare."

ROLLING STONES FACE FRENCH HEROIN CHARGE

NICE, France (AP) — Rolling Stone Keith Richard and his girl-friend, actress Anita Pallenberg, are being sought on warrants charging infringement of French drug laws, court officials said Tuesday.

The two were named in warrants after they failed to appear voluntarily with the four other Stones—Mick Jagger, Charlie Watts, Bill Wyman and Michael Taylor—before an investigating magistrate Monday. The four Stones and five French youths were charged with heroin usage and provisionally released.

The charge carries only a fine, but a court may also order a cure in a specialized institution.

Court officials said the five local youths were alleged to have provided the Stones with drugs and to have taken part in drug parties at Richard's villa at St. Jean-Cap Ferrat, and on his boat, anchored in Villefranche Bay.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Flax and Thunder Bay rapeseed continued strong on active trading through the close of the commodity exchange today.

The two grains maintained their strong trend with prices as much as eight cents higher on the day.

Vancouver rapeseed and rye, both of which were on a stronger trend through mid-session, lost strength near the close but closed one of two cents higher.

Oats and barley developed a weaker trend after mid-session, closing up to three cents lower.

Tuesday's volume of trade was 4,702,000 bushels of rapeseed, 1,986,000 of rye and 793,000 of flax.

Information Needed

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of the first Japanese stock brokerage to be licensed in Canada says his company decided to set up a subsidiary here because of complaints he received from both Japanese and Canadian institutional investors.

"Canadian companies were willing to invest in Japanese securities and Japanese funds were available for investments in Canada but nobody was there to provide the required information to investors," Hajime Onada, president of Yamaichi International Ltd., said in an interview.

Yamaichi International was granted an investment dealers' permit by the Quebec Securities Commission last week.

The securities commission has limited Yamaichi to a $300,000 initial capitalization, a staff of 20, half of whom must not come from other brokers.

The company still has to receive official authorization from Japan's ministery of finance before opening its Montreal office.

Giant Completes First Drilling

Giant Explorations has completed the first drill hole seeking iron and copper on its Nahwitti Lake property, 17 miles west of Port Hardy.

Further drilling is planned.

President L. P. Starck said surface stripping and trenching was also being carried out on a nearby zinc geochemical anomaly which is some 900 feet by 300 feet and open to the west.

No assay reports have been released so far.

Dividend Payments Up

Corporate dividends for the first 11 months of 1972 totalled $1,395 million, a 3.5 per cent increase over the $1,348 million in the same period last year.

One weak spot in the dividend list was the mining sector.

November dividens for major Canadian mines in November totalled $6.8 million, compared with $7.9 million last year and $14.3 million in 1970.

Total November dividends in all sectors was $77.7 million, compared with $72.6 million last November.

November dividends for utilities totalled $9.4 million, compared with $8.4 million last year.

Banks, institutions and trusts declared record Nobember dividends of $32.9 million, compared with $30.1 million in 1971.

Statistics were compiled by Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. of Toronto.

Gold Issues Lead Toronto Up

Led by gold issues, prices at Toronto posted moderate gains in active trading.

Beverage, communication, merchandising and real estate stocks were among sectors of the market with the most gains while construction and material, oil refining, pipeline and trust and loan issues were off slightly.

Advances were well ahead of declines, 267 to 202, while 270 issues remained unchanged.

Stelco was off 1¼ to $37⅛, Slater Walker ¾ to $16, Dominion Foundries ⅞ to $29¾, City Savings and Trust ¾ to $13 and Peoples Credit A ⅞ to $26⅞.

Agra Industries slipped ⅞ to $14, Moore Corp. ⅞ to $50, Scintrex 15 cents to $1.50, Curtiss-Wright 7 cents to 78 cents and Imperial Oil ⅝ to $44⅜.

Iso Mines climbed 15 cents to $2.70 and Pine Point ⅛ to $27¾. Bethlehem was off ½ to $15¾.

New York

New York plodded along today with only minor price changes. Trading was fairly active.

As in Tuesday's session, some investors were cashing in on stocks which have made strong gains recently. Analysts said profit-taking was a normal interlude in the market's long climb.

Northwest Airlines was the volume leader, off ¼ to $39⅛, with a block of 100,000 shares selling at $39. Public Service Engineering and Gas was off ¼ to $25, with 202,200 shares moving at $24¾. Masonite Corp. was down 1 to $64⅛, with 140,000 shares traded at $64.

Gulf was active and ahead ⅛ to $26⅛. Gulf was Tuesday's volume leader as a large secondary offering was sold at $26.

Montreal

Advances outnumbered declines in light trading at Montreal.

Canadian Tire rose 4 to $63, Great West Life 1¼ to $76¼ and Canada and Dominion Sugar 1½ to $26½.

London

Prices were mixed in quiet trading today on the London market.

ICI, Glaxo, Babcock and Wilcox and BSR were firmer but Tube Investment, Guest Keen, P. and O. and Hawker declined.

Car Sales Set Record

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Chrysler (Canada) Ltd. today announced record sales of cars and trucks in November and for the first 11 months of the year.

The announcement follows reports of higher November sales volumes from Ford of Canada, General Motors and American Motors.

Chrysler cars sales last month were 15,579, up 16.1 per cent from last year's November record of 13,424. Truck sales were up 58.9 per cent to a record 2,815.

Totals for the 11-month period were: 151,162 cars, up 15.5 per cent from 130,891 sold in the same period last year and 10.9 per cent higher than the 11-month record of 136,263 set in 1968; 26,729 trucks sold, up 54.9 per cent from the previous record of 17,254 set last year.

Ford reported car and truck sales for the 11-month period of 253,093 vehicles, greater than any other complete year in the company's 68-year history. Its November car sales of 17,625 units also broke a seven-year record for the months.

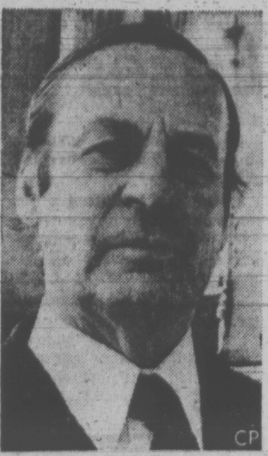
'Americans Doing It for Us'

By AL FORREST

Times Business Editor



ELLIS

. . . against controls

SMALL

. . . he should be silent

B.C. Chamber of Commerce president D. A. L. Tait says Canada does not need wage and price controls — the Americans are doing the job for us.

Tait, in Victoria to present chamber resolutions to the provincial government, said in an interview that U.S. controls had helped to cool the surge of inflation in North America.

"If the U.S. measures fail to work then there is little point in Canada trying to restrain inflation of its own," he said.

The Americans were in a much better position to direct the North American economy than were Canadians and their controls seemed to be having a beneficial effect.

On the other hand, if American controls failed, then there was little hope that Canada, acting alone, could be successful in restraining inflation.

"All we would be doing is duplicating a lot of costly bureaucratic controls for no good purpose," he said.

Tait, a partner of Arthur Andersen and Co., a Vancouver firm of chartered accountants, said he felt a strong concern for persons on fixed incomes but there were better ways of assisting them than by slapping controls on the whole economy.

He said increased grants to pensioners and others on fixed income would be less expensive for the economy than setting up a new bureaucracy to supervise any new system of controls.

He said that although he felt strongly about the matter his comments should be taken as a personal statement because the provincial chamber has not taken a stand in the controversy.

"Wage and price controls are strictly a federal matter and the B.C. chamber is not directly involved," he said.

Among resolutions presented to the provincial cabinet was one eyebrow-raiser urging a study of the potentialities for flood control of a Moran Dam on the Fraser River.

There were no immediate comment from the provincial government although the New Democratic Party has strongly opposed the Moran Dam in past because it could endanger the fishing industry.

Tait said mainland chambers were greatly concerned about the possibility of serious flooding along the Fraser in the spring.

"Floods of the 1948 and 1894 levels are not only possible but inevitable," the chamber told the provincial government.

Tait said he did not expect immediate comment on all the B.C. chamber's 37 pages of resolutions but hoped the provincial government would respond soon on the question of flood control.

"If we get no commitment soon, we will raise the issue again at our spring meeting in Kamloops. Hopefully it will not be too late by them," Tait said.

Government study of the chamber resolutions was hindered by the change in government following the Aug. 30 election.

The chamber originally presented the resolutions to the Social Credit government this summer and the report was then turned over to the incoming government after it was sworn in on Sept. 15.

"We realize the new government has only had a short time to study these matters so we are not pressing too hard," Tait said.

However, some of the problems were quite urgent and he was hopeful of a response within a reasonable period of time.

Local Chamber Protests National President's View

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today protested the actions of national chamber president John Ellis who has spoken out against wage and price controls in a series of recent speeches in eastern Canada.

Chamber manager Brian Small said the speeches came at a time when local branches of the chamber were responding to a nation-wide questionnaire on the issue.

The questionnaire was organized by the national chamber executive and was to be completed and in the mail on Tuesday.

Results are to be sent to the national meeting of the chamber board of directors for decision on Dec. 18.

Small said the Victoria chamber feels the national president should have been silent on the issue while the vote was being conducted.

The national questionnaire was a response to a resolution from the Victoria chamber urging the national body to favor government controls.

The national executive decided to take a national poll of its branches before coming to a decision.

Victoria chamber has argued that temporary wage and price controls should be implemented to cool the pressures of inflation.

The national chamber's stance has been that controls should be brought in only in time of crisis — and the Victoria chamber argues that the crisis is already here.

Ellis, vice-president of the Bank of Montreal in Vancouver, said controls are not needed at this time and, instead, called for a system of increased government tax incentives to spur production and ease unemployment.

Chamber manager Small phoned the national chamber office in Montreal to protest the speeches by Ellis while the questionnaire was being conducted.

"YACHTSMEN"!

Whether your "craft" is 12' or 50' put yourself in the picture in this contemporary seafront home. As you sit in front of a cheery fire in the 20'x30' combination living dining area, you can overlook your "vessel" moored below in a snug cove with over 100' of private dock offering year round moorage. Your wife will enjoy the sea views from each room and appreciate the luxury of walnut panelled cabinets and a well-equipped kitchen with Tappan range, refrigerator, dishwasher and garborator and a unique chopping counter and a labour saving closet of kitchen accessories.

Awake with the sun and the sea from a memorable master bedroom with luxurious bathroom ensuite. Whether your space needs are large or small, this flexible home of two levels enables a minimum amount of work for a couple needing only the main floor, yet there is a lower level luxuriously carpetted for family guests or recreational hobbies. Two bathrooms on the main floor and two down. The lot topography enables a level approach to both floors.

A double carport, large blacktop area for parking. At the end of a winding evergreen treed country lane, the house nestles in the site of almost an acre with a little less 200' of sheltered waterfront. Secluded but not isolated, only 7 minutes from ferries, 10 minutes from Safeway shopping, schools, international airport and golf courses and 30 minutes from tea at the Empress or a steak at Hy's. A property with private dock is practically irreplacable and this is a rare opportunity for you to keep your boat at your own property.

A fascinating environment in winter where you can watch the cormorants, ducks and an occasional seal at play and in Spring and Summer — the perfect cruising base where a passing parade of craft create an ever-changing vista as they explore this unexcelled Gulf Island cruising area of the Pacific coast. If you like the sea and cruising you will want this home. Ask your accountant to justify it for you by explaining the advantages of a substantial investment in a principal residence.

CAPITAL SPENDING TO HIT RECORD LEVEL

HAMILTON (CP) — James W. Kerr, chairman of Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., said Tuesday Canada should enjoy a relatively high level of business activity in 1973.

Speaking to the Hamilton and District Chamber of Commerce, Kerr said it seems probable that capital expenditures for expansion of most types of industrial facilities will reach record proportions in 1973.

"There are, however, always some clouds and squalls in the economic weather forecast, and certainly unemployment and inflation will continue to be significant problems during 1973.

"But is appears that the gross national product will rise to about $114 billion — up from the anticipated $103 billion of 1972 — or up about 10½ per cent."

To combat inflation, Kerr said there will have to be a considerable tightening of monetary and fiscal policies "and possibly some form of government control."

Bowater Chief Resigns Post

LONDON (CP) — James Martin Ritchie has decided to resign as chairman and chief executive of Bowater Corp. Ltd., the world's biggest newsprint producer with large holdings in Newfoundland.

Ritchie, 55, said in a statement Tuesday he has decided to step down next February, feeling that his 16-year role in Bowater has been completed following the recent merger with Ralli International Ltd., a major commodity-trading organization.

"You are going to hear more about Ritchie in business," he said in an interview when asked what new ventures he may be planning.

He described his resignation as "a self-inflicted wound" but felt that this was the right time for his decision since he has brought "the Bowater ship safely into harbor."

Expected to succeed Ritchie is the former head of Ralli, Malcolm Horsman, 39, of Birmingham, now a Bowater vice-chairman.

Ritchie said he is certain the merger will not affect Bowater's North American holdings, including those in Corner Brock, Nfld., where a half-interest in the mill was recently sold to Kruger Pulp and Paper Ltd. of Montreal.

Tanker Fleets In Canada Grow

TORONTO (CP) — Several new oil refineries in Eastern Canada have led to an increase in domestic tanker fleets—one of the few growth areas in the Canadian marine picture.

Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto, largest oil company operating in Canada, also has the largest fleet—eight ships of 300 to 9,000 tons and three barges. Another 12,600-ton tanker is under construction at Port Weller Dry Dock Ltd.

Shell Canada Ltd., another Toronto-based company, has five small Canadian vessels and an ocean-going Bermuda-registered ship of 19,750 tons.

All major oil companies charter capacity on their tankers and both major independent Canadian tanker operations—Hall Corp. Shipping (1969) Ltd. of Montreal and Branch Lines Ltd. of Sorel, Que.—have been adding to their fleets.

Hall has already added three ships to its fleet of 10 this year.

"We are always looking at the market for new ships," said Alex Pullin, Hall's president. "We've got a lot of old ships and we've got to replace them.

GROWTH WILL CONTINUE

"I think we would continue to grow as demand grows. There is talk of a new terminal at Gros Cacouna (on the St. Lawrence about 150 miles east of Quebec City). This could develop new refineries because they could get raw material at a reasonable price."

Branch Lines has been adding to its fleet on speculation but additional capacity was put to use as soon as it was available. Five of the company's nine tankers have been built since 1966.

Bruno Desjardins, a Montreal lawyer associated with the management of Branch Lines, says pipelines are not practical in large areas of Canada that can be served better by water.

But, he adds, "even that creates a problem because all ports are not accessible to large tankers."

"We believe that sooner or later we will be able to serve all Eastern Canadian ports all year round."

Almost all Branch Lines' tankers have been ice strengthened to make some winter ports accessible.

A 10th ship for Branch Lines is being completed at the Sorel shipyard and the company is considering ordering two more.

Gloom Mood Eases

TORONTO (CP) —Douglas D. Peters, vice-president and chief economist of the Toronto Dominion Bank, predicted Tuesday that despite earlier gloomy predictions, 1973 will be a year of "substantial, real economic growth."

Speaking to the export forum of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, he said the restrictive effect of the government's tax reform policy had slowed growth during the third quarter of 1972 and might be a major factor in 1973.

He said the effect of the government policy was obscured earlier in the year by rebates.

In 1973, one of the critical elements would be the effect of the new tax system.

"Not only will higher government revenues be generated by the new rates on much higher incomes, but taxes on capital gains will also be paid for the first time in January."

Peters said in light of the drag the new tax policy is creating on the economy, one option open to the government is a cut in personal income taxes.

He said such a cut would increase consumer spending and offset some of the tax payments.

Peters also predicted a 12.5 per cent growth in exports in 1973 and a 15 per cent increase in business investment.

He believes the monetary policy will continue to encourage a decline in the value of the Canadian dollar and said this would augment rather than restrain growth.

Drug Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Allan Dunn, 20, of Vancouver, Linda K. Hasser, 18, also of Vancouver, and Kenneth Hartman, 17, of Quesnel, were arrested on a charge of trafficking in the drug MDA at a rock concert here.

West Leather Firms Claim Closures Near

WINNIPEG (CP) — Spiralling world leather prices are threatening the survival of some Manitoba leather goods manufacturers.

At least two companies situated in Winnipeg have indicated the continuing upward trend of prices could bring about their closure.

Aron S. Yukelis, president of Winnipeg Leather Goods Manufacturing Ltd., said, "if prices keep going up we may have to go out of business."

"Prices are going up everywhere, as much as 45 per cent in the last six months and it is forecast this will continue."

A shortage of animals and hides is the reason given for the increasing prices throughout the world, and Mr. Yuelis said an expanding European market also is aggravating the North American shortage.

The high prices of leather goods could prompt some European companies to sell their products in Canada at prices which the Canadian companies could not match.

CAN'T COMPETE

"If this happens there would be a very good chance we would have to liquidate. We couldn't compete because we have higher labor costs."

Lawrence Fields, plant service manager of Greb Shoes Ltd., said the high prices are prevalent everywhere and there is no sign of a stoppage.

He said leather that cost about 53 cents a square foot last December now costs 96 cents to $1.05 a square foot.

"There is a serious shortage of hides that is making the prices go up.

"Some claim it is because no hides are coming out of Argentina and there are stories about Russia buying all the hides, but I can't sort fact from rumor there."

Mr. Fields said there should "be a stabilizing factor anytime now. It is impossible for prices to keep going up as they have been—if it does the small tanners are going to go out of business."

CONSUMER PAYS

The end result of that would be higher prices to the consumer which would soon make "buying a pair of leather shoes like buying a fur coat."

That situation would force manufacturers to look for other fabrics which would open the door for low cost imports and "that would be the end of the shoe business here."

C. S. Riley, president of Dominion Tanners Ltd., said the price of leather has been stable for the last 25 years but has now made "too rapid a jump and caused confusion in the industry.

"When leather goes up in prices, man-made alternate materials will be used and this could hurt the tanning industry.

"But as alternate materials are used more, the demand for leather will decrease and the price will go down."

Nudie Battle Rages

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's topless-bottomless entertainment industry is girding for a battle over an anti-nudity ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court's decision gives state liquor authorities the power to begin enforcing regulations against topless waitresses and topless-bottomless entertainers.

Peter Sexton, deputy director of the California department of alcoholic beverage control, said topless-only dancers still are allowed if the entertainer stays at least six feet away from the nearest customer on a stage at least 18 inches high. Topless waitresses, said Sexton, are out.

"Nude entertainment per se is on its way out," Sexton added. The 6-to-3 Supreme Court ruling said that states can shut down bars that feature nude dancers and other "bacchanalian revelries on grounds that First Amendment freedom does not go beyond books and movies to "gross sexuality" in public."

"Girls will have to wear more clothes on the stage than they do when they come to work," complained Walter Robson, owner of a nude bar in Los Angeles.

Edward Kirby, director of the state department of alcoholic beverage control, said the ruling will affect all other states, too. It was issued Tuesday in a California case.

PREDICTS STRUGGLE

Nudie-bar owner Tammy Heath said there is going to be a struggle if Kirby's department starts moving to revoke liquor licences on the basis of the type of entertainment offered.

"They've got one hell of a fight on their hands," she said.

Sexton says his department is planning an immediate statewide drive to lift liquor licences of nude bars or bars that permit sex acts ranging from intercourse to flagellation or that display genitalia—whether in the flesh or on film.

"We intend to press it to the letter of the law," Sexton said.

"There will be no holding back. Things were getting pretty flagrant."

Carol Doda, the statuesque blonde who pioneered topless dancing in San Francisco's North Beach area in 1964, said nudie bars may quit serving alcoholic beverages to avoid coming under jurisdiction of the state's liquor licensing agency.

"I think the whole thing's ridiculous," Miss Doda said. If the nudie night clubs lose their liquor licences, she added, "we'll serve fruit juice and nuts."

No Comment On Her Life With Hughes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The veil of secrecy which shields billionaire Howard Hughes will not be lifted by the woman who was married to him for 14 years, actress Jean Peters.

"My life with Howard Hughes was and shall remain a matter on which I will have no comment," Miss Peters told a news conference Tuesday.

The slender brunette who divorced Hughes in 1971 called the conference to announce her return to acting in Winesburg, Ohio, a Hollywood Television Theatre production based on the Sherwood Anderson book. It will be broadcast on the Public Broadcasting Network March 5, 1973.

"Anyone who has known Mr. Hughes and likes him," she said, "is aware that he doesn't seek publicity." She said she would respect his wishes.

'Speed' Use Admitted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Max Jacobson said Tuesday it was true he had injected some of his patients with solutions containing amphetamine but in small doses and "in conjunction with other therapeutic agents."

In a copyrighted story Monday, the New York Times said Jacobson, 72, has for many years injected the fluids known as "speed," in some of his patients.

Jacobson said the majority of his patients were not treated with amphetamine.

"It is true, that for some of my patients, at some times I used small quantities, in conjunction with other therapeutic agents, as hundreds of doctors have been doing for many years," he said.

"This is because, in over 40 years of medical practice, I have satisfied myself, in small amounts and close supervision, amphetamine can be a valuable tool in a doctor's hand. I am speaking here of dosages a good deal lower than those prescribed in the so-called weight reduction pills.

"The New York Times is apparently disagreeing with my professional judgment on this point. In fairness to its readers, the paper should let us examine its evidence for concluding as it apparently does that with two exceptions, the use of amphetamines is at all times and for all patients to be condemned," he said.

"If all drugs which are being abused by "unqualified users" would be removed containing amphetamine, from medical practice, therapy would be set back at least 100 years."

The Times said Jacobson's patients included the late president John F. Kennedy and his wife—although it was not known whether they had ever received any injections with amphetamine.

Other Jacobson patients, the Times said, were Truman Capote, Cecil B. DeMille, Eddie Fisher, Alan Jay Lerner, Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, Otto Preminger, Emilio Pucci, Anthony Quinn and Tennessee Williams.

The Times said Jacobson was one of a group of New York physicians who prescribed and administered amphetamines "not to treat disease, but to boost the mood of healthy patients."

SATURDAY RECEPTION FOR AUTHOR

President of the Canadian Authors Association, Cmdr. C. H. Little of Ottawa, will arrive in Victoria Saturday to attend a reception in his honor at 7 p.m. in Goodacre Towers.

Little, Canada's director of naval intelligence during the latter years of the Second World War, will stay at the Empress Hotel for the weekend.

It was incorrectly reported in the Times Tuesday that Little would speak at the Empress.

Second Time Wed

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Aye Aye Thant, daughter of U Thant, former secretary general of the United Nations, was remarried Tuesday to her husband, Dr. Tyn Myint U, in a civil ceremony. Lawyer George Halpern, representing the couple, declined to say why the ceremony took place. The two, who have three children, were married in a Burmese embassy in 1960 where no U.S. state licence was required. It was learned, however, that because Thant and his family no longer have diplomatic status here, a wedding registered under New York law was advisable for technical legal reasons.

No One Wants Women

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Sons of Freedom Doukhobor women blamed for fires in Shaughnessy hospital here in the past two weeks were moved back to the federal prison at Matsqui.

"Shaughnessy must be having a party," said Dr. John Gillies, acting medical director of the regional medical centre at Matsqui but he added the women weren't particularly welcome at Matsqui either.

The centre, a psychiatric treatment institution for male lawbreakers, is not designed for the women, who are serving prison terms for arson and parole violation. Gillies said the women are psychiatrically normal.

Two fires were set in the past week at Shaughnessy, the second after all flammable material, except the mattresses, was removed. The second fire involved the mattresses.

The three, Mary Astaforoff, Vera Posnikoff and Polly Chernoff, were sent to Shaugnessy after staging a hunger fast at Matsqui.

Acquitted

NE WWESTMINSTER (CP) — Sergit Sangha, 21 of New Westminster, has been acquitted on a charge of attempted murder and a second charge of assault with intent to maim or disfigure. His six-month-old nephew, Rangit Sangha, was attacked April 7 and is now blind and partially paralyzed.

Drugs Stolen

KELOWNA (CP) — RCMP report controlled drugs valued at between $3,000 and $4,000 were stolen from Westbank Pharmacy. A spokesman said no arrests had been made.

Sports 'Charade'

KELOWNA (CP) — Keith Maltman, Kelowna recreation superintendent, has been reaffirmed by city council as its appointee as a chairman of the British Columbia Festival of Sports. Maltman's appointment had been opposed, partly because of his statement that the festival is "one of the finest sport charades perpetuated by the long-suffering taxpayer's tax dollars."

Pair Safe

HUDSON HOPE (CP) — Barry Cornell, 40, and Ken Eastman, 21, arrived here safely Tuesday after being overdue on a 180-mile trip from Hudson Hope to Mackenzie on Williston Lake aboard the 46-foot tug Cedar Champ. The two men said the tug had developed engine trouble in galeforce winds and they had sought shelter in a bay.

Armed Robbery

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man armed with a hunting knife forced the manager of the Guilly Market in Burnaby to hand over $175. RCMP said the robber made Mark Kwok, 35, empty the cash register after chasing him into his living premises behind the store.

No Blockade

SALMON ARM (CP) — A threatened blockade of the Trans-Canada Highway by members of the Neskonlith Indian band failed to materialize. Chief Joe Manuel had said band members would blockade the highway if arrangements were not made to maintain roads on the reserve. No spokesmen were available to comment on the cancellation.

RCMP Dismissal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dale Featherstone, 29, has been dismissed from the RCMP following his conviction Oct. 23 on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident here.

Assistant commissioner Gordon Cunningham, officer in charge of the force in British Columbia, said that the former University of B.C. detachment constable had been dismissed as a direct result of the incident which followed a car crash June 25.

Arsonist

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lighted newspaper was stuffed through the mail slot in the front door of the provincial fire marshall's office in Vancouver. The fire did minor damage to the floor tiles.

Trail Probe

TRAIL (CP) — Health Minister Dennis Cocke has ordered an investigation into charges of health hazards in the zinc tank room at Cominco Ltd.'s plant. He said findings will be reported to him and provincial Labor Minister William King before any action is taken.

'Never Again' —Farmer

LINDBROOK, Alta., (CP) — Al Kempf accepted condolences at his acreage about 35 miles east of Edmonton with a sad shrug of resignation Tuesday.

The night before he'd watched helplessly as his entire pig-farming operation was wiped out by fire — a loss estimated at $35,000.

"This is the second time," he said glumly.

Four years ago, in another blaze, Kempf, 55, lost his first barn and 365 pigs almost ready for market.

Despite being insured for only a quarter of the $40,000 loss, he started again. This time he took out a full insurance policy.

However, with merely a tangled mass of metal and the charred remains of more than 200 pigs to show from 7½ years of pig-farming, Kempf said he was definitely through with the business.

"I've spent so much money I could kill myself. I'm all finished now."

His insurance policy says he must rebuild to claim full payment for the loss, but Kempf said: "I'll never build up again."

Farm Policy Bared

LAC DU BONNET, Man. (CP) — Liberal Leader I. H. Asper Tuesday outlined his party's farm policy for the next provincial election.

Speaking to a meeting of the Lac Du Bonnet Liberal Association, Asper said the policy will include: abolition of long distance telephone rates within the province; introduction of a system of economic expansion grants for agricultural diversification and expansion; a system to supervise foreign ownership of Manitoba farm lands as well as land bank program, and relocation of the department of agriculture outside Winnipeg.

Facility Opened

SASKATOON (CP) — A $1.1-million therapeutic radiology facility was opened at the University of Saskatchewan Hospital Monday by Walter Smishek, Saskatchewan's health minister.

The facility has a betatron unit for treatment of deep-seated cancer. The high-energy radiation machine is capable of providing electron beams of up to 42 million volts. It was built in Germany and is the only unit of its kind in Canada.

Action Dropped

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Teachers Society announced Tuesday it has postponed any further action on strike option legislation for teachers.

In a news release, the society said the majority of division associations in the province have opposed any further action on resolutions presented at the society's annual meeting in March.

No Plans for Union

WINNIPEG (CP) — William Morton, president of the Manitoba Association of Crown Attorneys, said Tuesday the provincal Crown attorneys are negotiating salary increases individually without plans for a union.

Morton said each attorney negotiates his salary with senior management personnel and their agreement then goes to the cabinet management committee for final approval.

The president of the newly-formed association denied a weekend report that the Crown attorneys were attempting to form a union after withdrawing from the Manitoba Government Employees Association, their official bargaining agent.

Charters Denied

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government has denied private club charters to two homosexual groups because it doesn't want to encourage the proliferation of homosexuality, Attorney-General A. H. Mackling said Tuesday.

The attorney-general said in an interview he doesn't believe homosexuals should be "hounded and pilloried," but that the government doesn't want to encourage homosexuality as a social norm.

"Our concern is that such groups ought not to be clothed with the same rights and respectability as other groups," Mackling said.

Defence for an Addict —Some Like It Louder

I was going to say that there ought to be a law, though perhaps we've too many laws as it is. But, really, isn't it time that the psychiatrists of the world confined their business to the couch and stopped rushing into print with theories to explain everything that strikes them as abnormal? Yes, Jack, it is.

Seems you can't do anything these days that's a little different without some over-articulate shrink issuing a statement in the public prints to classify you as a neurotic, maladjusted or warped in your little psyche.

If you happen to be one of those gents with a lot of turbulence in your life and cherish it, if you get those big ups and downs, go for lonely walks (introversion) or whistle aloud (extroversion) or do almost anything out of the ordinary, anything a turnip wouldn't do, you may find a ready opinion that you're not altogether right up here.

More and more you meet people who have become sort of self-taught, do-it-yourself home psychiatrists, people who are dedicating their lives to suppressing perfectly natural expressions, like screaming occasionally or jumping up and down. They've so many emotions corked up inside them they're about ready to bust.

I'm on this subject today because at least a dozen people have been looking at me with that certain sideways look and, indeed, suggesting right out loud that I'm about ready for a seance at the nearest cranium clinic. My crime is that I happen to like a good deal of volume when I listen to my records, a matter which I once thought was simply a question of personal taste, but now turns out to be far more insidious.

At least that is the cockeyed notion, as you'll have doubtless read, of one Dr. H. Angus Bowles, the eminent Montreal psychiatrist, who has come right out in type with a public denunciation of "stereo addicts." The Canadian Press quotes him as saying the stereo addict is quite liable to be "sadistic, psychotic, vehement, orgiastic and aggressive," these being the kind of words the profession uses at the drop of an id.

★ ★ ★

This fellow is talking about little old me, by the Lord Harry, and I'm not going to take it sitting down. Sitting down is the way I take my jazz — cross-legged, about eight inches from the speakers, a tall tinkling glass within reach, the volume knob turned just as high as it will go without knocking down the walls.

Give me a little early vintage Goodman or Lunceford or any vintage Ellington and plenty of decibels and I'm happy. I like to get right in there with the band, the way you do in Preservation Hall in old New Orleans and if Dr. Bowles doesn't like it he can go away, just as my wife does.

It isn't only jazz, either. You get a piece like Bach's Goldberg Variations with Glenn Gould at the piano and, for my money, the way to hear it is to climb right into the Steinway, which is exactly what stereo lets you do. You can get swallowed alive in that music, lifted by it until you soar, and if that's sadistic or vehement I'm Lawrence Welk.

Oh, I know this Dr. Bowles. I've never met him, but I know him. He's the kind of stereo party-pooper who wants the records way down low so that it will be a kind of background music for the sound of his own interminable voice.

I've met his type. "Turn it down, turn it down," he cries. "A fellow can't think!" So who wants to think when you might be in full, free flight?

You can bet your sweet life that accounts for this vicious attack on the stereo addicts. The doctor has gone skulking home from a record session where he wasn't able to get a word in over the Brubeck and this is his retribution.

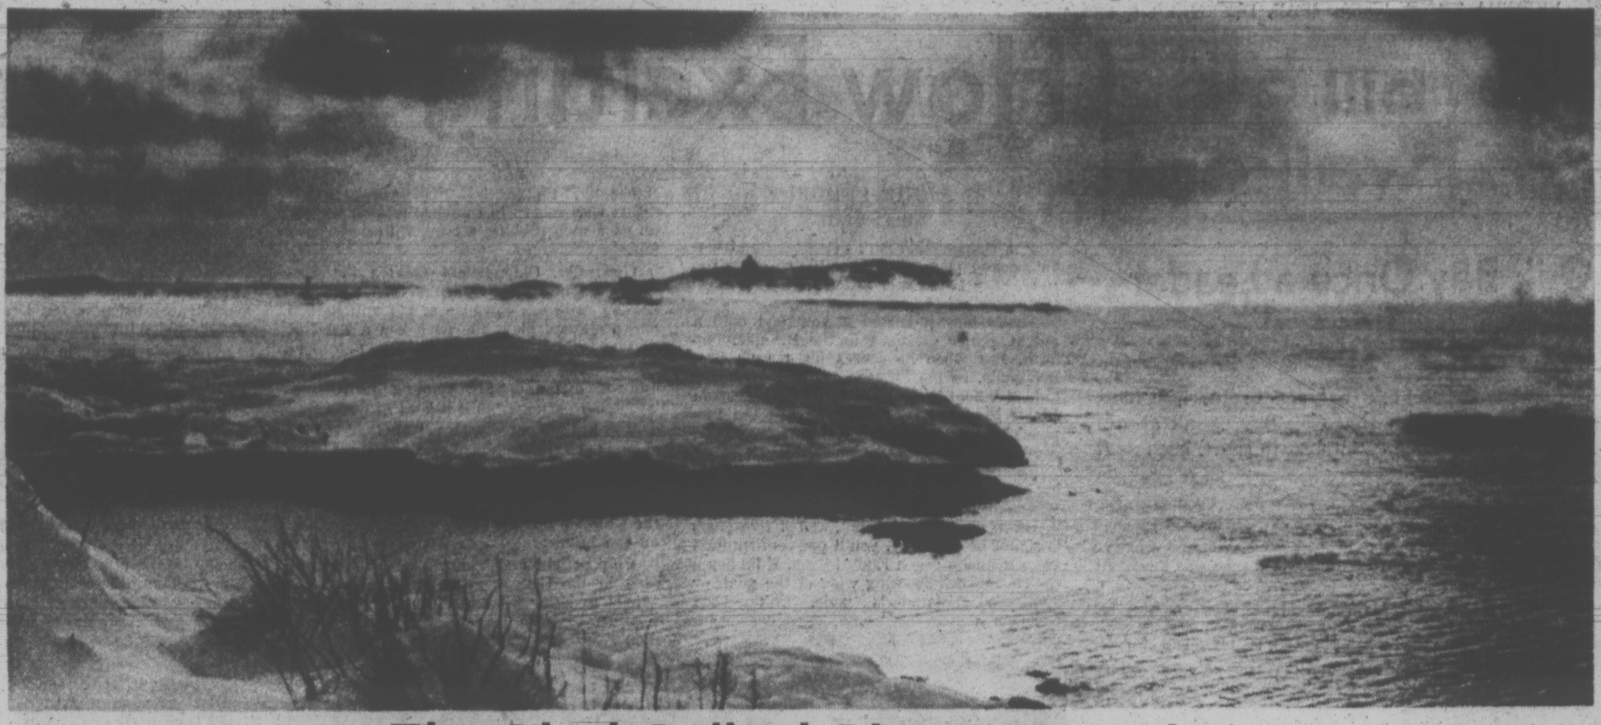
He reminds me of another of his breed who has just about ruined the life of a pal of mine, a great, big, jolly, fat fellow who never gave a second thought to his avoirdupois until a psychiatrist told him it was caused by worry.

"You over-eat because you worry," he told him.

Well, my jolly friend went to pieces. He got a guilt complex about every lemon meringue pie he ate. Every time he sat down at a table he started worrying about what was worrying him which, until then, had been practically nothing.

In no time at all he'd lost 40 pounds, he looked terrible, his wife had gone home to her mother, and another happy man's laughter was stilled.

The real story, of course, was that he liked to eat, just as I like that big sound from the stereo, and the moral of it is simply this: Be yourself if you can bear it.



The Black-Bellied Plovers Loved It

Boiling like the proverbial witch's cauldron, a strange canopy of steam hangs over the sea surrounding Trial Island off Oak Bay. Today's chilled skies made the waters beneath warm by comparison, creating an optical phenomenon rarely seen in the "banana belt" of Canada. Of all the birds that frequent the island sanctuary the most at home today were the black-bellied plovers who thrive in Arctic conditions. Lighthouse keeper Jack Horn and his family put out feed trays for their winged callers and holed up as winds gusted upwards of 45 miles an hour. (George Dufour Photo)

Radio Ad Exploits Claims Alderman

C-FAX Radio is "exploiting the political climate in North Saanich for commercial purposes," North Saanich alderman Paul Grieve said Tuesday.

Grieve was commenting on a newspaper advertisement paid for by C-FAX, which editorializes on the North Saanich Dec. 9 civic elections.

GRIEVE

The quarter-page advertisement, run last week in the Sidney Review, repeats an editorial broadcast recently by C-FAX managing editor Jim Hume.

It says, in part, the issue facing voters in North Saanich is "not planning, developers or subdivision but the gut issue of basic democratic government.

"The voters have to decide," the editorial continues, "whether they want government by a majority council or whether they want government by court order, the type of government they got in 1972."

Of the six men competing for the three seats on council, three, according to the advertisement, are "incumbents firmly committed to the principle of rule by majority" while the other three are "political neophytes, suspected of being Mayor Davis supporters."

"There's a great chance for exploitation in North Saanich," Grieve said, "and C-FAX is using it for commercial purposes."

"It's a biased and uncalled for thing for a radio station to do," aldermanic candidate Richard Kirk commented. "I thought it was supposed to be unbiased especially around election time."

Mayor Trevor Davis called the advertisement "surprising."

"But in this day of degenerate morals," he added, "nothing surprises me."

Clare Copeland, president of C-FAX, said the ad was run "to show the people of North Saanich that we're interested in their affairs."

The editorial was run as an ad, he said, as a way of advertising the fact that C-FAX has an editorial department which gives editorial comment over the air.

"It's right that we take a stand on an issue," Copeland said, "it's part of the area we serve."

Copeland said the opinions expressed in the editorial were "not necessarily the opinions of C-FAX" but rather the opinions of Hume.

Hume said he agreed that printing of the editorial might be construed as an attempt by the radio station to promote one side of the issued.

"It's unfortunate," Hume admitted, "there was no explanation along with the ad.

"The ad was meant to mean," he said, "that C-FAX now runs editorials and here's one about North Saanich."

A spokesman at the Sidney Review said there had been a great deal of reaction to the C-FAX advertisement — with dozens of letters being sent in pro and con.

'Foreign List' Comes to End

Victoria's practice of placing persons with "foreign-sounding" names on a separate voters' list and requiring them to prove voting eligibility, will be stopped.

City clerk and returning officer Morran Waller said Tuesday that in future there will be one voters' list only, and the onus will be on individuals to ensure they are Canadian citizens or British subjects.

Victoria aldermanic candidate Malcolm Anderson, who first raised the issue Nov. 18, filed a complaint last week with the B.C. Human Rights Commission, claiming that the city's method of compiling its voters' list was "discriminatory."

Anderson said the city maintained a separate list of those property owners with East Indian or Chinese names, and insisted that they give proof of citizenship.

However, Waller denied Tuesday that the decision to use only one master list stemmed from any pressure at the provincial level, and said it was purely an "internal" decision.

Judge Blasts Escapes

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The public is becoming increasingly alarmed and angry over escapes from William Head minimum-security prison, Judge William Ostler said in provincial court today.

Ostler commented while sentencing Thomas David Cogley, 23, who escaped from the institution Aug. 17.

"I can't understand these escapes. You seem to think it's a form of parole and it's not. An increasing number of you seem to think you can come and go as you please," said Ostler.

"The concept of William Head is being profoundly misunderstood by a number of convicts and the whole thing is being reviewed," he said.

★ ★ ★

Cogley was sentenced to four months to run consecutively with a two-year sentence imposed July 19, 1971, for possession of stolen property over $200.

Outside court, Colwood RCMP Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said there had been 32 escapes from William Head this year.

National parole officer Dewan Callahan said in an interview, "I don't know what the judges remarks would pertain to specifically" but "if you're going to have a minimum-security institution you're going to have a few guys go over the fence."

"Classification is the key," he said. Parole officers "have to try your best" to decide if a man is a "good risk."

Stopped Cold

More than people are feeling the cold.

The rotating Labatt sign above the brewery on Government, which customarily flashes the time and temperature, is still today.

With one of the chilliest perches in town, oil and grease in the motors which turn the sign congealed and the motors were turned off for fear of burning them out, said general manager Ken McNamara.

Time and temperature will stand still atop the brewery until the lubricants can be replaced with a thinner variety.

Ambulance Standards Planned in New Law

Health Minister Dennis Cocke announced today that he plans to introduce a bill into the winter session of the legislature which will permit the government to set standards for ambulance services provided in the province.

Cocke made the announcement by press release from his office.

He said a number of provinces in the country now control the quality of care provided by ambulance operators and are able to specify the minimum training, equipment and first aid supplies to be used by ambulances and their operators.

B.C. does not now have the power to specify such conditions, Cocke said, adding that the bill is intended to make this possible.

Regulations setting minimum standards will not be passed until officials of Cocke's department have consulted with the B.C. Medical Association, ambulance operators, municipal authorities and interested citizens' groups, he said.

In the Capital district, municipalities depend on a combination of public and private ambulance services as well as some volunteer crews.

Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of council's health committee, said the proposed legislation is a great idea provided it does not create a hardship for those areas now served by volunteer ambulance crews.

The provincial $1 per capita grant for ambulance services is inadequate and hopefully the government will review this too, he said.

Vote of Confidence for Pollen

Victoria city council gave Mayor Peter Pollen a unanimous vote of confidence Tuesday, after one alderman had accused another of raising "some sort of aroma" with unsubstantiated allegations directed at the mayor.

Ald. Tom Christie asked Ald. Percy Frampton why he had seen fit to write to the provincial government's Inspector of Municipalities requesting an investigation of certain allegations involving Pollen.

Christie said he was "disgusted" at the action and convinced the mayor had acted in no way improperly.

Frampton replied that he had merely recounted in the letter certain allegations made by a private citizen and did so solely for the purpose of "clearing the air." He had no way of knowing whether the charges were true or untrue.

(The allegations referred to had been raised last week by lawyer Ian Stewart, and were answered by Pollen at a press conference).

Pollen asked Frampton to specify the allegations and told council he would insist on a committee of council looking into the "revelations" concerning himself.

But the discussion fizzled out with Ald. Harold Olafson commenting that "we are blowing a tempest into a teapot," and Ald. Clyde Savage moving a vote of confidence in the mayor's integrity — which Frampton seconded.

Olafson said the news media appeared to have "purposely" blown up the whole affair, and Pollen added that "much of this confrontation would have been avoided if we had had more balanced coverage of the situation."

Goal: Homes for the Homeless

Christmas Deadline for USC Project

Early last January, 10 million Bengali refugees who had fled to India from the civil war ravaging their homeland began flooding back to their new country, Bangladesh.

They returned to find their homes destroyed, their villages shattered by the bitter fighting.

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, which in 1971 worked to provide food in the Indian refugee camps, is now working to meet the new need — for housing.

Housing for Bangladesh is the object of this year's Unitarian Service Committee fund-raising campaign.

Canadians are being asked to donate $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts-in-kind — clothing, medical supplies, food — by Christmas Day.

Over 100 projects in 13 countries are supported by the USC, but Bangladesh housing is this year's main target. By Christmas Day, the organization wants to have completed 1,000 houses.

Each 10x14 foot house, with walls of bamboo matting and a roof of asbestos iron sheets, costs only $140 to build but will house from six to 12 Bengalis. Construction is supervised by the USC's partner agency in India, the Rama Krishna Mission.

A special appeal is being made for money to buy saris for Bengali women, many of whom have only the one sari they wore when they fled the country a year ago.

Besides helping to build houses, this year's Bangladesh project will provide a few pots and dishes to each household.

Part of this year's donations will go to other USC projects, such as a third children's home in Swaziland, Southern Africa; a rehydration-nutrition centre in Maghazi, the Gaza Strip, to treat infant victims of enteric disorders; and equipment for a new family planning centre in Hong Kong.

On-going USC projects include the highly-successful Agricultural Training Institute in Ranchi, India, where young farmers learn to double and triple their grain crop.

USC aid to Korea, which began in 1952, is continuing, and nine carloads of Canadian barley have been shipped.

A USC-financed nutrition rehabilitation village in Botswana, Southern Africa, is a place where mothers may bring their children suffering from malnutrition. While the children are treated, their mothers get training in nutrition and child care.

Each dollar Canadians donate this month to the USC can buy:

—66 mid-day meals in Swaziland for a school child.

—50 cups of milk for children in Bangladesh and India.

—12 days barley rations in Korea.

—five medical visits to villagers in Mysore state, India.

—one sari, loincloth or blanket for a destitute Bengali or Indian.

Victoria gave $16,641 last year to the Milk for Bangladesh campaign, the highest total since the annual campaigns began here in 1953.

Donations this year to the Housing for Bangladesh campaign may be sent to P.O. Box 300, Victoria, or taken to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa.

Names of donors will be published in the Times.

Oak Bay Once a Leader In Baseball, Hockey

Some notes, and like that, and a subscriber, bless him, writes to suggest that Oak Bay wasn't always opposed to a community interest in sport, such as it is now.

"Check it out, and you'll see that Oak Bay was once a leader in sport, he penned, "and at one time had a baseball diamond, a grandstand seating about 2,000 people, and a cinder running track, three laps to the mile, which then was the finest on the Pacific Coast."

Sure enough, it was true. On the site now known as Windsor Park, the B.C. Electric in 1890 began construction of a baseball park, which was to be the home of the Oak Bay Ball Club.

Of course, it should be explained that was before Oak Bay was Oak Bay. It was unorganized territory until incorporated as a municipality in 1906.

At any rate, Victoria later entered a baseball team in a league which included Seattle, and Tacoma, and one of the players of that era was the legendary Hal Chase.

Chase went on to glory in the Major Leagues, and was generally regarded as one of the finest fielding first baseman of all times.

So much for history, or first: have ye all forgotten that Oak Bay also had the first arena here, and the very first artificial ice arena in all of Canada? That was in 1911, when the Patrick Arena was built at the corner of Fort and Epworth. It burned to the ground in 1929.

Now, everyone waits in anticipation of the next move by Oak Bay. Surely, it is about time a recreation complex of some type was provided for the youth of the municipality, and even from other municipalities too. Turn about is only fair play.

A quotable quote in this month's issue of Sport Mag concerns Fran Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings. When Fran was secured by the Vikings from the Giants, it was expected that he would put some life in the Viking offence. In the very first exhibition game this year, on the opening kickoff, Clint Jones rambled 99 yards for a touchdown. Whereupon, Tarkenton turned to Minnesota coach Bud Grant, and said:

"See, I told you I'd help your offence."

Incidentally, Chess now is officially a sport, or so say the editors of Sport. To wit:

Chess is like baseball: There are long periods during which nothing happens. Many of these periods are spent waiting for Bobby Fischer. This makes Fischer the Dick Allen of his game.

Chess is like the Olympic Games: In its finest hour it promotes ill-will . . .

Chess is like golf: Even talented stars can be accused of cheating . . . The Soviets insisting that Fischer used chemical and electronic warfare to break Boris Spassky's concentration.

Well, you get the idea, but at least people did line up to watch a five-hour TV report of Fisher's world title match. Where? Mostly in saloons, where else? So maybe it does qualify!

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile, perhaps all was not above board in some of the recent international skating competitions. Else, why would the International Skating Union take such drastic action as to suspend nine judges for whatever reasons, and varying periods. One even, a Mrs. Joy Ann Forster, was from Canada. Also, in an attempt to escape carping criticism in the future, the ISU has ordered a special seminar for judges to be held in conjunction with the 1973 World Championships at Bratislava in 1973. This is good, and to publish the names of the suspended officials is even better. At least failings are being admitted, and the culprits chastised.

And also, in 1935, 6,405 spectators witnessed the Grey Cup final, and the gate was $5,583. This year, there were 35,000 in the stands, and receipts were over $800,000. Football has come a long way. When FIFA coach Dettmar Cramer was here last week, he suggested that one way for Canada to produce a better Olympic soccer team for the '76 Games would be to have a national camp established out here on the coast, prior to the Games, even allow players who have college scholarships to have them transferred west, and generally take the game more seriously. In other places, he said, national camps are the rule rather than the exception. In Brazil, would you believe: six months?

Now that the B.C. Government has saved upwards of $70 million by not applying for the '76 Winter Olympics, which it wasn't going to get anyway, it will be interesting to see what is done with all that money, and will it be used to finance "a bigger and better" Festival of Sport? By the way, here's a good question that no-one has ever answered: Just what is the budget for the Festival of Sport? Even last year's costs would do. Well?

How Exciting Can Dynamite Be?

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Ron Chipperfield isn't the most flambouyant hockey player to come skating down the river. The 18-year-old Brandon Wheat Kings' centre can only score goals.

That's how it looked if you paid only a casual glance to No. 7 in the Brandon uniform. But when he scores his team's first five goals, as the Chipper did Tuesday night to lead Wheat Kings to a 7-4 Western Canada Junior Hockey League victory over the Victoria Cougars, you start paying attention.

Among the things you learn:

Not one with a hell-bent-for-leather skating style, Chipperfield does have speed, highly deceptive.

He has a blistering shot, and if five goals is a hint of accuracy, you'll get confirmation from Brandon coach Rudy Pilous. If he has a choice between shooting wide of the goal, or into the goaltender's pads, Chipperfield prefers the pads. That way, he at least has a chance.

Finally, Chipperfield has great anticipation with moves to match. He is as deceitful as a mob robbing a bank with water pistols.

Generally, Chipperfield creates the illusion that he doesn't hustle or bustle. He doesn't have to. Because of his anticipation and positional play, the puck has a habit of getting to him.

Watching Chipperfield is like watching a box of dynamite . . . nothing ultra-fancy about the package, until it goes to work.

The husky centre with yet another season of junior eligibility ahead of him put all those basics to work Tuesday at Memorial Arena for an output that boosted his goals total to 31 in 23 games. His team has played 30, but the Chipper missed seven games because of an eye injury.

Chipperfield and Victoria's mistake-prone play in the Cougar zone made it easy for Pilous to enjoy his visit. Coming in as the Eastern Division leaders, the Wheat Kings didn't look as impressive as Regina Pats, who were in last place when they showed up in the Blanshard Street rink.

Apart from Chipperfield, Robbie Neale, Dwayne Pentland and rookie Rick Blight, the Wheaties looked, at best, average. Still, they completed a three-game sweep from West coast teams because the Cougare lumbered and stumbled into similar mediocracy.

Victoria's awful sin was a lack of positional play in its own zone. Cougar coach Mitch Pechet was critical of his defence, but straying wingers created the greatest problems.

Forwards, for some inexplicable reason, consistently joined defenceman well behind the faceoff circles. That's far too deep for a common-sense breakout, and the bewildered defenceman had no one to pass to.

If there was a bright spot for Pechet, it had to be the play of his so-called third line. Put together before last Saturday's 9-2 romp over New Westminister, the line of Don Williams, Carl Cureatz and Frank Hyndman came up with a second straight pass mark.

Cureatz and Hyndman accounted for two of Victoria's goals. Williams drew assists on both and was more effective in the physical education department. His bodywork on attack made the line go.

More important, only Cureatz and Williams were on the ice for a Brandon score. That single minus came in a penalty-killing role.

Tuesday's game marked the start of a tough five-games-in-six-days run for the Cougars. They left this morning for a three-game hop into Alberta, starting in Calgary tonight, and hustle back to meet Flin Flon Bombers at Memorial Arena on Sunday.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Edmonton Oil Kings went into the third period trailing 2-0 but rapped in four goals to pull out a 4-2 victory over Swift Current Broncos, while Flin Flon Bombers pulled out of a 3-3 draw with Saskatoon Blades. Ex-Cougar Neil Melnyk pulled it out of the fire for Bombers by scoring a power-play goal with less than three minutes left in the game.

TURNING INTO CHECKER, Toronto shot-stopper Jacques Plante comes out of goal crease to body Vancouver's Andre Boudrias (7) during early scramble around Maple Leafs' net. Plante's roving paid off as Maple Leafs scored 5-2 National Hockey League victory over Canucks in Vancouver Tuesday night. That's Toronto defenceman Jim McKenney in background watching Plante's style.

Keon's Value to Maple Leafs Underlined by 300th Goal

By The Canadian Press

Dave Keon has reached another milestone in his National Hockey League career with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The little centre scored a goal and assisted on another Tuesday night to lead the Leafs to a 5-2 victory over Vancouver Canucks. The goal was his 13th of the season but it gave him a career-total of 300 in the NHL.

In other games Tuesday night, Los Angeles Kings dumped New York Islanders 6-1 and St. Louis Blues edged Detroit Red Wings 2-1.

Keon, who suffered through an off-season last year, has been a leader with the Leafs ever since he joined the club in the 1960-61 season, winning the Calder Trophy as a rookie, the Lady Byng Trophy twice for clean and effective play and the Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in playoffs when Leafs won the Stanley Cup in 1967.

However, his 300 goals are not the only barometer of his value to the team, for Keon's defensive skill is comparable to the best centres in hockey.

Add to these his penalty-killing ability and his work on the power play and Keon's value to the Leafs is considerable, especially at this time when the team is experiencing an unusual number of injuries to key players.

However, despite the injuries, the Leafs have won their second straight game on the road and Keon's steady play is partly responsible for this.

The Noranda, Que., native and Leafs' all-time scoring leader scored the first goal Tuesday night and set up the winner as the Leafs moved closer to fourth place in the East Division.

With the win, Toronto moved within two points of fifth-place Detroit and seven back of fourth-place Buffalo Sabres.

Pierre Jarry with two goals and Garry Monahan and Daryl Sittler with one each were the other Toronto scorers while Bobby Schmautz and Don Tannahill replied for Vancouver.

In Uniondale, N.Y., the plight of the expansion Islanders, last in the East, was illustrated by their lack of shooting against the Kings, who got two goals each from Bob Berry and Don Kozak.

In the entire game the Islanders managed only 16 shots at Los Angeles goalie Rogatien Vachon. In the second period they got just three — the first one more than 12 minutes into the period. And on three power plays, they could get off just one shot.

The Islanders' lone goal was a first-period fluke by Billy Harris. He lined the puck up against the boards, it bounced off, struck Vachon and trickled into the net.

Garry Unger scored his 11th goal of the season for St. Louis, then set up Mike Murphy's game-winner with less than three minutes to play against the Red Wings.

Marcel Dionne scored for the Red Wings who had been shut out for five consecutive periods before Nick Libett combined with Dionne to end that dry spell.

Salaries Hiked By Competition

TORONTO (CP) — The National Football League Players' Association (NFLPA) doesn't want the NFL to expand into Canada but would welcome the Canadian Football League in the United States, an NFLPA spokesman said Tuesday.

Ed Garvey, the group's executive director, said if the NFL came into Canada — Montreal or Toronto — it would probably mean the end of the CFL.

This would snuff out a source of competition for players, resulting in a drop in football salaries, he said.

Last week the CFL Players' Association said it was opposed to CFL expansion into the U.S. and against the NFL coming to Canada.

Garvey made his comments following a meeting between the CFLPA, NFLPA, the Major League Baseball Players' Association, the National Hockey League Players' Association.

The associations from the United States said that in sports where there was more than one league, basketball and hockey, salaries climbed because of competition.

Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHLPA, said the average salary in hockey this year will be $40,000-$45,000. He said the salaries had increased about 10 per cent a year until the World Hockey Association came along, but this year they had jumped about 40 per cent.

In basketball, salaries had jumped to an average of $60,000-$70,000, up from $25,000 seven years ago.

Representatives, however, charged that professional athletes are being exploited by the agents and lawyers who bargain for them.

Ward Enjoying Action Up Front

By The Canadian Press

Ron Ward seems to be enjoying his switch ffrom defence to offence and who can blame him.

Ward, who started the World Hockey Association season for New York Raiders as a defenceman, was switched to centre by coach Camille Henry and the move seems to have paid off.

The Cornwall, Ont., native, whose pro hockey career included a brief stint with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, scored two goals and assisted on another Tuesday night in New York's 6-4 win over Houston Aeros.

The three points gave him a total of 45—tops in the WHA. He has 25 goals and 20 assists.

In other games Tuesday night, Quebec Les Nordiques beat Winnipeg Jets 4-2, and in two sudden-death overtime games, Chicago Cougars defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Cleveland Crusaders downed Philadelphia Blazers 4-3.

Hawks Get Redmond

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks obtained defenceman Dick Redmond from California Golden Seals in a National Hockey League trade Tuesday for defenceman Darryl Maggs.

Redmond was a top point man with the Seals this season with three goals and 13 assists. Maggs was scoreless while seeing limited action. Both players are 23.

Paul Chases Past Glory

Victoria's Paul Fisher will be gunning for a title he last won in 1969 when the B.C. sectional figure-skating championships get under way Thursday at 8 a.m. in the Racquet Club.

Fisher, a member of the Victoria Figure Skating Club and one of four advanced city entrants in the sectional, captured the B.C. senior men's championship that year and went on to collect the Canadian junior men's title.

Fisher's clubmate, Brenda Thomas, will compete in the senior women's events while Barbara Maple and Maureen Jasper, both of the Racquet Club, will go after laurels in the junior division.

Competition continues through Friday at the Racquet Club before switching to Memorial Arena at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The competition concludes with an exhibition performance by five Vancouver skaters who have automatically qualified for the national championships.

Displays of skill will be made by Karen Magnussen, Canadian senior women's champion last year, Ruth Hutchinson, runner-up to Miss Magnussen; Canadian dance champions Barry and Louise Soper, and Paul Bonefant, runner-up in the Canadian senior men's championship.

Nixons Lose First

Saanich Block Brothers upset Victoria Nixons Trucking 6-5 Tuesday night in a penalty-studded South Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

It was the first loss in 14 games this season for the Victoria crew.

In the other scheduled encounter between Racquet Club Kings and Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking, no real decision was reached on the ice. Kings were short of players, including a backup goaltender, and had to substitute a player when starting netminder Dale Lunde received a bad skate cut on the head in the first period. Under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rules, each club must have two goalies dressed for each game.

Dick Stratton of Nanaimo, the league commissioner, is expected to decide shortly whether or not the game, which was played anyway, should be forfeited to Lake Cowichan.

Victoria was assessed seven minor penalties, three majors, three misconducts and four game misconducts while Saanich earned five minors and two majors in the free-wheeling contest. There also were a few fights in the stands.

Basketball Boxers Regain Tie for Top

London Boxing Club vaulted back into a tie for first place with Hotel Douglas in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League by trimming YMCA 83-75 Tuesday night at Cedar Hill Junior High School.

Boxers rallied in the second half to erase a 40-37 deficit at the intermission.

Jim McKay fired 22 points to lead Boxers while Duff McCaghey and Loris Corletto each added 14 points.

Jim Cunningham's 19 points were high for YMCA. Robin Allen added 15 and Gary Woodburn 14.

NHL Close to Series With Soviets

CHICAGO (AP) — A 10-game series in 1973-74 between a top Russian team and as many as six National Hockey League clubs appeared in the making Tuesday as the NHL's governors concluded a two-day meeting.

NHL president Clarence Campbell got the go-ahead to meet in Montreal next Tuesday with representatives of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation to set up the series which would include six games in North America and four in Russia.

Several weeks ago, the Russians broke off proposed negotiations on the series, but Campbell said the Soviet hockey group now is ready to talk business.

"The Russians have made it plain their objective is to acquire as many hard dollars as they can," said Campbell. "In the past 10 years, touring Russian teams never got more than $5,000 per game in this continent, including the recent series with Team Canada."

The Russian series to be worked into the regular NHL schedule was the major news from the governors' closing session, Campbell said. He declined comment on the current legal battle with the World Hockey Association except to say $200 million "is at stake in the litigation."

Realignment of the NHL in 1974-75 when membership will be increased to 18 teams was put over until a special meeting in January at a still undetermined site.

The status of Kansas City, along with Washington, D.C., already given conditional franchises for 1974-75, remained doubtful because of financial complications.

The 1973-74 series with a top Russian team as far as the NHL is concerned is a joint venture with the NHL Players Association.

Campbell said the Russians prefer playing only three NHL clubs in the six North American games and a decision must be made in the Montreal meeting whether six or three NHL clubs will participate.

There is a possibility such clubs as New York Rangers, Chicago Black Hawks and St. Louis Blues, with large capacity stadiums, would play two-game sets with the Russian team, to be one of the top three clubs in Soviet competition — the Army, Dynamos or Spartaks.

Now It's Time to Look For Outdoor Yule Gifts

It's that time of the year again.

Women and small-fry are facing the annual headache of what toget "hubby" (or father, brother, boy-friend, etc.) for Christmas.

If the male in your life is a watcher rather than a "doer", read no further.

But if he is one who enjoys roaming the out-of-doors for relaxation, here are a few tips on gift-getting.

The first thing to remember is not to buy him anything like a shotgun, rifle, fishing rod or other expensive piece of gear without carefully sounding out his likes and dislikes. And if you do insist on purchasing something major, make sure the item choose from which would make even the most discriminating carries an exchange privilege — most men have very definite ideas on what they like in these basic articles of equipment.

It's somewhat like picking a wife.

Anyone avoiding that pitfall still has a vast array of gifts to choose from which would make even the most discriminating outdoorsman happy on Christmas morning.

Since a lot of his activity (be it hunting, fishing, hiking or wildlife photography) centres around a camp, any of the following could make a welcome addition to his outfit: utility bag to replace old duffle kit, fold-down grill for campfire, reflector oven for campfire or oven for gas stove, foam mattresses, folding saw, pocket-sized air mattress, "space-age" blanket or flashlight.

★ ★ ★

Other suggestions for the general outdoorsman include a folding shovel, fire extinguisher for car or truck, moisture-proof salt and pepper shakers, clip-together knife, fork and spoon set, collapsible plastic water container (five-gallon size is best), propane or gas cook stove, portable ice box, compass (liquid-filled), catalytic or propane heater, lantern, tear-proof tarp, nesting set of cook pots, waterproof match container or griddle for the cook stove.

Clothing should not be overlooked.

Wool socks with nylon inserts, wool shirts, "net" underwear, "cruiser" coats, down vests, parkas or hats make welcome presents.

★ ★ ★

Another bundle of goodies is available for the specialist:

BIRD HUNTER — duck call, gun-cleaning kit, waders, shooting gloves, decoys, gun case, reloading kit, shell belt or vest, polarized sunglasses, waterproof boots with insoles, vacuum bottle (preferably large and stainless steel).

DEER AND BIG GAME HUNTER — sheath knife and sharpening stone, belt axe, folding saw, lightweight block and tackle, heavy-duty pack frame, rifle-cleaning kit, reloading outfit, binoculars, cartridge belt.

TROUT OR STEELHEAD ANGLER — creel, waders with felt soles, fly box (one with clips on one side and compartments on the other are best), fly-tying kit, lure box for the pocket, tackle box, leaders, lure retriever, rod case, folding gaff or net.

SALMON FISHERMAN — good nylon or wire line, large landing net with nylon mesh, non-rusting tackle box, rod holder, fishermen's plyers, floating fish-cleaning knife with scraping spoon, planer, tide-table book, assorted lures, flasher, catalytic heater.

OUTDOOR PHOTOGRAPHER — lens cleaning kit, camera and accessories case (sturdy enough to withstand knocking about), tripod (or unipod), tele-extender for telephoto or "normal" lenses, set of extension rings or bellows unit for close-ups, electronic flash unit, pistol grip for camera or tele-holder (rifle-like mount for camera and telephoto lens).

Books on his favorite pursuit and subscriptions to B.C.-oriented outdoor magazines make interesting and lasting gifts.

Of course, the above mentioned suggestions are only a drop in the bucket compared to the number of possible choices, but they might serve as guidelines.

And if you happen to be the prospective gift-getter, it might be an idea to cut out this column, underline various items, and leave it in a conspicuous place.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish carried Bruce Logie to top of heap in ninth week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week men's tenpin competition. Logie rolled 195-201 247—643 series in Friday Nighters' League at Mayfair Lanes.

Bench Goes to Surgery After Lesion Discovered

JOHNNY BENCH
. . . into surgery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench will enter a hospital here Saturday to undergo surgery for a lesion discovered in his right lung three months ago during a routine Cincinnati Reds physicals.

"They really don't think it's anything malignant, but it might be necessary to remove it," said the catcher who was voted the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1972.

Bench said the "spot" was discovered on an X-ray in September, prior to the National League playoffs in which the Reds defeated Pittsburgh Pirates. The Reds lost the World Series to the Oakland Athletics.

Bench said he had no physical trouble during that period and expects to be well enough to play this spring.

"I'm going to be 100 per cent," said the 24-year-old bachelor. "That's what the docto5s say and that's what I have to believe. I have to think of it in that manner."

Dr. Luis Gonzalez, a thoracic and cardiovascular physician is in charge of Bench's treatment.

Bench said he would enter the hospital Saturday with surgery scheduled for Monday.

"The overwhelming odds are that it is benign," said Dr. Gonzalez.

He planned one test today "to look into the bronchial tubes and hopefully to find out what the cause is. If it doesn't show what the cause is, we'll have to proceed as scheduled on Monday."

Dr. Gonzales said that the lesion was "most likely the result of a fungus infection, or a little benign tumor, one of those two things.

"The appearance on the X-ray is much more indicative of a benign lesion rather than a malignant one," he added.

"We think everything is in his favor."

Nebraska Back Takes Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Rodgers, Nebraska's sensational all-purpose back, was awarded the Heisman Trophy Tuesday as the outstanding collegiate football player of 1972.

Rodgers received 1310 points from electors. Oklahoma running-back Greg Pruitt was second with 966, followed by Rodgers' teammate, middle-guard Rich Glover, who totaled 652 points.

Louisiana State-quarterback Bert Jones finished fourth wih 351 points, Alabama quarterback Terry Davis was next with 338, and quarterback John Hufnagel of Penn State was sixth with 292 points.

We'll Be Back in Race Next Season, Colt GM Says

BALTIMORE (AP) — Joe Thomas, who successfully fulfilled five-year building programs with two expansion teams, doesn't have that long to restructure Baltimore Colts.

Nor does he think it will take that long.

"This isn't even a two-year project," says the general manager of the National Football League club. "We should be back in contention next session.

"We have a good nucleus of young players. If we add a couple of more in the draft and a couple in trades, we'll be all right."

With a 5-7 record, and remaining games against Kansas City Chiefs and Miami Dolphins, the colts could well wind up with their first losing season since 1956.

But four victories in the last five starts by Baltimore has convinced Thomas that "the whole structure of the team has been turned around."

That was the announced objective of John Sandusky when he replaced Don McCafferty as head coach after the Colts had lost four of their first five games.

Thomas insisted that younger players see more action the remainder of the season, with special emphasis on determining whether Marty Domres could be Baltimore's quarterback of the future.

The controversial move meant the benching of Johnny Unitas, an NFL great who was in his 17th season.

Domres, used sparingly as a backup to John Hadl for three seasons with San Diego Chargers, had thrown only four passes for the Colts this year before starting in game No. 6.

In his first start, the Colts lost 24-20 to New York Jets in the final minute of play. Then Miami blanked Baltimore 23-0.

Since then, the Colts have won four of five-losing only a 24-21 decision to San Francisco '49ers.

Domres has thrown 10 touchdown passes, including three in each of the last two games. He has been intercepted only twice in 175 attempts, while completing 93 for 53.1-per-cent average and 1,116 yards.

Sandusky, who has not been told whether he will be re-hired next season, said:

"We have some age in the offensive and defensive lines, there's no question about that. But with a little help, we could be contenders."

The ability of defensive end Bubba Smith, running back Norm Bulaich and wide receiver Glen Doughty to play at full strength next season would solve a lot of problems.

Smith, an all-pro last year, has missed the entire season following pre-season knee surgery.

Buliach, a third-year pro with recurring leg injuries, carried the ball only 27 times this season.

Patriots' Manager Gets the Axe

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Upton Bell who rose to the upper echelon of football after starting as a $65-a-week dressing-room attendant, said Tuesday he had been fired from his post as general manager of the lowly New England Patriots.

Bell, 34, who had one year remaining on a reported rich three-year contract, was a centre of controversy in his nearly two years as general manager as he failed to bring the club out of the depths of the National Football League.

Announcement of the firing came only hours after NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle ordered the Patriots to reinstate suspended running back Carl Garrett. Bell had been in the forefront of the move to suspend Garrett, the team's leading rusher, three weeks ago when the action was taken.

The son of the late Bert Bell, former NFL commissioner, Bell was hired by the Patriots in February, 1971, leaving the job of personnel director of Baltimore Colts, a team he had spent a decade with, rising from a dressingroom attendant to a top executive post.

Bell accomplished what he said was his first hurdle in his job with the Patriots — signing the 1971 top draft choice, quarterback Jim Plunkett.

After that there were victories despite a slew of trades and a long, finally successful battle to get rid of coach John Mazur, who quit three weeks ago.

The Patriots were 2-12 in 1970 — the season before Bell joined the team.

The record improved slightly in 1971, to 6-8, but the bottom fell out this year.

After upset victories over Washington and Atlanta, the Patriots went into a nosedive that now has gone to nine consecutive defeats. The team currently has a 2-10 record with two games left to play.

Bell made several controversial trades this year, saying on several occasions the Patriots must be a team and that individuals who did not contribute to that image weren't needed.

Hoop Vikings Edged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Simon Fraser University Clansmen edged University of Victoria Vikings, 64-59, in an exhibition men's basketball game Tuesday night.

Mike Bishop of the Vikings was top scorer in the game with 20 points and teammate Tom Holmes getting 12 points.

However, Clansmen, led by Jim Ciccone with 14 points, had a more balanced attack and forced the Vikings into a defensive role.

In a preliminary junior varsity game, SFU downed UVic, 63-56. Larry Street scored 14 points for SFU and Jim Kupick led the UVic Jayvees with 13 points.

Hoop Imports Boycotted

MONTREAL (CP) — The University of Sherbrooke would rather pay a $100 fine and lose two points in league standings than play what they consider to be an American-dominated basketball team.

The latest Sherbrooke default came Saturday when the team refused to play Montreal's Loyola College because, they said, 11 of the Loyola's 12-man basketball team are Americans.

And Tuesday, the athletic department of Laval University in Quebec City announced its men's basketball team will not play against Loyola because the U.S. players on the squad are depriving young Quebecers from playing the sport.

The situation also has produced a move to ban Loyola from participating in all intercollegiate sports in the Quebec University Athletic Association during the next academic year.

Andre Pelletier, athletic director at the University of Sherbrooke, said in an interview that other teams in the seven-university basketball league did not stand a chance against the Loyola squad, composed largely of Americans who had been actively recruited for the team.

Sherbrooke refused to play Saturday's game against Loyolla and Pelletier said he was ready to pay the resulting $100 fine, set by QUAA regulations. "Even if we have to pay $500, we will not play Loyola," he said.

"Their calibre is too high for any school in the province and they are destroying the game for the rest of the schools.

"There are 11 Americans and one Canadian on the Loyola team and the Canadian, one of the best players in the province, spends most of his time on the bench."

At a meeting of the QUAA board of governors here last week, Pelletier said there was a motion recommending that Loyola be banned from all QUAA sports for the 1973-74 academic year. There were four in favor, four against and one abstention.

"When the association could do nothing, we decided to act on our own," Pelletier said.

Gray Forced Distance But Clear-Cut Victor

HALIFAX (CP) — With a knockout victory eluding him several times, Canadian welterweight boxing champion Clyde Gray of Toronto won a lop-sided 10-round unanimous decision over Irish Pat Murphy of West New York here Tuesday night.

Gray, who weighed 147½, began stalking Murphy in the second round. But because of self-professed over-confidence and his opponent's knack of pulling away from dangerous clinches, Gray missed several opportunities to put Murphy away.

In the second round Gray, a native of Windsor, N.S., trapped the 151¼ pound Murphy along the ropes and punished him with lightning combinations. From then on the Canadian champion scored with a slashing left hook and a pumping jab, forcing Murphy to backpeddle through most of the fight.

In the final seconds of the 10th round, Gray battered the American with strong lefts and rights to the head, but as in earlier dangerous clinches, Murphy pulled back and shuffled out of reach.

Two of the three ringside judges gave Gray all 10 rounds. The third judge had the Canadian champion winning eight, with two rounds drawn.

Gray opened a cut on Murphy's nose during the bout and the New Yorker brought a slight swelling under Gray's left eye. There were no knockdowns.

It was Gray's first fight in Nova Scotia and he got a standing ovation from the 2,580 on hand. It was another step in the Toronto boxer's march toward a match against world champion Jose Napoles.

Right after the fight Gray's manager Irv Ungerman said he plans to challenge the winner of the Billy Backus-Hegmon Lewis fight Friday in Syracuse, N.Y. Backus is a former world welterweight champion.

British Empire welterweight champion Eddie Blair of South Africa has also been challenged by Ungerman.

The win over Murphy left Gray with a record of 35 wins, two losses and a draw. He is ranked second in the world by Ring magazine and fifth by the World Boxing Association.

On the same card former Canadian welterweight champion Len Sparks of Montreal knocked out Dave Wyatt of Washington in six rounds. It was Sparks' first appearance in the ring in fiveyears.

PM Denies Hindering Auditor

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau denied Tuesday that the Liberal government has hindered the work of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson as watchdog over federal spending.

"We've always offered to him the amount of personnel he wanted and at the salaries he wanted," Trudeau said.

Henderson charged in Calgary Monday that the Liberal government has made a "direct attempt to impair" the functions of his office as recently as two weeks ago.

The annual auditor-general's report to Parliament will be late again this year, Henderson said, because the government has once again turned down requests to stop down-grading the positions of senior officials in the department.

Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said it was "regrettable and barely understandable" that the government would not give Henderson the resources to do his job.

He said he found no reason to doubt Henderson's word that he was being hampered by the government. The auditor-general has been an excellent public servant, he added.

Stanfield said the auditor-general should be pretty well free to "write his own ticket" insofar as staff requirements are concerned.

New Democratic leader David Lewis was more cautious in support of Henderson in his newest criticisms.

The last time Henderson complained, the NDP leader said, he fell somewhat short of substantiating his charges.

However, if he could do so this time, it would constitute an outrageous situation.

Lewis said he personally admired Henderson, but conceded it was possible he might be attempting to take advantage of the fact the government now has an uncertain minority position in Parliament.

No longer, he added, is the government in a position to tell the auditor-general to "go to hell."

The treasury board, meanwhile, has issued a package of "background material," including a 10-page statement that board president C. M. Drury made last March, the last time the government was under attack by Henderson.

The material listed facts and figures showing that the treasury board has approved budgetary and staff requests made by the auditor-general.

The statement by Drury, made last March before the Commons public accounts committee, said the public service commission also has offered to give the auditor-general power to recruit and appoint his staff members.

"But that offers has been refused."

In addition, the statement said, the government expressed its readiness to grant the auditor-general complete freedom in setting salaries for members of his staff, "but this proposal was never acted upon."

B.C. PLAYER CLOSES IN

SA NANTONIO, Tex. (CP-AP) — Duncan Suttles of Vancouver, closing in on the title of grandmaster, played to a victory and a draw Tuesday in an international chess tournament here.

Suttles has 7½ points after 13 rounds of the 15-round tournament and is tied for fourth with Bent Larsen of Denmark, Vlastimil Hort of Czechoslovakia and Svetozar Gligovic of Yogoslavia.

Chess officials say Suttles may qualify for the grandmaster title before the tournament ends Dec. 11.

The grandmaster title is awarded on the basis of points won in international tournaments. Points vary with each tournament according to calibre of play.

Spill Kills Birds

ESBJERG, Denmark (AP) — Tens of thousands of oil-soaked ducks and eiders drifting ashore along Denmark's North Sea coast are doomed to die, police and ornithologists reported Monday.

The birds, unable to fly or dive for food because of their polluted feathers, will starve to death or be shot in a large-scale mercy operation prepared along a 100-mile stretch of Jutland's west coast.

Ornithologists said the birds probably were attracted by the calm sea surface created by an oil slick in the North Sea three or four weeks ago and since have drifted helplessly toward the shore. Officials did not indicate the source of the slick.

Psychiatrists Say They Are Not Paid Enough

TORONTO (CP) — An independent committee studying Ontario's medical profession was told Tuesday that psychiatrists—would like to make more of the money which doctors earlier in the hearing had been accused of having a licence to print.

The psychiatry section of the Ontario Medical Association said in a brief to the hearing that physicians should be among the top income-earners and that psychiatrists should not be far behind.

Dr. A. M. Hood, chairman of the psychiatry section, said however, psychiatrists are at the lowest earning level of the medical profession.

He said psychiatrists cannot see as many patients a day as doctors.

He also questioned the restriction of permitting patients to be referred only from other physicians and from a particular agency.

Sheelagh Jeffreys, speaking for a group of women married to doctors, said if doctors work hard and make more money, they are accused of being overpaid.

But if they spent more time at home, they were charged with giving poor service.

"Have you thought how much a doctor earns staying out half the night with a delivery?" she asked.

"Would you get a plumber to do a call at the house at 3 a.m. for $13?

Dr. Lionel Solursh, a Toronto psychiatrist, told the committee too many patients are made to feel that they are on an assembly line and should not be taking up the doctor's time to ask questions.

"Too many doctors do not treat patients as individuals of worth and dignity, having rights," he said.

Police Held Back Candidate's Crash

HAMILTON (CP) — Deputy Police Chief John Arno said Tuesday he withheld information about the involvement last Friday of Controller Jim Custeau — a successful candidate in Monday's civic election—in a car accident.

Custou was charged Tuesday with impaired driving.

Arno said he did not make public a report of the incident until after the election because he felt it might jeopardize Custeau's chances for election and "it is very unethical to cut the feet from under a guy for one mistake."

"I wanted no newspaper trials before the man was charged," Arno said.

Custeau, an alderman for 12 years, was successful in his first bid for board of control.

Arno said accident reports are not necessarily public knowledge — "although in most cases the news media have access to our files."

"When a man who is running for public office commits an offence two days before an election I will do everything in my power to withhold any information that might harm him," Arno said.

ST. NICK MIGHT FAIL AS STORE'S SANTA

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Santa Claus standards are higher than ever this season, and old St. Nick himself might have a tough time getting hired by department stores.

So says Tressa Houck, operator of a Santa Claus employment service for four years in Palo Alto, just south of San Francisco.

"There are black Santas, bilingual Santas and Santas of all sizes and shapes," said Mrs. Houck, whose agency has placed more than 400 Santas over the years.

In an average day, she said, Santa may interview 1,200 children.

For the $3 an hour they are paid, the jolly gents are expected to work six days a week; avoid smoking and drinking; eschew drugs, even prescription types; roll out the Santa-spiel endlessly—and be prepared for the worst.

Some kids get so excited they wet their pants—and Santa's—while telling Mr. Kringle what they want for Christmas.

Less Time for Yule Shopping

Last-minute Christmas shoppers will have even less time than usual this year with all major department stores being closed on Sunday, Dec. 24.

In addition, most department stores will revert to early closing hours on Saturday, Dec. 23 — either 5:30 p.m. or 6 p.m.

The exceptions are Zellers, which will be open until 9:30 p.m., and Woolco and K Mart which both may stay open until their regular Saturday closing of 10 p.m.

Woolco manager Allan Squires said his company was not sure whether to consider the Saturday as Christmas Eve or not.

"We have a tradition of closing by 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve and we don't know what we should do on Saturday with Christmas Eve coming on a Sunday this year."

He said at the moment the decision is to stay open until 10 p.m.

All department stores are planning night shopping for Saturday, Dec. 9 and Dec. 16.

The majority of department stores are planning a three-day closure over the Christmas weekend — Sunday, Christmas Day (Monday) and Boxing Day.

Zellers has announced it will be open on Boxing Day, the only local department store to be open that day.

Many department stores open on Boxing Day in eastern Canada.

Zellers hours on Boxing Day will be 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

On Dec. 23, Woodward's will close at 6 p.m. and both Eaton's and Simpsons-Sears will close at 5:30 p.m.

Fire Pact Okayed

In double quick time, and with only one dissenting vote, Victoria city council Tuesday approved a new contract with Local 730 of the International Association of Firefighters.

The agreement gives city firemen a wage increase of nearly 16 per cent over 21 months, bringing the basic rate for a first-class firefighter to $950 a month — $30 less than the Vancouver rate.

Only alderman to vote against the settlement was Clyde Savage.

Council also approved a motion calling for the "formal recognition and authorization of the interchange of municipal representatives at meetings held for the purpose of collective bargaining between the various municipalities and their unions."

Mayor Peter Pollen said the move was designed to co-ordinate the "expertise" of Greater Victoria municipalities in the collective bargaining process.

Rift Denied

WINNIPEG (CP) — Chairman of the Manitoba Human Rights Commission, Caroline Cramer, Tuesday denied reports that the commission is close to an open break with the provincial government.

Mrs. Cramer, a Winnipeg lawyer, said in an interview there was "no truth" in a Winnipeg Tribune news story that she had been asked to resign because of a rift between the commission and the government.

MORE TESTS have been ordered by a U.S. court for air bags which were to have become a standard safety feature in automobiles beginning with the 1975 model year. As shown above, the bags would inflate on impact, providing a cushion between riders and injury from either the dashboard or windshield. According to the court ruling Tuesday, the bags need further "refining."

Parade Censored

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — The costume parade at the Municipal Theatre Ball, one of the highlights of the annual carnival, is threatened with extinction, apparently the result of censors seeking to oust homosexuals from the procession.

Earlier this year theatre authorities banished men from the parade apparently under pressure from censorship authorities, who were embarrassed over the procession of transvestites and "bichas" (homosexuals) exhibited in lavish costumes.

The problem was the men were the backbone of the parade. Without them, there may not be enough contestants.

STANFIELD REJIGS SHADOW CABINET

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has named the people who could expect to receive first consideration for cabinet posts if he formed a government.

The 28 men and one woman, including Claude Wagner, his principal spokesman for Quebec, and Paul Hellyer, a former Liberal cabinet minister, were named chairmen Tuesday of the various committees of the Conservative caucus.

They will become the chief Conservative spokesmen on their special subjects during debates in the Commons.

For Wagner, one of two Quebec Conservatives in the Parliament that meets Jan. 4, Stanfield chose the prestige-laden subject of external affairs.

Hellyer (Toronto-Trinity), former head of Action Canada and transport minister in the Trudeau government who sat first as a Liberal and then as an independent in the House, becomes the spokesman on industry, trade and commerce.

Flora MacDonald, the only woman in the Conservative group, becomes Indian and northern affairs critic.

Stanfield emphasized in a news conference that the newly appointed chairmen will not automatically become ministers of their assigned specialties in a Conservative government.

But other Conservatives said that most of them probably would get into the cabinet in some portfolio if Stanfield formed a government after a defeat in the Commons of the minority Liberal government.

Speaking after a morning caucus session, he said Conservatives are preparing as an opposition party, "at this point."

But he speculated that Prime Minister Trudeau's government could be defeated within days of the opening of Parliament and he said he expects to form a government.

Cocaine Seized

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A Colombian-born man was charged Tuesday with smuggling $200,000 worth of cocaine into the United States in a false bottom of his dog-carrying case. Anthony Romero, 36, was arrested Monday night at Kennedy Airport when customs agents found 4.4 pounds of cocaine tucked into the case carrying his German Shepherd dog Rocky. The defendant was held in lieu of bail.

Bootblack Art Not Dead . . . Yet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gone is the pride that once swelled the heart of the dedicated bootblack when he saw his smiling reflection in a well-buffed brogan. There are few to take a shine to the honored trade.

But Thomas (Call Me Carrots) Ostopawich and Harry Rakowski, like two old artisans clinging with affection to a dying trade, see nothing lacklustre about shining shoes.

Harry operates the Olympic Shoe Shine Parlor in downtown Winnipeg, an establishment that has been in operation continuously since 1902, and Carrots is his righthand man.

Carrots, a personable 43-year-old red-haired shiner, put his first dab of polish to a shoe when he was eight years old and hasn't looked back since.

"Shines were a nickel then. And prices ain't changed as fast as the cost of living has," he recalled.

Then the price increase set in —10, 15, 25, 35 and now 50 cents a buff—and the shoeshine parlors caught in the squeeze of inflation and seasonal work began to close their doors. Carrots recalled some of them—Super Shoe Shine, Boston Hat and Shoe and Beacon Shine.

"Most guys like to get their shoes shined," said Harry. "It picks them up on an off day, and everyone knows there's off days. Like a woman going shopping when she feels low."

Harry, who took over the stand in 1941, said the establishment uses only one brand of polish. "It's the best you can get and, besides, some of the other stuff ruins shoes."

Both shiners are dead set against sprays for shoes.

"We had a salesman come in here a while back and try to sell us some of that spray," Harry said. "He wouldn't use it on his own shoes.

"Gave us a can of it. We use it on the wall moulding to make it shine."

Inquest Hears How Little Girl Died After Dental Operation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Ernest J. Treloar told an inquest Monday of his fight to save the life of a four-year-old girl after she suffered a heart arrest following a two-hour dental operation Nov. 21 in his clinic here.

Dena Roberta Lowe died six days later in hospital. Pathologist Dr. T. R. Harmon said an inquest showed death due to a combination of pneumonia and brain damage. He listed her death unnatural due to cardiac arrest.

Dr. Treloar said the child was quite agitated but not hysterical prior to the operation and that an anaesthetic was administered without incident.

Dentist Dr. D. C. Mason said the dental work on the little girl took about two hours and was carried out in a normal manner without complications.

Dr. Treloar, an anaesthesiologist, said the girl was then placed in a recovery area under observation of a registered nurse. He said he checked the girl about 10 minutes later, saw she was doing fine and went downstairs to get a haircut, leaving his partner in charge.

Dr. Treloar said the barber had just about finished when he received word there had been a cardiac arrest.

"I ran upstairs and found Dr. Klassen and doctors A. V. Nurani, a general practitioner, and Dr. C. R. Rally, a heart specialist working on the girl," he said.

Dr. Nurani and Dr. Rally have offices in the same building as the clinic.

Dr. Treloar said that about an hour later the child showed signs of improving and was breathing on her own.

He then decided to have the girl moved to Vancouver General Hospital's intensive care unit for overnight observation.

He said he decided against moving her earlier "because we have all the facilities in the clinic they have at VGH for treatment of cardiac arrest, and there was the danger of a second arrest in the ambulance. . . ."

The girl's condition worsened in hospital and she died six days later without regaining consciousness.

Child specialist Dr. P. H. Padwick told of seeing the girl in August, 1971, regarding sleeping difficulties and apparent spells during which her legs would stiffen and she would claw at her abdomen.

"She was put in hospital for observation during which time she had one such spell," he said. "The nurses concluded the little girl was conscious as to what she was doing and classified the spell as a behavior problem."

Dr. Treloar said he had questioned the parents prior to administering the anaesthetic about her medical history but didn't learn about the "spells" until after she had the fatal seizure.

The inquest continues.

Forestry Taxes Rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government will run the risk of stagnation in the forest industry if it continues to take as much in taxes as it did in 1971, the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. said Tuesday.

The warning was issued by council president Gordon Draeseke when he released a special study saying that taxes and other government charges took 84.8 per cent of net earnings of a large segment of the industry in 1971.

"The new government cannot continue to appropriate such a high share of the available money without serious damage to the industry," he said.

"By serious damage I mean stagnation, less employment—and possibly closures."

Sales of the firms studied increases by 37 per cent from 1966 to 1971 but net earnings declined by 70 per cent in the same period, the study said.

Return on capital employed dropped from 5.9 per cent in 1966 (7 per cent in 1969) to 2 per cent in 1971, said the survey done for the council by chartered accountants Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co.

Draeseke was particularly critical of increases in stumpage fees and royalties which, he said, amounted to $24,872,000 in 1971, a poor profit year.

In 1969, the peak year during the study period, net earnings of $72,844,000 were four times those of 1971, but the stumpage fees and royalties were $28,038,000.

Names of the 15 companies involved in the study are being kept confidential but the accountants' report said their operations represent 60 per cent of total B.C. industry sales in 1971.

The NDP government has said it plans to increase the provincial share of corporate income taxes and to get more from resource companies.

Resources Minister Williams, whose department is conducting studies on forestry revenue, told reporters in Victoria the government considers royalties are not taxes as such but the equivalent of raw material costs.

Firm Quits Over Criticism

BROCKLEHURST (CP) — The controversial Cinnamon Ridge development in this district municipality has led to the resignation of the town's planning firm, charges that the municipality's solicitor has a conflict of interest and a battle between mayor Al Thompson and an alderman over ownership of the property.

The planning firm, Strong, Lamb and Nelson, resigned after a public hearing into the diking of the planned residential development near Kamloops.

Terry McQuillan, manager of the local branch of the planning firm, said the company had decided not to work for the city any longer because Mayor Thompson and Alderman Jack . McMillan suggested at the public meeting that the company had not told the city council that the Cinnamon Ridge property was subject to flooding.

McQuillan said it was irresponsible public criticism without regard to facts" and added that it had been recognized for years that the area, near Kamloops, was subject to flooding.

Council never raised any question on possible flooding, he said. In the spring, the nearby suburb of Oak Hills was flooded when a dike burst.

Mayor Thompson also questioned the ethics of Kamloops lawyer Doug Howard acting for Cinnamon Ridge Development Co. Ltd. at the same time his firm had been retained by the city on a fee-for-service baisis.

Gabriolans To Meet On Planning

GABRIOLA ISLAND (CP) — The Gabriola Ratepayers' Association called for a public meeting Tuesday night to discuss the resignation Sunday of three members of the island's advisory planning commission and the discovery that the land development company Gabriola Wildwood Estates Ltd. was asked to help prepare a map for the planning commission.

The resignation Sunday of commission chairman Bill Matthews, vice-chairman Norman Nash and member Peter Bell leaves the seven-member commission with only two veteran members.

Wildwood Estates was stopped this summer in its attempt to subdivide a 224-acre stretch of the island into 550 lots. Dan Campbell, then municipal affairs minister, denied the company's application after a public hearing.

Matthews said Tuesday his resignation was only indirectly connected with the discovery that the development company had supplied the commission with a map.

He said the map "has nothing to do with the island (development) plan, so charges of conflict of interest are groundless."

He said no one else came forward with a map, so the company's help was not refused.

"It is a purely factual map showing existing subdivisions, tree farm areas and agricultural land."

Matthews said it was silly for Gabriola Island residents to continue their "vendetta" against Wildwood Estates.

"We cannot ignore a group which holds so much land here. The company is part of the island and it offered help."

The former commission chairman said he would attend tonight's public meeting, adding: "If it's a witch hunt they want, let them have it."

Appointments to the planning commission are made by the Nanaimo Regional District Board. The commission acts in an advisory capacity to the regional board on planning and zoning matters.

Deceit Charged By Poundkeeper

Saanich poundkeeper Albert Oost believes some people are using the municipal pound to dispose of their cats — pretending the animals are strays.

"People have a stray cat and tell us to pick it up and it's their own cat. This is a cheap way of getting rid of it," Oost told a Saanich council meeting Tuesday.

Earlier the committee considered whether two pound men were sufficient to meet the needs of Saanich in dealing with animal strays of all kinds.

Police, who receive most complaints, tell the public there is no pound service after 5 p.m., but when instructed to, police acting as deputy pound men will operate one of the pound trucks in response to calls.

Ald. William Noel said "I thought that is asking police to do more than they should be expected.

No further action was taken.

The committee authorized the municipal administrator to negotiate an agreement with a new poundkeeper for large animals.

Assistant administrator Dick Gibson reported Errol Hunter, of Hunter's Holiday Ranch, 374 Spartan, is willing to take over the duties of keeper in place of R. T. Birch and Son, 5062 West Saanich, who had requested an increase in their annual retainer from $600 to $1,200. The committee refused previously to raise the amount.

Hunter has facilities for keeping horses and cattle and was willing to be on call 24 hours a day for $600 retainer.

Administrator John Tribe said Hunter was proposed after "we shopped around" when the Birches seemed unwilling to continue the arrangement.

The committee agreed to reconsider its $200 a day fee for a three-day licence to operate a carnival, which was charged to the Kiwanis Club of Saainch last April.

The fee was charged by Saanich licence department when it was discovered the Wagner Shows carnival was operating at Town and Country shopping centre without a licence last April.

The show indicated licensing was to have been taken care of by the Kiwanis Club, which was to give its share of proceeds to charity.

The club had failed to obtain a licence and was then required to pay the full fee or have the show closed.

The action had left "a bad taste in the mouth of the Kiwanis Club," said Tribe, and the sponsorship had meant a deficit instead of a profit for the club.

The committee, urging council grant a $570 rebate to the club, agreed there had been some misunderstanding and mishandling of the affair. Fee for a charitable carnival is provided for in the bylaws at $10 a day.

The club will be asked in future to notify Saanich when it intends to sponsor an outside carnival for charity.

Jesus Freaks Mystery

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Both brickbats and bouquets are tossed regularly at the young "Jesus people" these days. They're sneered at as a shallow fad, and praised as a sparkling bloom of renewed faith.

Some church analysts suggest that a dash of both elements is involved.

Despite the mixed ingredients, however, a religion reporter who criss-crossed the land, hippie-style, visiting among the country's approximately 800 "Jesus communes" concludes that they have lasting qualities.

Some slighter aspects of their movement seem likely to wear off and disappear eventually, says Hiley Ward, religion editor of Detroit Free Press, but "something will live, too."

He says the mainstream of the activity has substantial potentialities for the future, out of which "something big and new might emerge" such as a "churchless, celebrative religion, with both liberal and conservative wings."

Also, some of the new youth commitment already is being channelled into old-line denominations, he says, adding that this may "bring renewal and rebirth to a pale and tired Christianity."

GET OUTSIDE SUPPORT

Others have speculated about such possibilities, but Ward, in a new book issued by Associated Press, The Far-Out Saints of the Jesus Communes, cites specific enduring factors to back his case, including:

—Outsiders such as business tycoons and professional evangelists are bankrolling the movement.

—It is training an "army of new leaders, "unordained laymen chosen by the groups themselves, and who are developing varied new styles of leadership.

—The emphasis placed on "small groups," which have the mutually sustaining power of close-knit families.

—They exhibit a "wide diversity of individual religious experience," much of which contains the seedbed of future social influence.

—Their highly nomadic and missionary characteristics combine to foster an inclusively supportive network among the different groups.

—Since they eschew "political activism," concentrating on personal religious benefits, the movement avoids irritating society and thus grows in a generally favorable climate of social acceptability.

However, Ward cites historical precedents of similar upsurges, such as that of John Wesley and others in the 18th century ,that eventually broadened into movements of wide social concern.

"The Jesus people become bi- and tri-cultural," he says. "Turned off to society, they nevertheless begin to look fairly straight. Girls groom their hair immaculately, boys shave, etc. They speak and witness in straight churches."

As for their sexual habits, they subscribe to the normal "middle-class standards," expecting chastity and celibacy of the unmarried, and fidelity in marriage, Ward says, adding: "The Jesus people try to put down sex, pretending it is not very important, when Jesus is all."

While they are intensely devoted to Jesus in an "Oh, wow, Jesus!" fashion and fascinated with the Bible, Ward says "they are long on zeal but short on biblical knowledge." He says they are not fundamentalists since they don't codify their beliefs.

Also, in personal habits, he adds, they differ from fundamentalists. "Jesus people do not worry about smoking or drinking."

Insurance Takeovers 'Inevitable'

TORONTO (CP) — A survey conducted by a Toronto-based company shows that many of Canada's private insurance agents feel government takeover of car insurance in all provinces is inevitable.

Of about 1,000 agents replying to questions asked by the Excelsior Life Insurance Co., 47 per cent said they feel the governments will take over automobile insurance and 42 per cent said they do not think so. The others had no opinion.

Sixty-six per cent said they plan to expand into other areas of the insurance business to "survive without auto insurance" and 74 per cent said they were interested in selling more life insurance.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan already have government-operated auto insurance schemes.

Women's Lib Sidetracked By Alberta

By BERNIE GOEDHART

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government has taken its first stepstowards official recognition of the prefix Ms. — but the steps weren't exactly in a straight line and haven't yet reached their destination.

Roy Wilson, Social Credit MLA for Calgary Bow, suggests in fact the issue was "artfully sidetracked" in the legislature recently.

Mr. Wilson presented a bill to revise the election act requirement that a woman's name be preceded by the prefix Mrs. or Miss in the list of electors. The bill, which was read during the fall sitting of the legislature, called for the option to use Ms., a label whose use has been advocated by the women's liberation movement.

The bill was endorsed by the two women in the 75-seat provincial legislature—both members of the government—and by several male MLAs before it was referred to the legislative committee studying the election act.

That committee "is not due to report until the next session," said Mr. Wilson

The opposition member said he was disappointed at the delay and suggested perhaps the government "doesn't like to buy ideas from the opposition."

He said his presentation of the bill developed from an incident where Premier Peter Lougheed had written a letter addressed Ms. rather than Miss or Mrs.

Mr. Wilson said he asked the premier if this meant the government was ,now using the prefix or if it was merely a typographical error.

"He didn't know anything about it. His secretary must have done it."

The Social Credit MLA said he then began thinking about the principle behind use of the Ms. prefix, and decided to introduce the amending bill.

"I purposely picked the election act because it is innocuous," Mr. Wilson said. "Debate had to centre about the principle.

"'Women should be able to be identified as individuals, not as some man's daughter or some man's wife."

Asked if his wife uses Ms. before her name, Mr. Wilson replied: "No. She uses Mrs.

"But that's the beauty of the bill. It doesn't say anyone can't use Miss or Mrs."

It just offers the option to use Ms., he said.

This option appears to exist in many agencies and firms.

Stuart Carson, Canada Manpower supervisor of service to employers, said Canada Manpower has no official policy on the use of Ms.

"We have had no provision in the forms that we know of. But if anyone wants to use it, we have no objection at all."

Isabel Munroe, dean of women at the University of Alberta, said she feels Ms. is "gaining acceptance merely because it is convenient."

"We use it quite a bit," she said.

The convenience of using Ms. was also mentioned by J. C. Cels, director of departmental services for the Alberta government.

He said to his knowledge there is no provision for Ms. on governmental employment application forms as yet. "But the forms are under review and Ms. is one of the factors being considered.

"Ms. is used in correspondence from our offices where there's no indication if a person is Miss or Mrs."

Dolores Russell, 25, who started Edmonton's women's-lib-inclined newspaper On Our Way, said use of Ms., which she prefers, "takes the stigma off being either married or unmarried."

She also suggested that "in the long-range it will lessen the stigma of (having) illegitimate children" in that a woman won't have to indicate her marital status.

Ms. Russell is married but uses her maiden name. As such, she finds the Ms. prefix useful.

Jeremy: Building With Hope

This is the second of a series of five articles in which the Times looks at the problems and opportunities facing handicapped children in the Victoria area.

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

They're different all right: slanted eyes, a little slow to learn how to tie shoe laces, and their mouths sometimes drop open unexpectedly.

They're IQ ranges from 50 to 75, while for a normal person it's about 115.

Mongoloids make up 10 per cent of the moderately—or trainable—retarded population. Three out of every 100 persons are mentally retarded.

The cause is usually genetic.

Those are the facts of clinical research.

Then there's Jeremy. For once he's sitting contentedly on his bedroom floor playing with building blocks. A grin covers his face when the visitor enters. He runs up, grabs the visitor's first and fourth finger, and drags him over to some point of interest.

It's November 28th and a birthday cake—"which I had to make as garish as possible because children like it that way"—takes Mrs. N. back five years.

She was in the maternity ward at Jubilee Hospital waiting for the child she had wanted for 37 years.

"They often say people suffer most from the things they most fear," she said looking absently at the huge expanse of ocean from her kitchen window.

"And 12 hours after Jeremy was born when my doctor said, 'I'm afraid the baby's not quite right,' it was like the world slapped me in the face.

"It was said as a clinical fact—you're too old—you've produced some kind of monster. Or that's the way I took it.

"My husband and I are pretty bookish people and to have a mentally incompetent child thrown at us, it seemed so cruel. It's terrible, I must admit, how much vanity is mixed up in this."

Always Silent

The nurses would bring the babies to all the new mothers at the same time. They were all screaming their heads off. But Mrs. N.'s baby was brought usually last, and was always silent.

She had wanted her own child since she was 12: "I always just naturally assumed I'd get married and have children."

"But it didn't work out that way." Early in her marriage she adopted Elizabeth, now 10, and Christopher, 8.

They prepared for their third child by natural childbirth classes, breathing exercises, high expectations and countless books.

And when he was born, "our first reaction was to immediately rush to the library and look up the handicap. We had to know everything about it immediately. It was horrifying.

"I felt right away I had to give the baby up. I couldn't deal with it. I could understand the situation rationally, but couldn't come to terms with the emotionally."

Friends felt the same way. In their sympathy they attempted to find the right kind of institution. On one occasion Jeremy was compared to a normal child to impress upon Mrs. N, the impossibility of keeping the child. "He wasn't right."

"Then, retardation was considered something to be hidden away, to be ashamed of, because people knew so little about it. The very little I knew utterly horrified me."

They got as far as filling out forms to relinquish Jeremy legally.

What changed their minds was a combination of their eldest daughter's reaction—nightmares when she thought they were going to give Jeremy away—and the fact that the only alternative to keeping Jeremy was to give him to a foster home.

"If someone else would care for him out of the goodness of their heart, and that was the alternative, then I had to keep him."

That was the only alternative, says Mrs. Bridget Moncreiff, the Victoria Mental Health Centre social worker.

About 12 years ago most parents were usually advised to place their mongoloid children in an institution. Later people started to feel institutions were not the right things for children like Jeremy. And there weren't enough institutions anyway.

"There's a new trend taking place, however," she said. "I can't pin-point it but parents are tending to keep the child at least until they are 18 now.

"Normally institutions (like the Woodlands School in New Westminster and the Glendale Lodge and Hospital here) won't accept any child under six, unless he presents a special problem.

"Until they are six, they feel, the mongoloid child's needs are more alike any normal child's than they are different."

Self-Care

Jeremy attends the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children Pre-school daily, where he learns self-care skills like dressing, tying laces, and the social skills needed for playing in the group enrolled in the preschool. Speech is encouraged, as well as motor skills and paper and pencil work.

Jeremy's ability will be assessed before he moves up to the Victor School for the Trainable Mentally Retarded, operated by the Victoria School board, where he can be accommodated until he's 18 or 19.

From there, children like Jeremy usually go on to the GVAR adult workshop (Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded). Another alternative is the Goodwill Enterprises sheltered workshop.

In the meantime Jeremy's parents aren't worried about the future.

"We've accepted him totally, even our children and their friends have. We're very preud of him."

Secure in the total acceptance of his family, Jeremy plays happily

Christmas Forecast: Plenty of Turkeys

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be plenty of turkeys for Christmas dinners this year, the agriculture department says in its monthly food outlook.

Supplies of vegetables — potatoes, cabbages, rutabagas, onions and carrots — also will be adequate in all regions but Quebec.

Other commodities:

Beef: Supplies adequate and above those a year ago.

Pork: Supplies above those in 1971.

Eggs: More than buyers need. Prices may drop somewhat.

Chickens: An ample supply.

Fruit: Supplies of apples and pears adequate in most areas, but there will be fewer apples in the Maritimes.

NADER TEAM ATTACKS AEROSOLS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring that aerosol dispensers can become shrapnel-spreading, flame-spewing bombs, a Ralph Nader engineering team charged recently that industry for years has ignored simple, inexpensive ways to make the cans safe.

The team spokesman recommended federal law to provide treble damages for persons hurt in aerosol accidents.

"The aerosol industry saw the danger years ago and they know how to fix it, but for some reason they haven't done so," Ralf Hotchkiss, director of Nader's Centre for Concerned Engineering, said at a news conference releasing a 12-page report.

Hotchkiss said merely scratching the bottom of the can or using seam materials that melts at a lower temperature than solder would lessen the danger of explosion. He said these solutions would cost less than 5 cents a can.

Hotchkiss said the number of aerosol accidents probably is far greater than sparse statistics indicate. He said information from the national commission on product safety and reports from hospital emergency rooms revealed at least nine deaths and six cases of partial or total blindness.

Hotchkiss, who has a degree in physics from Oberlin, and Mark Gulak, a graduate from the University of Pittsburgh in industrial engineering, started the project more than one year ago.

Hotchkiss said the average household has 50 aerosol dispensers around, and the danger of explosion is great. He said a dispenser can explode by being exposed to heat, perhaps by being dropped in a bathtub of hot water or by being left in the sunlight or next to a radiator.

Hotchkiss said an exploding dispenser can fly 300 feet and once penetrated the wooden backside of a truck 150 feet away.

"When the unexpected bursting of the aerosol bomb takes place, the contents spray out and often form a flammable or explosive mixture with the surrounding air," the report said.

"Because the rupture is so sudden and occurs with such force, the size and intensity of the fireball which can be created is much greater than it would be if that release were more gradual."

The report said tests at Cornell measured burst pressures sending shrapnel at high speeds. It quoted the Terigard Co. as saying that if the contents of the dispenser are flammable the explosion can create "a flamethrower effect."

Hotchkiss and Gulak first conducted a patent search. They found 60 patents, including a pressure release cap for soda bottles dating back to 1924, but none had been put into effect by industry.

"So why aren't aerosols explosion proof?" The report asked.

"The customary industry answer has been that such means are being vigorously developed, and a solution to the problem is forthcoming," it said.

Hotchkiss said a scratch on the bottom of the dispenser or solder that melts at a lower temperature would permit overheated cans to release pressure "like a slow leak on a tire instead of a blowout."

Careful pedestrians help avoid winter mishaps

Snowbound City Streets Call for Extra Caution

Coinciding with the season's first snowfall, Safe Driving Week — which began Dec. 1 — takes on new significance.

"The first thing to remember is the laws of physics — like the laws of weather — can't be beaten," says driving education instructor Ralph Cossey.

"The heavier the moving object (i.e. car) the longer it takes to stop.

"And the faster its going around the corner, the more it wants to keep going straight."

Cossey advises drivers to use first and second gear for downtown driving and warns against sudden stops.

"If you begin to stop sooner, you stop smoother and with more safety. On slippery streets if the brakes aren't pumped they lock."

Careless walking can also cause disaster on slushy, icy roads.

"Pedestrians should give a car about six car lengths to stop at any intersection," Cossey says.

"A car will travel several hundred feet just in the amount of time it takes a driver to see, decide and act.

"There's no such thing as stopping on a dime — even at one mile per hour. In this weather, if you stop suddenly at 10 m.p.h. the car will fishtail."

Chains and snow tires are vital for winter conditions, Cossey adds, but they are no excuse for increasing speed.

"You have to forget about schedules in this weather — better to be 30 minutes late than 30 years too soon."

Cossey stresses there are no such things as dangerous corners, dangerous cars nor dangerous trees — only dangerous drivers.

"Everyone should have their driving tested and analyzed once a year.

"One research team discovered the average driver makes nine mistakes in every five minutes."

Most drivers, Cossey says, don't know the basic navigational aids to good driving.

"Nor do they know what preventative action they can take. Most accidents can be avoided with preventative action."

Driving instructor Ronald Harris agrees. He lists six basic tenets of defensive driving:

1. Look well ahead of your car, and keep a two second stopping space between your car and the one in front.
2. Be alert and keep your eyes moving all the time.
3. Begin to slow down half a short block before a red light or a hazard.
4. Always look over your shoulder as well as signalling before changing lanes.
5. Be courteous and tolerant.
6. Don't mix alcohol with gasoline.

"A lot of people in Victoria don't demonstrate they know how to drive," Harris observes. "And some of the worst offenders are the people who are supposed to know because they drive for a living."

Nervous or handicapped student drivers often are the most conscientious after they have obtained their licence, adds driving instructor Jim Williams.

"Capable drivers are often over-confident and careless," he says.

Williams stresses the importance of being helpful to other drivers.

"Get into a position where he can see you before changing lanes and help let him into a lane. People are bad for not doing that in Victoria.

"And don't crowd the person in front of you or be impatient."

Attitude, Williams says, is the most important factor in safe driving.

It's a Shoe-In

DEAR ABBY: Apropos the amputee who voiced complaint over the necessity of purchasing two shoes when only one was needed: She (or he) should have mentioned her shoe size and which appendage had been pruned — and the chances are that several shoe-mates might have responded.

I'm an amputee myself, and I'm always on the prowl for a female, minus her left leg, who wears a size 6-B. Sharing shoes can be the basis for a beautiful friendship. Her left for my right is a profitable swap. Since the demise of the shoe exchange amputees are pretty much on their own. Of course, an amputee can have a custom-designed shoe made, but this is usually more costly than purchasing a pair and discarding one.

I'm an old hand — or I guess I should say an "old foot" — at this business. I've used crutches for almost 55 years. — Louise.

DEAR LOUISE: I have some wonderful news for you. If you want to know where in your area you can buy one shoe, write to me. One shot in my column asking readers if they knew of such a place brought hundreds of responses. Unipeds of the world — unite. It's a shoe-in!

DEAR ABBY: Let "Afraid Of Dogs" try this: If a dog approaches in a menacing manner, say, "Shalom" in a firm but cordial way. Keep repeating it until the dog retreats and stops barking.

I tried this once, by accident, and it worked, so now I do it every time a dog looks like it is going to attack me. As many as three barking dogs have come toward me at once, and I kept repeating, "Shalom, Shalom," and, thank goodness, it's always worked — Shalom.

DEAR SHALOM: Those dogs must have boned up on their Hebrew!

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column from the woman who said she was looking for a man who put God first in his life, his family second, and his business last, interested me.

I once knew such a man. He's now a Catholic priest. Sign me, "Lost Out" . . . or Number Two.

Free for the Asking

If you own a still or movie camera and a projector, you will want to know how to keep your equipment in top condition.

Your camera's worst enemy is d-i-r-t. Dirt can make your picture appear hazy, jam your shutter or spot your films. Therefore, periodically clean your lens according to the directions in your camera manual.

Don't use the same fluid with which you clean your eye glasses, because this contains chemicals which destroy the special coating on the photographic lens.

Clean the inside of your camera with a soft brush and don't forget to clean in and around the film-spool cavities. Don't neglect the outside, because in time, fine dust on the outside could work its way into your camera.

The 12-page Maintaining Your Still And Movie Camera And Projector presents basic information for the maintenance of all kinds of cameras and projectors. Special directions can be found in your camera or projector instruction manual. If you have mislaid the manual, write to the manufacturer of your photographic equipment.

Pin-Ups Still Calendar Favorites

NEW YORK (UPI) — The pinup girl — barer than ever in some cases — and even the pinup boy account for a good share of art on 1973 calendars, but there's something for everyone from vintage truck buffs to gardeners.

A noticeable trend is the inclusion of blacks in new picture calendars, following the lead of the advertising and greeting card industries.

Updated

The calendar has come a long way from the Aztec calendar stone, which one commercial firm is copying on paper this year — updated, of course. Calendars can be comic, educational, inspirational, titillating, crusading and practical. They come in all sizes and shapes from old fashioned wall calendars to calendar diaries, notebooks, address books and desk accessories.

Although the retail sale of calendars is on the increase, about 90 per cent of calendars still are distributed gratis by industrial and commercial firms to their customers and distributors. These often have set themes and change little from year to year.

Some firms have cut back on free calendars because of the high cost of printing, according to industry sources. One is Monsanto, whose calendar reproductions of modern artists such as Picasso and Seurat are worthy of framing and much sought after.

A well-printed calendar with art reproductions cost well over $1 each if printed in the U.S. Consequently many such calendars including Monsanto's are printed in Europe or the Orient where costs are lower. Japan Airlines' superb calendar photo album of rare porcelains, sculptures, bronzes, textile, lacquers, pottery, enamels and screens is printed in Japan but is still costly enough to warrant a $3 price tag.

"I won't say there is finer printing in Europe, but for the same price we get better quality than in the U.S.," said Louis Davidson of Calendar International of New York, a leading designer of quality calendars.

Newest entry on the retail market is a calendar put together by Evelyn Carter, a Detroit housewife, and called "Eve's 12." It features photographs of nude but modest males for the woman who wants to assert her right to think of men as sex objects.

More educational is the Liberated Woman's Appointment Calendar which lists an event in progress toward women's rights for every date along with photos, cartoons, quotations and poetry. Philip Morris' Virginia Slims book of days has a similar format but a lot more wit.

Unblushing

The unblushing great-granddaughter of the Gibson girl is cavorting in the altogether or near-altogether on 1973 calendars. Playboy's annual contribution follows the 1972 playboy magazine trend toward more uninhibited poses of its playmates and less airbrushing.

"On the whole, I'd say the pinups are not much more daring, but there are more of them this year," said Jack Robbins of Encore Sales Corp., a big Manhattan commercial calendar firm. "They are very popular in small towns, in garages and shipping rooms. And it's the small towns, too, that still go big for religious calendars with scenes from the new testament — the kind morticians give away."

Ridge Tool Co., of Elyria, Ohio, is loyal to the pinup girl and the demand for its tasteful calendar mounts every year. It now distributes 600,000, some to customers overseas. It takes a temporary staff three months to fill all the requests.

"We start with pretty girls (painted by artist George Petty) but switched to photos by Peter Gowland, the famous Los Angeles photographer, about 10 years ago," said Carl Keck of Ridge. "We stick with two-piece bathing suits and poses that are not suggestive."

Gowland's 1973 girls came out nine blondes and three brunettes. Where have all the readheads gone?

"They died out," Gowland said. "Rita Hayworth was the last. Everybody in California wants to be a blonde. It's even hard to find brunettes."

Hallmark, which offers 36 calendar designs, has one in the form of a culinary almanac with menus, recipes, wine selections and cooking hints, and its garden almanac has gardening charts and horitcultural advice. There are Hallmark calendars plumping for ecology, picturing dogs, cats, horses and babies, and providing weekly horoscopes for every astrological sign.

Cars, Trucks

Vintage car calendars have been collector's items for a decade and International Harvester comes along with a 1973 truck calendar ranging from the 1916 Model F snoop nose to the 1961 International Scout. Almost no calendars have a patriotic or historical theme in spite of the approaching U.S. bicentennial but American Cyanamid Co., pays tribute to Experience Michell of Plymouth, Mass., the first tanner in the U.S.

Norman Rockwell's annual contribution to calendar art — the Boy Scouts of America calendar — is a handsome portrayal of scouts and astronauts saluting against a background of rippling U.S. flags. The girl scouts appointments calendar has heartwarming pictures of young scouts at study and play. Both calendars are racially integrated.

Splurge on Barbecue

By MARY MOORE

This is extravagant but I get so many requests for barbecued spareribs from our readers who are big spenders that I splurged too.

Five pounds of lovely meaty back spareribs cost $5.12 and served six. So for the ribs alone without the trimmings it cost 85 cents per serving. Maybe you can find spareribs on "special" in your community and can enjoy this popular dish.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS

5 lbs. meaty back spareribs
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. thyme
1 medium onion sliced
3 c. water

Sauce:
¼ c. brown sugar
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
Two-thirds c. pineapple juice
½ c. chopped onion
¼ c. catsup
¼ c. lemon juice
1¼ c. water
3 or 4 drops Tabasco (optional)

With heavy knife cut ribs into portions of two ribs each. Place in deep saucepan, add salt, thyme, onion and water. Bring to boil, then simmer covered one hour.

Drain. (Save broth for Thursday's lentil soup.) Place ribs in large shallow roasting pan.

In a bowl combine all sauce ingredients. Spoon over ribs. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. basting and turning two or three times, for 1½ hours.

Lovely served on noodles or fluffy rice.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents for each specified recipe.

'Net Contents' Labels Soon for Containers

OTTAWA — Anyone who has struggled with a fluoride toothpaste tube, trying to squeeze out the last few toothbrushfuls and anyone who has lost his temper when a still-filled aerosol can of disinfectant spray quits has discovered a basic rule of thumb in this technological age.

"It's not what the manufacturer puts in, but what the consumer-you-can get out that counts." Right?

Well, the federal government agrees with you. And the health department is proposing to take steps to at least try and partially rectify the situation, in favor of the consumer.

The health protection branch is proposing to change drug labelling regulations under the Food and Drug Act, to require manufacturers of drug products to list the "net contents" on container labels as the amount of the product the consumer can expect under normal use to get out of the container.

At present the net contents on the label of drug products refers to what the manufacturer puts in — and if it's in a tube or aerosol can, somebody up there seems to be betting you can't get it all out.

The proposed changes would affect a host of consumer, over-the-counter drug products and proprietary medicines, as well as prescription drugs.

For example, fluoride toothpastes and other toothpastes containing an ingredient for which the manufacturer makes medicinal claims are considered to be drugs.

Similarly, salves and aerosol disinfectants are also considered to be durgs and would be affected.

It should be noted that the proposed changes will not change the reality of the situation: it will still take a lot of ingenuity, luck and-or brute strength to get all of what the manufacturer puts in his tubes and aerosol cans out again.

But the more realistic "net contents" should make it seem like a psychological victory over just one of the many frustrations of today's consumer.

The labelling proposals are just part of a series of proposed changes to drug regulations listed in a letter to industry signed by Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health. The letter requests comments from industry by the end of February.

Other proposed changes would in effect up-date present regulations concerning such things as drug content uniformity, homogenuity, dis-integration, sterility and pyrogenicity.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, Dec. 7, 1972
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Versatile approach gains objective. Friendly manner now wins allies. All is not milk and honey. Contractual dispute is indicated. marriage or business partner expresses ideas which conflict with your own. Find alternative procedure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check proposition which seems a "sure thing." In actuality, there are flaws. Applies to personal as well as business relationships. One services may have other ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get welcome chance for change, excitement of discovery. Virgo could be involved. Accent is on romance, creativity, relationship which is growing in intensity. Nothing now is apt to happen halfway.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lie low. Time is on your side. You can afford to play waiting game. Permit mate, partner, close associate to take lead. You require co-operation of family members. There has been minor upheaval at home base.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Encounter truth without running from it. See people, situations as they actually exist. One who should know better acts in contrary manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money finds its way to you. Financial decisions are featured. Press for favorable arrangement. Strive to enhance security. Consult one who has benefit of experience. Accept responsibility. Invest in your own ability.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Best to round out project, assignment — don't try new tricks, gimmicks. Stick to what is familiar. Family members, home environment — these are spotlighted. Aries could play significant role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hold off on short journey. You may get better advantage by waiting for call, message. You have something of value to offer. Know it and refuse to be intimidated. What occurs behind scenes works to your advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What appears to be a sure profit could dwindle to a break-even point or less. Be aware of hidden costs. One who purportedly does favor may ask for much in return. You get nothing for nothing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Doors open and you gain additional chances for advancement. Horizons are enlarged. Your view now enables you to see areas previously blocked. Sagittarian could be in picture. One in authority makes room for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You sidestep obstacles. You are able to make contacts which develop into meaningful relationships. See and be seen. The future is now. Maintain that attitude and you will achieve goal.

PISCES (Feb.-March 20): Not wise to listen to friends where investments are concerned. Key now is to be analytical. Arrive at your own conclusions. Basic change is in offing. Opposite sex is involved. Be cautious in signing any legal document.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, a spiritual person, concerned with rights of underdog. Much travel indicated this month along with relief of emotional pressure. Your views will be sought and you will have greater opportunity for self-expression.

Channel Tunnel Reality?

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — A 140-year-old scheme to bore a tunnel under the English Channel, linking London and Paris, may beome a reality within the next decade.

A recent British-French announcement said the proposed tube would burrow 180 feet deep in the chalk below the channel seabed and run approximately 35 miles from a point between Dover and Folkestone on the English side to Sangatte near Calais on the French side.

U.S., British and French financial houses are putting up money for the project which is expected to cost $896.7 million, informed sources said. The target date for completion of the project is 1980. The rail journey through the tunnel would take 31 minutes and the complete London-to-Paris train trip 2 hours and 40 minutes, slashing the time of the present boat train by five hours.

The British and French transport ministers, John Peyton and Robert Galley, have signed an agreement with the banking groups, assuring government support for the technical and financial studies of the project. The studies are due to be completed in July, 1973, and construction is expected to get under way at that time.

The tunnel would be driven through chalk that is believed to be 75 million years old. Promoters of the project said that geological samples of the channel seabed show that a tunnel would be safe.

The tunnel plans envisage passenger trains running up to 150 miles per hour and linking Britain's chief cities with Paris, Lille, Brussels, Rotterdam, Cologne and Milan.

The tube is expected to attract business to the depressed coal mining and textile mill areas of northern France.

Co-Op Beats Mortgage Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Roger Lebrun, a Toronto factory worker with five children, has wanted to buy a house for the last 15 years. He just couldn't seem to save the big down-payment needed.

He wanted to put several thousand dollars down to trim his carrying charges, but with his $8,800-a-year salary and the $3,500 his wife earns if she works part-time as a postal clerk he found it impossible to save that amount.

"I couldn't have done it," he said. "The down payment would have killed us. As far as I was concerned we were never going to own a house."

Next August Mr. Lebrun will move into what he considers the next best thing to home ownership—the Alexandra Park co-operative housing development at Queen and Bathurst streets in west-central Toronto.

The cost for his four-bedroom townhouse will be $825 down and a monthly payment of $187 that includes taxes, hydro and heating.

He is neither buying nor renting. He and other residents in the 103-unit development will own the buildings co-operatively. If he decides to move the co-op will return his down payment. He will never have individual title to his unit.

The $1.7 million project, excluding cost of land, was initiated in 1969 by the Citizens Housing Committee, a group of Toronto residents interested in housing. They decided to try to establish a type of home ownership for persons not poor enough to qualify for public housing but unable to afford to buy a home at current market prices.

The development, with one-to five-bedroom townhouses and small three-storey apartment buildings, covers a 2½-acre site with the land leased from the city at $25 a unit a year.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has agreed to pay 95 per cent of the cost and the group intends to raise the remainder through member loans and donations.

Monthly payments will be geared to income. Those in $70-a-month single-room units with shared kitchen-lounge and bathroom must earn between $2,800 and $3,900. Those in five-bedroom townhouses, at $192 a month, must earn $7,600 to $9,800.

The income figure is based on the total wage of the main breadwinner plus 50 per cent of the spouse's earnings, less 300 for each child over two years old. If income rises above the maximum allowable for his unit, a resident will be charged extra.

Based on the principles of non-profit co-operative living, each member will have one vote and it will be up to them to decide on rent increases, maintenance, house rules and other incidentals involved in trying to live in an experimental setting unique to Toronto.

In 1964, the first major group ownership development in multiple housing opened in Winnipeg, a 200-townhouse project called Willow Park. Three-bedroom units there rented for $128 in 1964. By 1971 the same unit's rent had risen to $155.

The largest development in Canada is Sarcee Meadows, a 380-unit project in Calgary.

In Ontario, aside from Alexandra Park, there is another being designed in Oshawa, one under construction in Ottawa and three others operating in London, Windsor and Mississauga.

"There has been a definite resurgence of the co-op philosophy in the last five to 10 years," said Mary Lewis, one of the main organizers of the Alexandra Park co-operative.

"It's the desire of people to have control over their own environment, the feeling that there are other things involved in living than just getting ahead."

Kindergarten Battle Shapes Up in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — Far from being just "kindergarten stuff," the issue of early childhood education in Alberta has turned into one of the most complicated educational problems the provincial government ever has faced.

The issue appears simple. Since it is the only province without established plans for publicly-supported pre-school programs, Albert, in theory, now can adopt the most advanced eductional systems and avoid the mistakes of others.

But legislators, educationists and parents can't seem to agree where to start or even whether it's worthwhile starting at all.

Into the already complicated debate is injected the sweeping question of whether standard educational programs are much value for five, six, or seven-year-olds.

The pressures on the government are enormous. Many people want an immediate start on a universal kindergarten system so Alberta children can "catch up" to other parts of Canada. Others say top priority must be given to the physically handicapped and mentally-retarded children. Some say a kindergarten system is needed only for children from "disadvantaged homes" where the atmosphere for learning is poor.

COSTS A PROBLEM

The government, at the same time, is facing unprecedented pressure to keep education costs down.

Most agree on at least one principle: that what a child learns before he starts Grade 1 may contribute more to his intellectual development than what he experiences for the rest of his life.

This important development, most agree, can best be nurtured in an atmosphere of warmth, continuity and security.

There the argument starts. One side says such an atmosphere can rarely be found in an institution. The other says that a well-run pre-school program can stimulate development through an atmosphere better than is found in most homes, where parents often have too many other concerns.

Rural areas often oppose kindergartens, not merely because the expense could hurt low-population areas more than in the city. What, they ask, would be the status under a universal kindergarten system of a mother who is reluctant to send her five-year-old 40 miles on a school bus at 30 below?

They get the argument that kindergarten attendance should be optional, that rural trustees could opt out of the system.

The rift is deep. The Alberta School Trustees Association has gone on record as favoring universal kindergartens. Yet Harold Gunderson of Calgary, president of the association, said in a personal statement that Alberta can't afford such a system and early schooling can harm young children.

The government has announced a partial position on the issue but this has only increased debate. A firm statement is promised for the spring session of the legislature.

Education Minister Lou Hyndman said in November that although a start may be made on some kind of kindergarten system by next September, universal kindergartens may be given a lower priority because of controversy about their worth.

The real question, he said, is how an early childhood education program should work, because it involves "75 variables with six options each."

The government bases its priorities on a report by L. W. Downey Research Associates, a private firm.

The Downey view differs from a commission report on the whole future of education in Alberta. This government-sponsored commission, headed by Dr. Walter Worth—now deputy minister of advanced education—said the most fundamental point of emphasis to be pursued in the development of early education "is that of universal opportunity for all five-year-old children."

JAMES BAY HYDRO LABELLED FEDERAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Legislation to develop the James Bay hydroelectric project is beyond the jurisdiction of the Quebec national assembly, a lawyer for Indians and Eskimos living in the area in northwestern Quebec told Quebec Superior Court Tuesday.

James O'Reilly told the court that the Indians and Eskimos historically have been recognized as the rightful occupants of the territory and the federal government alone has jurisdiction over matters that affect ecological changes.

The project envisages the harnessing of the hydroelectric potential of five rivers flowing into James Bay. Work is in the preliminary stages on the Grand River, on the first phase of the $6-billion project.

Mr. Justice Albert Malouf will hear further arguments today and is expected to take under advisement the request for a formal hearing of testimony. A decision is possible this week.

The petition, presented by 16 persons claiming to represent about 8,000 inhabitants of the area, seeks to have the court declare legislation dealing with the James Bay project unconstitutional and to order a halt to the development.

Mr. O'Reilly said the project involves an unconstitutional violation of the natives' right to make their living and that terms of the act which authorized the project are being violated through pollution of rivers, disturbance of wildlife and destruction of forests.

Fight for Standards —Hospital Chairman

WHITTOME
. . . "sense of confidence"

DUNCAN — Maintaining standards of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation contributes to the sense of confidence a community feels in its hospital.

This is why Phyllis Whittome, chairman of the board of the Cowichan and District Hospital, stresses these standards when she speaks to fellow boards members and the staff.

The purpose of accreditation is to provide consistent and conscious effort in providing care and service to patients, she explains.

"This does not mean just to provide better patient care," she says. "But it takes in the whole hospital picture."

She sees accreditation as an obligation "to serve patients in a better way with funds available."

The three-storey, 150-bed Cowichan and District Hospital was opened in 1967 and received full accreditation in 1969.

The regular reassessment of the hospital will be carried out in 1973 by Dr. L. O. Bradley of Toronto, excecutive director of the council.

Whittome is confident the Cowichan hospital will pass the test.

Another value of accreditation is that it allows B.C. hospitals—at the expense of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service — to take part in a program to assess and compare the quality of medical care and hospital planning. The program is called the Professional Activity Study.

The Cowichan Hospital Association joined PAS in November.

Whittome, who is the first woman chairman of the hospital board, said there are now 200 members of the association and many more are needed to provde more power and a broader community base to the hospital.

Anyone over 21 years can join the association which votes on all bylaws and elects members of the board.

500 Loggers Idled By Snow in Valley

DUNCAN — More than 500 Cowichan Valley loggers have been laid off due to snow and icy conditions.

In some areas up to three to five inches of snow fell Monday evening leaving temperatures in the twenties.

Many companies said the operations will probably remain down until Thursday.

VAN HORNE'S GOYA BRINGS IN $384,000

LONDON (CP) — A Goya painting from the Van Horne family collection in Montreal was bought today by a London art dealer for £160,000 (384,000) at a Sotheby's sale of old masters.

The successful bidder was the Brod Gallery. A spokesman for the gallery said the firm was not acting for any other group or museum in buying the Goya.

The painting is a portrait of an actress, Rita Molinos, by the great Spanish artist who died in 1828.

It was one of 13 paintings from the Van Horne collection being auctioned at Sotheby's. A Van Ruisdael from the collection fetched £64,000 ($153,600).

CONVENTION SET BY WITNESSES

A two-day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses will be held Dec. 16 and 17 in Victoria.

Several hundred delegates from southern Vancouver Island are expected to attend the gathering at S. J. Willis Junior High School. Together with non-delegates, more than 1,200 are expected.

Highlights of the program include ordination ceremonies Dec. 17 morning and a public talk. Is This All There Is?, to be delivered by Ernie Funk of Toronto at 2 p.m. Dec. 17.

Announcing an Exhibition of Pottery

by

Jeanne Sheppard of Victoria

DEC. 6—7—8

AT THE HAND LOOM

Come and see this colorful display of pottery, just in time for you to select for Christmas giving. Truly imaginative and charming for your own home, too.

Jeanne —

Born in Rustington, Sussex, where she was introduced to pottery by a very fine Russian artist, Jeanne has since spent more than half her life in Canada, and has lived in Victoria since 1950.

As a very small child she made pots. She later expressed her artistic talents by designing her own clothes, even shoes. She trained in drama, writing, ballet, art of mime, and has been potting seriously since she acquired her own wheel 14 years ago.

Jeanne's art reflects her many interests and natural talent. Her work has been shown along with other artists at the Newcombe Auditorium. This is her first one man exhibition.

Provincial 'Guidelines' Hit

The B.C. Federation of British Columbia Naturalists Tuesday protested against a new provincial forest service publication for failing to provide sound guidelines for the management of B.C. forest lands.

The five-page document entitled "Planning Guidelines for Coast Logging Operations" makes no specific mention of leaving permanent greenbelts along river banks and around lakes to protect the spawning grounds of fish and other resources, such as game and recreation.

Elton A. Anderson, president, said the federation, assisted by Dr. James Kimmins, a forester at the University of British Columbia, and Richard Wright, outdoor writer and photographer, have requested a meeting with Resources Minister Robert Williams.

The meeting has been tentatively set for Dec. 21.

Anderson recalled that B.C. Forest Service officials as well as former Socred minister Ray Williston had agreed to the need to preserve green strips along streams and lakes.

"But the new publication makes no specific mention of such strips and the word 'permanent' is nowhere used," he said. Emphasis throughout is on temporary protection of various kinds which will be removed in later years.

"Also not mentioned is a proposal to leave timber tongues running up into alpine meadow areas, a form of protection vitally needed in pretty well all areas in B.C.," he said.

Anderson said the federation and other environmental groups want all public lands planned for all users.

"We are opposed to single agency planning," he said. "A good example of single-agency planning was the building of the B.C. railroad alongside Takla Lake, north of Fort St. James. Widespread environmental damage was done to the land along the route."

A B.C. Forest Service official said the publication was planned and prepared about six months ago, prior to the election of the new government.

But he was at a loss to explain why the provincial forest service about a month ago insisted that a logging company cut the timber along the banks of the Eve River, situated north of Kelsey Bay.

Remanded in Custody

A 38-year-old man was remanded in custody in provincial court Tuesday, charged with armed robbery and theft of an automobile.

Alphone Alexander Plessis, of 314 Goldstream, was apprehended by Esquimalt police at 10:30 p.m., on Esquimalt Road, near Tillicum.

An hour earlier, Colwood RCMP said Monday, a man walked into the Devonshire Grocery, 808 Goldstream, just as the manager, Rose Cardy, was closing up shop. The man handed Mrs. Cardy a note, demanding cash from the till. He claimed he had a Colt .45 in his pocket and would "blow her head off" if she didn't pay up.

Mrs. Cardy refused, the man repeated his request, but still the manager refused.

Finally, the man demanded $20.

"Your life must be worth $20," he said.

Mrs. Cardy agreed, handed over two ten-doolar bills and the man fled on foot.

'Status Quo' Exceptions . . . That's the Peninsula Issue

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Community planning and preservation of rural areas in the face of increasing pressure from developers are top priorities in municipal elections on the Saanich Peninsula.

Water supply and distribution is another key topic, particularly in Sidney and North Saanich where residents protest water restrictions during dry summer months.

Sidney boasts the largest number of candidates for Council seats this year, partly because this body is being increased from four to six aldermen.

In addition to electing five council members, ratepayers will be asked to vote on a referendum to dedicate seven acres of land known as the Bowcott property for parkland.

The following people are standing for election to the three two-year terms as Sidney aldermen:

John Molyard, 2040 Melville is a 58-year-old realtor making his first bid for Council. He considers land development and zoning problems to be his forte and advocates closer ties between the municipality and the Capital Regional Board.

Patricia Merrett, 9552 Sharples, is a homemaker who emphasizes the importance of improvement to building codes "in order to assure citizens of good value when purchasing Sidney homes."

Sidney merchant Ald. Wilkie Gardner, 2525 Shoreacres is 59 and has served six years on Council. This year, Gardner has been chairman of finance and recreation committees.

The alderman says more attention should be given to provision of recreation facilities in the town and feels that inter-municipal discussion of water distribution could ease summer water shortages:

Ald. Fred Robinson, 9372 Maryland is also standing for re-election after two years on Council. A retired contractor, now working as a shipwright, Robinson, age 59, has headed fire and park committees.

"My approach to municipal government" says Robinson "is to strive for those things which benefit the community and to resist pressure groups."

There are three candidates for a one-year aldermanic post.

Leslie Michael Nunn, 2442 Amherst, is 27 and a sheet metal worker who has helped with recreation for young people for several years. More Council support is needed to involve local youth in organized activity and to cut down vandalism, says this candidate.

John Hamilton, 49, living at 2211, Henry, is a retired navy officer who is also a management consultant and professional engineer.

"I feel Sidney has grown a bit too quickly, it is time for us to consolidate and spend time beautifying the town" says Hamilton.

Len Siver, 34, operates a motel at 2300 Beacon and advocates controlled recreational development including the establishment of more municipal parks.

Four candates are contesting the one-year Council term left vacant by the resignation of Ald. Hugh Hollingworth.

Eleanor Sowerby, 9884 Fifth, is secretary of Sidney Recreation Commission. A former teacher, Mrs. Sowerby has been deeply involved with a program of community recreation.

The need for organized leisure time activities, community use of schools and more park development is emphasized in Mrs. Sowerby's platform.

Larry Gudmundson, 2193 James White Blvd. has been a barber in Sidney for 18 years and says he has sampled a good cross-section of community opinion!

Gudmundson wants better facilities for tourists and is against dedication of the parkland proposed by council.

Hilary Lewis, 2253 Malaview, runs her own business as a public stenographer and, until recently, was secretary of Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Lewis urges beautification of Sidney's parks, upgrading of building standards and a recreation program geared for non-competitive young people. The candidate is in favor of changing parking patterns on Beacon for two blocks "as a traffic experiment."

Peter Malcolm, 2018 Courser, is a 34-year-old stockbroker and says that Sidney must plan growth so that it is a self-controlled community rather than a suburb of Victoria.

In Central Saanich where Mayor A. M. Galbraith was re-elected by acclamation, five candidates are contesting three Council seats.

Ald. T. G. Michell, 3015 Island View, is a farmer who has served on Council for 12 years. Public works and fire protection committees have been Ald. Michell's responsibility recently.

The alderman describes his campaign platform as "more organized recreation for all ages — with the taxpayer's pocket book at heart."

Ald. W. E. Clayards, 1217 Mt. Newton Cross Rd. has succeeded, during his four years on Council, in obtaining reduced fire insurance rates for this municipality, bringing Central Saanich into line with Sidney.

Clayards, 48, is a personnel administrator and has received support from Council and UBCM for a resolution on deduction of municipal taxes from federal income tax. Clayards also urges formation of a Saanich Peninsula inter-municipal committee.

David Hill, 1899 Hovey, is a Saanich fireman making his second bid for a Council seat.

President of Central Saanich Recreation Commission, the 30-year-old candidate is dedicated not only to more organized recreation but also to preservation of the municipality's rural character.

Former Saanich School Board trustee Zachary Hamilton, 2918 Lamont, is running for a Council seat. Hamilton proposes to work on a viable scheme to relieve old age pensioners of property and school taxes.

David Price, 896 Clark is assistant traffic manager with B.C. Ferries. He is already involved with community affairs as trustee on Brentwood Water Works District board and as commanding officer of Sidney Air Cadet Squadron.

Price wants to guard against runaway growth in Central Saanich and preserve the rural atmosphere. He also advocates better communication between council and ratepayers.

A fierce battle is shaping in North Saanich where three incumbents are being opposed by three newcomers to municipal government.

Ald. Douglas Boon, retired, 832 Downey, is seeking his second term of office. As chairman of the planning and zoning committee, Boon has, he says, been the driving force behind the more restrictive bylaw on subdivision and land development.

Ald. George Aylard, 1435 Wains, is a farmer with seven years on Council. Born in North Saanich, Aylard says he has a deep feeling of responsibility for local control and planning.

Ald. George Cumpston, 11338 Chalet, is a retired chartered accountant seeking a third term on Council. The former finance committee chairman says that North Saanich has built up a financial position which has been the envy of other munnicipalities.

"I believe in the preservation of North Saanich's rural character" says Cumpston, adding that the natural influx of population must however be provided for.

Dr. Kenneth Martin, 365 Moses Point Rd. is director of Medical Services at Glendale Hospital and is making his first bid for Council. Martin advocates the immediate development of a community plan.

Richard Kirk, 1127 Maple Rd. is plant manager of a forest products company in Victoria. Kirk says North Saanich is threatened by urban development, "there is real danger that we may become merely another suburb of Greater Victoria."

Richard Thuillier, 790 Ardmore Drive, is a civil servant running for Council because, he says, municipal planning is being carried on in a haphazard fashion.

Ottawa's Translation Department Snowed by Words

By JEAN-GUY CARRIER

OTTAWA (CP) — Official bilingualism and the wordiness of government have built the federal translation bureau into a growing enterprise that churns out enough words each working day to cram a closely-printed, 80-page newspaper.

From modest beginnings almost four decades ago, the federal bureau of translation has grown into a $15-million-a-year operation.

But the outpouring of documents in English, French or other languages that need translation into the two official languages is such that a backlog of work persists.

About 700 translators and nearly 300 clerical workers turn out more than 140 million English and French words a year. To help with regional needs, satellite operations are being opened as far afield as Chilliwack, B.C., and Fredericton.

OFFICE ONCE SMALL

When the bureau was created in 1934, it was thought that 60 people, only half of them translators, were sufficient to handle all the country's bilingual needs.

"Everyone had to have two tongues in his mouth then," recalled a veteran translator. Since enactment of the Official Languages Act in 1969, translation has been refined to the point where individuals now are hired as one-way specialists, for the translation of French to English or vice-versa.

The only people still called on to be bilingual are the members of the 30-man corps of parliamentary debate translators.

In the early days of the service, the favorite recruiting areas were the newsrooms of Montreal and Ottawa newspapers. One recruiter recalled how he nearly cleaned out the newsroom of Ottawa Le Droit one season.

DEFRAYS STUDY COSTS

As the country inclined further towards bilingualism, the bureau found it increasingly difficult to fill essential posts.

The result was the creation in 1968 of a bursary system whereby the bureau defrays the cost of putting a student through a three-year linguistics course in return for three years of service after graduation.

Most recruits are French-Canadians from the Ottawa and Montreal areas. About 100 students have since gone through the program and another 200 are enrolled.

Even so, the bureau still has unfilled positions. Consequently, the normal time for translation of an average document is three months.

It is estimated that at any one time 12 million words are waiting to be translated. It is impossible not to have a backlog, bureau officials maintain.

"It's like unemployment," said one officer. "It's improbable we'll ever bring the backlog down to zero."

In addition to the usual English and French load millions of words must be translated into the two official languages from Russian, German, Chinese or other languages.

FARM OUT WORK

Much of this specialized work is handled by individuals retained on a temporary basis. The bureau farms out work to private translation agencies. The current budget for such contracts is $1 million a year.

Translators' salaries range from $6,140 for a novice to $18,376 for a sub-section head.

Many of the present corps of translators are women, as are a majority of the recruits in training. Bureau official turnover rate is higher than in other branches of the public service.

One effort to speed up the translation process is the creation of a computer terminology bank. The idea is that someone translating a physics paper could have physics terminology before him by pushing a set of buttons.

The bureau has already accumulated 130,000 files of such specialized terminology.

It has generally been assumed that as the number of bilingual persons in the public service increases the work of the bureau will decrease.

Not so, claim officials, since documents will always have to be translated, and they account for nearly all the workload.

SEE MILITARY NEED

The recent spread westward is occasioned mainly by a new program of assigning translators to Canadian Forces Bases.

Thus there will soon be military translators in Edmonton, and Chilliwack.

Translators are also being assigned to work with federal departments in cities whose populations have requested and shown a need for such a service.

Winnipeg will soon acquire a unit. Civilians in Edmonton have requested one but it's unlikely they'll be able to justify it at present, said a bureau official.

Even the past is undergoing the translator's scrutiny.

In Ottawa, translators left idle by the dissolution of Parliament have been translating the debates of the Confederation Parliament of 1867.

Pleads Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Zdenek Urbanek, a non-practising doctor, pleaded guilty Monday to evading payment of income taxes on income of $123,730. He was remanded until Friday for sentencing on one count of evading income tax and on three substantive counts of making false statements on income tax returns. He was arrested Sept. 5 when he arrived at Vancouver International Airport from Geneva. He has been in custody since then, unable to raise bail totalling $50,000.

CLIP AND TRY THIS DELICIOUS ROGERS' RECIPE

Fruit Cake

½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup Rogers Golden Syrup
3 well-beaten eggs
½ cup ground almonds
½ cup chopped almonds
6 tablespoons orange juice
¾ cup chopped dark raisins
¾ cup chopped light raisins
¾ cup chopped glacé fruit (cherries, citron, orange, etc.)
2 cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon cloves

The day before baking, sprinkle chopped fruit with 4 tablespoons of the fruit juice. Leave juice to soak into fruit. Preheat oven to 300°F. Cream butter and sugar. Beat in syrup and eggs. Sprinkle fruit with ground almonds. Sift flour, soda and spices. Sprinkle fruit with enough spiced flour to make a dry mixture you can handle with your fingers. Add spiced flour to butter mixture alternately with 2 tablespoons fruit juice. Fold in floured fruit and chopped almonds. Bake about 2 hours in a six-inch pan 2½ to 3 inches deep (middle sized Christmas cake pan).

NOTE: Line pan with several thicknesses of greased brown paper or foil. Fasten a jacket of brown paper, cardboard or newspaper around cake pan to help cake bake evenly.

KEEPING IN TOUCH with the problems of a portfolio is one of the key jobs of a cabinet minister . . . and it requires work in the field, as well as the constant scanning of reports and other documents. And, in no other portfolio is this so evident as the ministry of health. Former health minister John Munro highlighted his holding of the post with a well-publicized four-year battle to give up smoking. New minister, Marc Lalonde, is attacking the problem from another angle . . . keeping a healthy heart. Here he rides an exercycle while Dr. Charles Pierce, of Ottawa, keeps a close watch on his pulse and other responses.

Shape Up, Kids, or Santa Is Going to Ship Out . . .

FORT LAUDERDALE — If the kids don't shape up, Santa might leave the Coral Ridge shopping centre and go back to the North Pole long before Christmas.

First a bunch of kids pelted him with candy then, later, another one stole his wallet.

"I'm not jolly any more," said Santa, alias George Underwood. "I don't dislike the kids but, man, some of them are really being rotten.

"I was passing out candy to about 100 youngsters and some of them started pelting me with it," he said. "I don't know what to do."

Underwood, 26, a big, robust man with a moustache and the father of an 18-month-old girl, works on weekdays as a cable locator for the telephone company.

"Most of the kids are really great, but there are a few who try to pull off my beard and call me a fake," said Santa. "I take those kind aside and tell them: 'Shape up, kid, or Santa will belt you.' Then I smile at the kids waiting in line."

BRIGHTON, England — Police have asked female pedestrians to wear miniskirts at night in the interests of safety. A police spokesman said girls in revealing miniskirts are more easily seen at night than those wearing maxis.

PARIS — Retired Gen. Humberto Mariles Cortes, 58, the Mexican Olympic equestrian star who spent six years in prison for killing a man and who was arrested 11 days ago on drug charges, has died of a heart attack in Santa prison. Mariles was arrested Nov. 25 with seven other men and four suitcases containing a quantity of heroin which police said the group was arranging to ship to Mexico.

SYDNEY — Margaret Whitlam, wife of Australia's prime minister-elect Gough Whitlam, says she can see no reason why marijuana should not be legalized.

In a TV interview Mrs. Whitlam said: "You know I just don't indulge in that particular pastime, but I understand from medical friends it does you no more harm than drinking, not even to excess, nor smoking regular cigarettes.

"So if this is the case medically I can see no reason why it shouldn't be legalized."

MONTREAL — Julian Biggs, 52, noted film-maker and former director of English production at the National Film Board, has died following a brief illness. Biggs was involved in producing or directing more than 200 films for the NFB, many of which won international awards.

CINCINNATI — Robert Mitchell, on trial for robbery, stood up in the courtroom and punched his lawyer in the mouth.

"Maybe this will get me a new trial," Mitchell said as he was led away. It didn't.

The judge sent the case to the jury. Attorney George Bunyan withdrew from the trial and went to a hospital for treatment.

Damn the Spills Say Tanker Port Planners

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces appear to be planning full speed ahead—and damn the oil spills—for supertanker ports big enough to handle ships carrying moe than 100,000 tons of oil.

And, it appears that the two federal departments most concerned, environment and some parts of the transport department, haven't yet been consulted.

At least six sites, two each in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, one each in Quebec and Newfoundland, are being developed or considered for deepwater harbors.

The idea is to run pipelines from refineries near these ports down into the oil-hungry, populous and rich northeastern United States. They see it as a boon to economically-depressed areas.

However, Robert F. Shaw, deputy environment minister, says "ports for supertankers shouldn't be built without major studies into possible environmental effects."

He was the only official who would allow his name to be used in checks on how far planning has gone.

An engineer now in charge of environmental protection, Mr. Shaw made it clear he considers supertankers inevitable off the coasts and probable in the St. Lawrence.

U.S. Would Help

"If the Americans need oil, maybe we should help them get it," he said in an interview. "But we don't need supertanker ports if we can't protect the environment, too."

A number of oil companies and major developers are looking into the potential of Canadian ports, with or without official sanction.

"It's difficult to comment," said one official with energy, mines and resources. "The proposed sites are provincial jurisdiction."

The only way the federal government could counter infringement on environmental regulations, currently not stringent on potential spills, would be through control of navigation in international or interprovincial waters, or by exerting pressure through regional economic development money.

So far there have been no official request for funds, said one source.

Some money has gone into navigational improvements in areas where harbors now can take large oil tankers, including the Canso Strait of Nova Scotia.

Sites either being developed or marked for possible use include Port Hawkesbury and Point Tupper, N.S., Saint John and Lorneville, N.B., Come By Chance, Nfld., and the St. Lawrence south shore in Quebec where Ile Verte, Cacouna, Grande Ile or even Quebec City all have been suggested.

Mr. Shaw said that from an environmental viewpoint an onshore site where there was "good flushing action" is best.

"Actually, Chedabucto Bay near the Canso Strait, where there was a major oil spill of 16,000 tons from the Arrow in February, 1970 is a pretty good flushing harbor."

Danger Off Island

Canada was pretty lucky that the first major spill was there.

"The Straits of Juan de Fuca off Vancouver Island are much worse."

Suggestions that supertankers might be brought into deep harbors near Vancouver, such as Roberts Bank made environment officials pale and spokesmen for other departments choke.

"That would be more contentious than the eastern ports," said one in energy, mines and resources.

At the same time, if supertankers used Juan de Fuca Straits to go to Cherry Point, Wash., would Canada be any better off in prohibiting them from entering Canadian ports?

"This has to be considered in terms of industrial strategy," said another official, who didn't even want his department named. "It's very much bound up in the whole energy policy."

Another policy question involves whether the Atlantic Provinces should be developing supertanker ports to bring oil from overseas markets when there is a good possibility of domestic off-shore oil development in the area.

"When we look at development of facilities for imported oil, we have also to consider development of our own off-shore resources," said the energy, mines and resources spokesman.

"It is likely that a lot of the oil brought into these ports would be for export to the U.S."

"That's the potential Canadian market, too.

Mr. Shaw said it is likely the U.S. will be looking into the possibility of floating off-shore port facilities for the big tankers. Any country interested in a secure oil supply will have to consider having jurisdiction over its own ports for that supply, he added.

Off-shore ports are considered more feasible now and Mr. Shaw said that the least damaging place for an oil spill— "and not even that is good, just less damaging"—is the middle of the ocean.

The federal government has a pollution claims fund to help pay for pollution damage. Contributions to the fund are levied at a rate of 15 cents a ton of oil landed at or shipped from a Canadian port.

As well, it has provision for heavy fines and indemnities for offenders and is participating in international conferences on compensation for oil pollution.

Mr. Shaw however, continued to stress that environment studies should be done first.

Protest Scheduled

RYCROFT, Alta. (CP) — A demonstration of Peace River farmers will go on as scheduled here today, a spokesman for the National Farmers Union said today.

Anne Hemmingway said about 300 farmers are expected to participate. The demonstration was scheduled to focus attention on the plight of farmers whose crops were damaged or wiped out by weather conditions.

Tip Top's 'Beat·the·Rush' Gift Guide

Not exactly as illustrated.

Holiday Fashion Finds in Suits

If the guy in your life is on his way to the top, he should dress like it. For him, Tip Top presents great value in a two-piece suit.

Classic pin-stripes (above) or solid blues, greys and browns. It's very much the traditional approach to business dressing, this time, with an eye for fashion details: broad lapels, deeper vents, bolder pockets.

FROM $89.88

And to go with it—or any other suit—dozens and dozens of dress shirts. Fancy patterns, colours on colours or solids. Some with our own Tip Top label and some from famous shirt makers. But all, exceptional value.

FROM $7.99

The final touch. A tie that brings out the best of the suit and shirt. Tip Top offers racks of bold beauties in wool or silk, striped, patterned or solids.

FROM $5.00

What if you can't make up your mind? Tip Top solves the problem with easy-to-get, easy-to-use gift certificates.

Sweater and leather. Great together

More casual time means more time to dress in real comfort. And that means sweaters. And Tip Top's ready. Tweedy Shetland turtlenecks, racy ski styles, crewnecks, cardigans . . .

FROM $12.00

Leathers. They look great. And they last practically forever. And Tip Top's got them. Suedes, finely finished leather, reversibles, lined and unlined. Super looking jackets (hip or mid-thigh length) and elegant coats.

FROM $65.00

And sport shirts. Great looks all alone or under a sweater. Knit or woven, plain or patterned. For the same shirts you'd pay more anywhere else.

FROM $7.99

Plaid comes boldly back

Tip Top presents warm, woolly, but certainly not wild, plaid jackets. In dozens of colourful ways to warm up a Saturday. They come lined or unlined.

Or if plaid isn't his thing, we've many many more great coat and jacket looks in every style and cloth. One thing in common is the value.

FROM $16.95

Slacks, cut the way he (or maybe you) likes them. Executive (just a hint of flare), flared (more than a hint) and 'baggies' (wide from the hip down). Solids and fancies. Wovens or knits.

FROM $17.98

What goes with all this? Gloves, scarves, jewellery, socks, underwear. And it's all at Tip Top.

Putting it all together

The secret is putting the right jackets with the right slacks with the right shirts with the right . . . And Tip Top makes it easy.

Start with a sport coat or blazer. We've got them glen-checked (above), also in plaids, tweeds, herringbones and classic solids. And, as ever, all of Tip Top's jackets represent tremendous value. We can sell them for less because we tailor them in our own factory.

FROM $59.88

Try a jacket with a sleeveless sweater. This year argyle patterns (Remember?) are back. Plus dozens of other smart designs and plains.

FROM $8.00

And then, tie it all together with a belt. Tip Top has them bold and brassy or more dressed-up in soft, finely tooled leathers.

FROM $5.00

What happens if you buy him the wrong size? No problem. At Tip Top we exchange purchases without batting an eye.

Hovercraft Horizons 'Could Expand'

LONDON (AP) — Intercontinental hovercraft could get passengers from Britain to Japan in one-tenth the time it takes an ocean liner to make the trip.

That's the word from Jane's Surface Skimmers, 1972-73, annual survey of hovercraft and hydrofoil technology compiled and edited by Roy McLeavy.

McLeavy, in a foreword to the 331-page compendium, says hovercraft offer tremendous opportunities for use in the Arctic.

"The vehicle would be employed for moving people and cargo across the ice-cap between Arctic and northern terminals as well as to southern posts," he wrote. "They would also support oil and mineral extraction and scientific observations.

"A major role would be the trans-shipment of semi-processed materials, such as food and furs, and of construction materials and machinery."

McLeavy noted that in the Soviet Union, such machines, known there as ekranoplanes, are to be built for high-speed service in areas that normally are impassable in winter.

RUSSIANS LEAD

"The first production models will be of relatively modest size compared with the giant research machine built in the Soviet Union several years ago," McLeavy observed. "It will travel within a few meters of river surface at acruising speed of about 130 knots. In this important area of air cushion vehicle technology, the USSR is substantially ahead of the rest of the world."

McLeavy said the "pioneer hovernauts" were right when they predicted 16 years ago that hovercraft would completely change the face of surface transportation.

"But," he added "it is doubtful if they could have foreseen the full dramatic impact. . .."

In one week this year—March, 1972—four Mountbatten hovercraft operated by the nationalized British railway system and by Hoverlloyd carried 29 per cent of the total passengers and vehicles ferried across the English Channel between Britain and France, he said.

Yet, the four 190-ton hovercraft represented only one per cent of the total cross-channel ferry displacement operated in that particular week.

"Conventional ferry operations may well pause to contemplate the outcome when the present hovercraft fleets are doubled or even trebled, and that the routes of larger, third generation craft are extended to Normandy, Brittany and the Lowlands," said McLeavy.

Jane's Surface Skimmers is published by Sampson Low, who published the noted Fighting Ships and Aircraft annuals, at $18.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

To Be or Not To Be . . . Highrise-wise . . . Is Oak Bay's Issue

Highrises — whether they should be allowed in the municipality or not — emerge as a major issue in Oak Bay's aldermanic election.

Eight alderman candidates, three of them incumbents, are entered in Saturday's election.

The polls will show whether residents are in support of the majority of council, who have strenuously opposed the encroachment of such massive developments as the project for the Windsor block.

Ald. Douglas Watts has supported Mayor Frances Elford in her contention that such developments are needed to broaden the tax base.

If Watts is returned together with two new faces on council it will mean that residents believe that this premise is correct.

The other two incumbents running for re-election are Ald. Shirley Dowell and Ald. John Goult.

They with others on council contend that tax benefits, gained from high-density development, are so minimal that they are too high a price to pay when balanced against the loss in esthetics.

The eight candidates, in alphabetical order, and their platforms are as follows:

Frank Butler, 1187 Victoria, real estate manager for Brown Brothers Agencies Ltd.

Butler states that high-density highrise construction is incompatible with maintaining "the unique residential characteristics of Oak Bay."

He says, "All municipally-owned lands should be retained for future generations. These could be developed on a long-term lease basis, including the riding academy, which could provide complete recreational facilities, including an ice arena."

Burke Cahill, 2427 Nottingham, teacher at Esquimalt high school.

"Huge towers which shadow and blight the landscape have no place in Oak Bay," says Cahill, "Some lowrise apartments, compatible with neighboring homes may be of benefit."

Cahill wants community projects to include greenways, walkways and more open waterfront.

Ald. Shirley Dowell, 3270 Upper Terrace, running for second two-year term.

Mrs. Dowell says she is opposed to any proposals which would allow the spread of apartment construction into areas presently zoned for single-family dwellings.

"Highrises," she says, "detract from the esthetic standards of the community and further inundates our community with cars."

She sees holding a referendum on the financing of an ice rink and swimming pool as the "only democratic way."

Humphrey Golby, 1418 Newport, semi-retired and associated with a real estate company.

Golby includes in his platform — Preserving the quality of life in the municipality and support of the mayor in her efforts to bring "a positive approach to municipal affairs."

Golby says he favors "a sensible and totally realistic sale of the riding academy property so that the capital costs of needed sports facilities will not be reflected in the taxes of the individual home owner."

He has stated publicly that he would be in favor of eight-storey apartments on the academy land.

Ald. John Goult, lawyer, of 1605 York Place, also seeking his second two-year term.

Goult says, "The over-riding issue continues to be high-density development. Further highrise zoning must be stopped. Construction standards for all apartments in areas presently zoned must be improved."

Stating that federal and provincial grants will probably be available to help with construction costs of a sports complex, Goult says a referendum on financing should go to the voters in 1973.

Harry Graham, 633 Radcliffe Lane, a retired professional engineer.

Graham says, "Primary attention should be given to the desires of residents rather than developers in areas where new developments are proposed."

He wants to restrict the building of apartments along the Oak Bay waterfront. Graham also says that needy pensioners on fixed incomes should have deferred property taxes.

Neil Rawlins, 2090 Carnarvon, a B.C. Telephone supervisor.

Rawlins says, "I would like to see a recreation centre built in Oak Bay, financed through the sale of the riding academy property, which could be developed under existing guidelines set by council."

He has stated publicly that he would favor nine-storey apartments on the site.

"Stringent controls on rezoning," he says, "are needed to protect the interests of the individual home-owner and to preserve the unique character of our municipality."

Ald. Douglas Watts, 2285 Woodlawn Crescent, professional engineer with the provincial government and council veteran of 12 years.

Watts says, "I want to see action now to obtain our swimming pool and skating rink at no further cost to the taxpayer, indeed, a saving from the tax revenue apartments on the academy site will provide."

"My aim is the finest quality of life for all our citizens," he says, "I support tight zoning control to protect our residential quality and character."

WHALERS DROP BLADES

NEW YORK (AP) — New England Blades of the Eastern Hockey League have suspended operations for the remainder of the season.

League president Norm McLean says the Blades ran into problems last week when New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association terminated a working agreement with the Baldes and recalled three players owned by the WHA club.

"People who don't buy their macaroni in cartons aren't getting their money's worth."

Catherine McKinnon has it right.

The Catelli carton protects your macaroni in shopping carts or delivery boxes so it won't tear or spill. You can use half, reclose the box and store it on your shelf. Try that with a cello bag.

So if you aren't buying your macaroni in cartons, you really aren't getting your money's worth. Especially the new economical 2 lb. size. And famous Catelli spaghetti, too.

Japanese Art Show

Japanese works of art from the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria's collection will be exhibited at Toronto's Royal Ontario Museum.

The exhibition, opened Monday by the Japanese Ambassador to Canada, includes 100 works of art, at least three of which would be regarded in Japan as national treasures.

Most of the items in the exhibition are from the collection which Mrs. Fred Pollard of San Francisco has been purchasing for the Gallery since 1962.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old man was sentenced Tuesday in Provincial court to a total of 10 months in prison on charges of possession of heroin and breaking and entering and theft by Judge William Ostler.

Steven Paul Maloney, address unknown, was given 10 months' imprisonment on the July 14 charge of heroin possession and 10 months concurrent on the Nov. 23 breaking and entering and theft charge.

"It is always a grievous matter to see a young man ruining his life with heroin," said Ostler, in sentencing the man.

Maloney requested that he carry out his sentence at a forestry camp, having expressed a desire to relieve himself of the heroin habit. Ostler agreed that such a course of action would indeed help the man.

★ ★ ★

A 22-year-old man was sent to prison for a total of eight months, the sentence to be followed by an 18-month term of probation, for possession of heroin, hashish and three counts of theft under $200.

Raymond Douglas Brown, 1731 Cook, was described by Ostler as "another thoroughly decent young man" whose life has been ruined by drugs.

Brown was given eight months in prison and 18 months' probation on the charge of heroin possession.

He received eight month concurrent sentences on the charges of hashish possession and theft under $200.

★ ★ ★

Michael Ward Shaw, 25, of Waterloo, Iowa, was fined $25 for possession of a small quantity of hashish.

Ostler said that the usual penalty for this offence — probation — would be inappropriate in Shaw's case as the man was a U.S. citizen.

★ ★ ★

Murray Stephen Smith, 26, of 1731 Albert, was given a suspended sentence and six months probation for a Nov. 20 charge of possession of hashish. He was also fined $50 for a charge of possession of marijuana. Both charges arose from a police raid on the accused's home.

★ ★ ★

Donna Lee Fortier, 18, of 1024 Pandora, was given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months' probation on two charges of uttering.

Ostler set out three conditions for Fortier's probation. One, she should obtain psychiatric counselling, two, she should seek vocational training and three, she should avoid the company of any local individuals connected with drugs.

★ ★ ★

Dennis Lennard Schaffer, 20, of 2091 Parkland, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation for possession of MDA.

Schaffer was apprehended Sept. 23 by police while the occupant of a car. Police check revealed two capsules in the car's ashtray. Later, these capsules were found to contain the drug MDA.

★ ★ ★

Two persons were fined by Judge Harold Alder $350 and $250 in traffic court for driving while impaired.

Alfred H. Lacey, 40, of 31 Oswego and Robert Fummerton, of 127 Virago, were each fined $350.

Robert John Pinniger, of 1728 Amphion, was fined $250 for impaired driving.

GARDENING

Don't Be Discouraged By the Snow and Cold

The reaction of local gardeners to a hard frost on the heels of a mild spell, reflects their concern with living things. When snow occurs later in the same period, there's real consternation.

To those in the process of creating a winter garden we say, don't be discouraged. You will lean much about the micro climate of your own garden and about your plants from this experience.

Plants with large evergreen leaves were the first to look floppy and dejected after Sunday night's low temperature. Wind was also a factor to be considered, since it removed moisture from leaves just as thoroughly as does cold.

Grass level temperature at our place reached a low of 13 degs. F. during the night, a great gap between it and the air low of 22 degs. F.

* * *

Since the plants are at grass level, it was easy to account for the limp leaves of Bergenia cordifolia; and the ice of the two little pools. The violets, which have been blooming for a month or more, now look as though they will never produce another flower or new leaf. But we know all will be well with them again by spring.

Shrubs having tiny or narrow leaves appeared quite unaffected. In this category were such tender plants as Callistemon from Australia, Rosemary and the Lavenders from the Meditteranean, and the various heaths and heathers. The flowers on the winter heathers continue to open even under the snow.

Hellebores hate wind of any kind, summer or winter. Our two species, H. niger and H. orientalis, are flat on the ground with their color darkening rapidly. But no permanent harm is likely.

Other evergreen shrubs with broad leaves seem quite unaffectd, though we know humidity was down to around 30 per cent on Monday before the snow fell. Oxydendrum, whose leaves are still a lovely scarlet, rhodos, pieris, and various evergreen Viburnums were in good shape late on Monday.

* * *

In the vegetable frame without a cover, Swiss chard, chervil, winter lettuce and American (Land) Cress all still as good as ever. This is the extent of my winter vegetable garden this year, but from experiences in past winters, kale, leeks and parsnips are improved in flavor by a hard frost.

The difficulty is in digging the frozen soil for the last two. Jerusalem artichokes (with tuberous edible roots) lose nothing by one or two frostings in the ground.

For convenience if the weather pattern seems inclined to persist, lift enough of these vegetables for a few days whenever the soil is unfrozen. Store them in a really cool place until needed. They will still be fresher produce than can be bought.

Types of protection for the few tender ornamental shrubs needing it when grown in local gardens, will be illustrated in Jack's Saturday column, outlining also their uses and limitations.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an accepted fact that more games are lost at trick one than are lost at any other trick. Today's deal is another "statistic" in substantiation of this point.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

♠ Q 3
♡ A Q 7
◇ K Q 10 4

WEST
♠ K 5
♡ 9 8 4 3 2
◇ A 9 5 3
♣ 7 4

EAST
♠ J 10 9 8 7 2
♡ K 5
◇ 6 2
♣ A 6 5

SOUTH
♠ A 6 4
♡ J 10 6
◇ J 8 7
♣ Q 10 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

From a technical point of view, North's correct opening bid should have been one notrump. Had he made this bid, he would have become the declarer at three notrump, instead of South. In all probability, North would have fulfilled his contract. South, as will be observed, didn't.

In response to East's overcall, West opened the king of spades, South winning the trick with his ace. The jack of diamonds was then laid down, West's ace capturing the trick. West returned his remaining spade, which was taken by the board's queen.

After cashing dummy's diamonds, declarer led a club off the board. East climbed right up with his ace, and cashed four spade tricks. Thus declarer incurred a two-trick set.

Actually, had declarer been a good guesser, he could have made his contract by attacking clubs first, instead of diamonds. If he had done this, East would have won the ace and returned a spade, dummy's queen winning.

West would now have no more spades. When declarer subsequently went after the diamond suit, West would take his ace. Since he would have no more spades, there could be no return he could make that would prevent declarer from cashing two spades, one heart, three dimaonds, and three clubs.

But declarer's shortcoming of not being a good guesser was not his mistake, for he could have made his contract whether he first attacked either clubs of diamonds. All he had to do was to allow West's king of spades to capture the opening lead!

West was known to have, at most, two spades, for if he amonds, and three clubs. would have opened the third highest, not the king. When West would next lead his remaining spade at trick two, dummy's queen would win.

If diamonds were then attacked, West would take his ace, but he would have no spade to play back. And if, upon winning the second spade lead with dummy's queen, declarer chose to attack clubs, East would take his ace. Although East could now establish his spade by leading it, he could not regain the lead to cash his spades.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 2368 for the game today. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget both types of decimals, roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, 62 — 8 plus 3 is a solution for 57.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 96. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

Yesterday's answer: VENUS was 37651.

LONDON (AP) — British industry is a white world where those of a different color have a long, hard climb to the top.

Discrimination is keeping non-whites on the factory floor, mainly handling the dirty, low-paid or dangerous jobs that whites don't want, say two reports.

The non-whites apparently get little help from trade unions to break barriers of what an official survey called "unthinking discrimination."

But a cabinet minister has ordered that moves toward equal opportunity must be made.

The two examinations of the country's industrial setup pricked Britain's racial conscience as problems in this field mounted with an influx of 26,000 Asian refugees from Uganda. They arrived here in a time of high unemployment —with almost a million out of work, including 22,000 non-whites.

The recently published results of a government survey reflected official anxiety that industry was doing little to promote integration at the work bench. A significant BBC television report followed.

The government survey was carried out in 1970, when Britain's non-white population totalled 1.37 million out of 56 million. The non-white community has since risen to 1½ million.

PROD MANAGEMENT

The survey of seven companies, ranging from engineering plants to chain food enterprises, was a follow-up to Britain's Race Relations Act which outlawed discrimination on grounds of race or color.

The employment ministry said several of the firms it polled had defied "intimidation" from some employees against promoting non-whites to senior posts.

But a ministry spokesman said the survey was aimed at prodding management to "take positive steps to ensure equal opportunities."

Robin Chichester-Clark, the department's minister of state, said: "Increasingly it becomes clear the major obstacle is not active, blatant discrimination, but the passive often unthinking, acceptance of unequal conditions by both management and workers."

The survey said there was cautious optimism that things were getting better.

But the BBC broadcast, one day after the survey was published, said non-whites were still beisg handed only the unwanted jobs.

The BBC said some trade unions refused to accept non-whites, especially among the skilled textile and steel workers of Britain's industrial north, where some trades are jealously guarded and handed down from father to son.

FEAR CLASHES

The Trades Union Congress, umbrella organization for Britain's 10 million organized workers, said its policy is "to recruit as many people as possible, including non-whites, into trade unions."

But a spokesman, while refusing to comment on the BBC's allegations, stressed: "We cannot order unions to accept non-whites."

The government survey said many non-whites who were suitable for promotion never got the chance because middle management was afraid to be "the first to break the ice" and risk clashes with white employees.

Yet, the survey emphasized, a poll of 280 white workers in the seven firms "suggested there might be less resistance on the shop floor than was feared."

Some firms claimed to have made major efforts to promote non-whites, but said they found many immigrants lacking in educational qualifications, experience and often adaptability.

American Harvest Bogs Down

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — An unusually wet autumn in the middlewestern United States has bogged down the harvest schedule and may cost American farmers millions of dollars.

The storms have left fields too wet to harvest and unable to bear the weight of heavy farm equipment.

Especially hard hit are grain and soybean farmers in the Wabash Valley of Indiana. A year ago, Warren Langdon's grain elevator in Wabash processed 100,000 bushels of soybeans and 150,000 bushels of corn in November.

By mid-November this year, his elevator had handled 30,000 bushels of corn and 100 bushels of soybeans.

'Operation Help' Far From Done Job

By RALPH JOSEPH
CP Correspondent

KABUL (CP) — A huge effort has been mounted to get food and supplies to thousands off Afghan peasants facing starvation for the second time in a year. Some estimates of the death toll in at least six Afghan provinces have put it as high as 80,000 already but officials are reluctant to confirm this on the plea that it is impossible to draw up an exact figure.

When earlier relief operations failed, King Mahommad Zahir set up an independent commission Sept. 25 to carry food, medicine, blankets and muslin for clothing to an estimated 100,000 starving peasants in the provinces of Ghor, Ourizgan, Faryb, Badghis and Herat. Their work was to have been done within 60 days, and with only a few days to go, the special commission claimed to have "virtually completed" its task.

The commission is entirely independent of the government and has been given powers even to dismiss the governor of a province should he fail to co-operate with the relief teams.

IS DIFFICULT AREA

But Operation Help's work is not yet really over. Still to be tackled is the province of Badakhshan in the difficult northeastern part of the country bordering on the Soviet Union. Here, as the official report says, "a number of deaths have occurred due to starvation and "many men, women and children now are surviving by eating grasses." There are estimated to be about 60,000 starving people in this province of about 250,000 population.

"The urgency of relief in this area," said a report drawn up toward the end of October, "is even greater now because snow has already closed some of the passes in the higher altitudes and thousands of needy people are already inaccessible.

"Changes in weather threaten to close even more passes and make more of the needy population inaccessible until the late spring by which time many will likely die of starvation or disease."

Plans were to get sufficient food to the villages by Dec. 10 at the latest. Already an official team sent to investigate the number of deaths here has confirmed a toll of 500 people "from starvation, disease and other causes," though unofficial estimates had put the figure at a maximum of 12,000.

As in the case of the work in the central highlands and the northern part of Herat province, the specific job of Operation Help is to get about 200 pounds of wheat to each adult threatened with starvation in the distressed area and half that amount for each child. This worked out to some 10,000 tons of wheat for the central highlands—said now to be almost all distributed—and another 6,000 tons for Badakhshan province.

SHORTAGE IS GENERAL

Officials in Operation Help say there is enough wheat in the country to take care of the emergency needs. Friendly countries, including the United States, Australia, the European Community, Canada and even China, have donated a total of over 150,000 tons. Part of this has been reserved for relief, and the rest sent to other parts of the country to ease the general cereal shortage.

Also being distributed by Operation Help are dried milk and soybeans, which like cereals, are high in proteins. Blankets, muslin and shoes are being handed out because the stricken people had become so desperate that they sold everything they had, including in some cases their land, in order to buy food to survive.

However, some 40,000 blankets still are needed in the distressed areas, and officials say that if they don't come through on time, many people may die of cold in the terrible Afghan winter, especially as malnutrition has lowered their physical resistance.

ARE OPIUM ADDICTS

One item on the list of medicines promised but not yet arrived is Nalaxone, the anti-addictive drug used to cure opium addicts. Among the diseases found rampant in Badakhshan by a medical team sent there was opium addiction, described in the official report as a "major health problem."

The difficulty of assembling the relief supplies at the Kabal headquarters of Operation Help is not the only problem of the team. Getting them to the relief centres in the remote areas by trucks and pack animals has been the biggest struggle and will be even bigger in Badakhshan. The relief teams were able to use convoys of six- and four-ton trucks in the central highlands, but Badakhshan's treacherous passes won't permit anything bigger than two-ton vehicles to get through.

USE PACK ANIMALS

Pack animals to be used in areas where trucks cannot go include camels, horses and donkeys. Operation Help hopes to get on with the distribution quicker by having the stricken people travel themselves to certain central points. Already riders have been sent out to the villages to inform the people of the food, blankets and medicines awaiting them at the distribution centres, and leaflets are also to be dropped by air.

To ensure that the whole quarter million population of the province don't descend on the distribution centres and leave the really needy ones still without food, the plan is to have a committee in each village to decide who needs help.

Old people, widows and children are to get relief materials free to see them through the six-month winter stretch. The able-bodied will get the food against written contracts for future jobs to be done by them for the government, such as road-building.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Chat Worth More Than Pills

I am often impressed with the fact that some of my grateful patients are persons for whom I did not work any spectacular cure or give any especially effective medication, but persons with whom I took the time to chat long enough to discover something that was worrying them. During the talk, I was able to help relieve them of some of their burden of worry or guilt about something.

I got a letter just recently from a woman who reminded me that she had seen several able doctors one after the other. She was thoroughly examined and had much laboratory and X-ray work done, but nothing significant was found. Because she still was miserable, she came to me, and we had a long chat during which she confessed to me that her husband had taken a mistress, and this had upset her tremendously. She says that now, after the good talk we had, she became reconciled with her husband, and since then she has been well.

I can take no particular credit for that, because doctors have been doing that sort of thing ever since the days of Hippocrates, who practiced 400 years before the time of Christ.

Many a time when I have had a fine, friendly priest for a patient, he and I have discussed this sort of method of helpiong people, and we have "compared notes" in a sense. Sometimes a doctor can straighten out a patient very much as a priest straightens out a parishioner who has been ill, worrying about some distressing feelings of guilt over perhaps an imagined sin that did not amount to much, or that only required someone kind to listen to and forgive.

There is no question that many faith healers, and even quacks, work some cures that doctors haven't worked, simply because what the patient needed was not medicine or an operation, but just someone to listen.

I know that when I was a boy, my doctor father in Hawaii used to see quite a few people who said that a witch doctor was "praying them to death" and so they sat down on a mat and died. My father could never talk such people out of their conviction. And that shows what faith — even injurious faith — can do.

COUTURE PATTERN

By LOIS HOLMES

A timely review of favorite Lois Holmes patterns seems to be in order for the benefit of the many newcomers to crochet. This will also allow regular readers to complete their collections with these special groupings which will be shown for the next few weeks.

Especially timely is this collection of accessories featuring a beautiful medallion shawl that is wonderously fast to make because it's mostly treble crochet. Equally gift minded but with a completely different shape is the peasant cape with its airy floating effect achieved by a chain mesh in double crochet variations and highlighted with a chevron design.

Added to these is a great-looking shoulder bag, artfully done in triple strands of bright-colored yarns with a big "K" hook. Its matching coin purse is made in single crochet as well as the pretty little drawstring bag with its star design and a petite replica for "mad money."

Directions also include a striking ethnic belt with a Mexican flavor in typical hot colors. All are made of inexpensive four-ply yarns, even leftovers. Fun to create and fun to give!

TO ORDER: 650-647 STOLE, CAPE, BAG, BELT AND PURSES, send $1.50 in U.S. funds plus 15 cents for mailing for the pattern (25 cents for air mail) in currency, cheque or money order to Lois Holmes of California, Victoria Times, Box 1005, Gardena, Calif. 90249.

Please print your name, address and pattern number plainly.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call.

SMOKE ROUTS CHURCHILL GUESTS

The fourth floor of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government, received an estimated $1,500 damage today after a tenant pulled a burning mattress into the hallway, Victoria deputy fire chief Cary Coates said.

Firemen were called at 6:36 a.m. and found the fire in J. Bereczk's room.

There were no injuries, said Coates.

Victoria firemen worked two and a half hours to extinguish a $1,500 fire Tuesday in a dry kiln at Smith Cedar Products, 651 Harbour.

Fifteen firemen and four trucks arrived at the shake mill shortly after 5 p.m.

The fire, started by spontaneous combustion, was in the centre of the kiln and bundles of shingles had to be removed to reach it, Coates said.

The roof was damaged and the fire spread to an adjoining roof.

A steep driveway, covered with ice, caused problems in getting the equipment to the fire.

"It was pretty dicey going down that hill," said Coates.

It was extinguished at 7:45 p.m.

Erosion Project Gets Gov't Aid

The government has announced that it will finance a $250,000 project to stop deterioration of sea-side cliffs on the Point Grey campus of the University of B.C.

Resources Minister Bob Williams made the announcement Tuesday in conjunction with officials of the Vancouver Parks Board and the UBC Alumni Association.

The cliffs are being eaten away gradually by wave action on the shore below. This action is now endangering buildings located near the edge of the cliffs.

Williams said the project will involve the construction of a layer of sand and gravel mixture poured at the bottom of the cliffs, brought in by sea. It is hoped the erosion will stabilize itself, leaving the cliffs intact.

The layer of fill will vary from 30 to 85 feet in width and will be 3,700 feet long. Parks board spokesmen said this method of protecting the cliffs would not necessitate the building of a road along the beach, which would not be welcomed by environmentalists.

It is expected the project will be completed by July of 1973.

ISRAEL TESTING NEW DE-SALTER

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli scientists are studying a new process to take the salt out of sea water. Authorities say it could help all water-short countries by cutting costs.

A million-gallon-a-day plant at the Red Sea port of Eilat is designed to produce fresh water 10 to 15 per cent cheaper than the most modern units in the West, and almost 40 per cent cheaper than older units.

If the test plant is successful, says Shaul Arlosoroff, Israel's deputy water commissioner, Israel hopes to build a plant with American aid in 1975 to produce 12 million gallons a day to irrigate farmland. Plans in the following decade are for a unit to pump 100 million gallons a day.

Most big conversion units are U.S.-type "flash evaporation plants," Arlosoroff says. The Israeli method, developed over three years and proved in small production, is called a "multistage horizontal distillation process."

It uses a new design of compressor, with aluminum instead of copper in the heat mechanism. No other details are being released.

The cost of desalting water varies in different countries, depending on local conditions, the cost of construction, fuel and other factors.

Desalting in Israel costs $1.50 for 1,000 gallons in big, fairly modern plants, said Arlosoroff. More up-to-date units could do it for $1 and the new process might bring the price down to 85 cents, he believes.

"We have reached the limit of utilizing our water supplies by conventional methods . . . by 1985 we will be in a crucial situation," Arlosoroff said. "We don't see any way but desalination to solve it."

Drinking water is not the problem. The shortage—already being felt—is in agriculture.

Only a quarter of this country's five million acres are arable. All agriculture depends on irrigation. Sprinklers are so common in the countryside that Israelis call them "Jewish rain." Ordinary rain falls only between October and March.

Gov't Takes More

TORONTO (CP) — Governments are taking more of your money, a study in the latest edition of National Finances, published by the Canadian Tax Foundation, shows.

Government revenues last year exceeded $35.1 billion or 37.7 per cent of gross national product, total value of all goods and services in Canada.

This compared with $31.7 billion or 37.2 per cent of GNP in 1970 and $11.4 billion or 28.7 per cent of GNP in 1961.

Much of the money is paid back to people or groups rather than being spent by governments on goods and services.

Government expenditures last year for goods and services totalled $22 billion or 23.6 per cent of GNP. A decade earlier it totalled $7.9 billion or 19.9 per cent of GNP.

Of the 1971 figure, 5.8 per cent was federal spending, 6.3 provincial, 8.7 municipal and 2.9 per cent went for hospitals.

Government revenue from taxes last year was 31.9 per cent of GNP, up from 24.9 per cent in 1961.

All government last year spent $1,623 for every Canadian, including federal spending of $602 per capita.

Fire Destroys Mobile Home

Fire severely burned a mobile home this morning at Hidden Valley Mobile Home Park, 2500 Florence Lake, in Langford.

Fire Chief Allan LeQuesne said the $12,000 home is "a write-off."

Occupants Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Shepherd were both away when the fire occurred and cause of the blaze is not known, he said.

GALLUP POLL

Jobless Issue Top Priority

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

When Parliament opens the new session Jan. 4, its first mandate from the majority of those polled (51 per cent) is to find a program to better the unemployment situation. Compared to the plight of the jobless, the people see all other problems as relatively unimportant.

Little more than one in 10 (13 per cent) rank the state of the economy and inflation as the government's most important job.

Two other main tasks are each named by less than one in 10 — better care of senior citizens (6 per cent) and an improvement in the handling of unemployment insurance and welfare programs (5 per cent).

All other jobs facing the new Parliament are each ranked as having top priority by less than one in 20 voters. These include such problems as taxes, the high cost of living, wage rates, U.S. control of industry, pollution, labor and separatism.

Apart from its concentration on finding jobs for workers, and the naming of other specific problems, some voters take a broad approach to the government's first responsibility. Said an over-50 woman in Toronto, "To do the whole job and balance all problems. An NDP voter in Winnipeg thought it should be "trying to make more people honest." Without honest people running our country, we're sunk." A retired RCMP officer in Vancouver said "to try to satisfy 20 million people." In referring to the importance of solving the unemployment situation, many used the phrase "get the people off welfare and back to work."

The study was conducted a few days before the election, on Oct. 20-21, with a random sample of 671 adults in at-home interviews across the nation. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a 4 percentage point margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

The question:

"After the election, what do you think will be the most important job the government will have to deal with?"

Here is how the people rank that most important job:

Unemployment; work for young people; jobs for everyone; make more work available	51%
The economy; inflation	13
Increase old age pensions; more help for senior citizens; look after the old; retirement at 60	6
Straighten out UIC; improve welfare program; increase baby bonus; help poor families	5
Lower taxes; taxes unfair; too high	4
High cost of living; high food prices	3
Increase wages; better wages	2
U.S. control of industry; foreign ownership	2
Clear up pollution	1
Labor problems; too many strikes	1
Separatism; bilingualism; problems of Quebec	1
Other (Including: immigration, housing, guaranteed annual wage; highways; education; farm problems, etc.)	8
Can't say	13

BANK HANDLING FUND FOR FAMILY

A cash fund for a North Saanich couple who lost two daughters in a fire Saturday has been started at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in the Beacon Mall, Sidney.

The single-storey plywood home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tom at 960 Pacquachin Lane on the Cole Bay Indian reserve was gutted by a fire which took the lives of Sandra Tom, 4, and her sister Polly, 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom escaped unhurt with their six-year-old son Harold and are staying with relatives.

Their most immediate need is for cash so they can put a down payment on another house, said a friend today. Until they have another home they cannot really use donated furniture or household articles, she said.

Funeral for the two girls was this morning at Sands Chapel of Roses in Sidney, with Rev. William Mudge officiating. They are to buried in Cole Bay Cemetery.

WEEKEND DECISION FOR SANDRINGHAM

Definite word on the last remaining issue in the 114-week strike against Sandringham Private Hospital will be given by the end of this week, co-owner Russell Shepherd said today.

"It will be yes or no, one or the other, by the end of the week. No later than Friday," he said.

The issue, the major stumbling block in resolving Victoria's longest-ever strike, is over the return to work of 24 strikers and the resulting displacement of those who have taken their jobs.

Shepherd met special mediator Jack Sherlock Tuesday in Vancouver.

Afterwards, Shepherd said they "went over the situation" but nothing was resolved.

Members of Local 1311, Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike Sept. 30, 1970, seeking a first contract with Sandringham, similar to others it has with three Victoria private hospitals.

VANCOUVER ELECTION:

all the intrigue of a Byzantine palace revolt

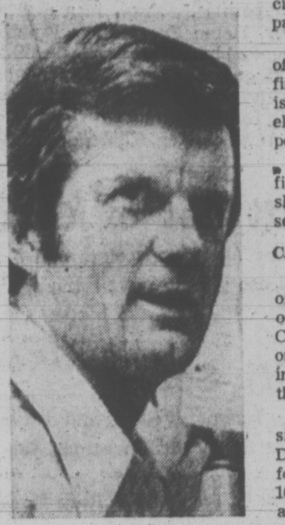
VANCOUVER (CP) — A civic election campaign with all the intrigue of a byzantine palace revolt ends a week today with rival armies of candidates fighting tooth and nail for the keys to city hall and 27 municipal offices.

The biggest prize in the city council chamber is a two-year term in the thick leather mayoral chair being vacated after six years by Tom Campbell, 43, the controversial millionaire real estate promoter whose mouth earned him national attention.

Mr. Campbell held the mayoralty for the Non-Partisan Association (NPA), which has dominated the civic scene since its inception 35 years ago. The NPA is being challenged this time on all fronts by three other political and quasi-political organizations.

And the NPA's mayoralty candidate, lawyer Bill Street, 50, has pulled out of the fight amid charges of conflict of interest.

There are four remaining candidates for the mayoralty: Alderman Art Phillips, 42, a lawyer; social worker Brian Campbell, 29; school teacher Angie Dennis, 29 and longshot independent Gordon Turner, 39.



PHILLIPS
. . . he's No. 1

DENNIS
. . . far back

An incredible 121 candidates are seeking the 10 aldermanic, nine school board and seven park board seats. The NPA has clear majorities on all three bodies going into next Wednesday's election.

However, the NPA is in for the toughest fight of its life since it was formed in 1937 to keep the old Co-operative Commonwealth Federation out of civic office, which it did with remarkable success.

Mr. Phillips heads a full slate of candidates from The Electors Action Movement (TEAM), formed in 1968 with the express intention of breaking the NPA stranglehold on civic politics. And the NPA has been riddled with internal dissension and defections.

The TEAM mayoralty candidate entered the race last January and he has been peppering the Vancouver electorate with television commercials over Canadian and American stations ever since, even during the recent provincial and federal election campaigns.

Campaigning on a platform of sound management of city finances, Mr. Phillips promises planned growth and development of an urban transportation system that works.

Two other organizations are fielding virtually complete slates—both of them representing the political left.

CAMPBELL HEADS SLATE

The Vancouver area council of the New Democratic Party offers a slate headed by Brian Campbell, rated a distant second behind Mr. Phillips coming down the home stretch of the campaign.

The Committee of Progressive Electors is backing Mrs. Dennis, the first Indian to run for mayor, and has nominated 10 aldermanic candidates and a handful of others for the park and school boards.

TURNER
. . . long shot

The fourth mayoral candidate is Mr. Turner, who says he's running because he wants a mandate to kick drug traffickers out of Vancouver. He says the city needs a "hard-line" mayor to clean up the drug mess.

CAMPBELL
. . . a remote chance

The Dec. 13 election marks the end of a rocky road for Tom Campbell, a loner during his early political career who later became the NPA's mercurial darling of the "law and order" set.

Dubbed "Tom Terrific" by friends and foe alike, Mr. Campbell once threatened to invoke the War Measures Act—used by the federal government during the October, 1970, Quebec crisis—against "dope pushers and other criminals" in Vancouver.

And it was Tom Terrific who once described opponents of a now-defunct bridge link to the north shore over Burrard Inlet as "Maoists, Communists, pinkos, leftwingers and hamburgers." He defined hamburgers as people without university degrees.

Chambers Join Fight for Name

The Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island has joined the battle to change the name of the new national park at Long Beach from Pacific Rim National Park to something more descriptive or historic.

The organization, representing 23 boards and chambers on the island, has written Indian Affairs and Northern Development Mininster Jean Chretien, asking him to choose a name by competition.

Other Vancouver Island MPs have also been asked to press for a new name.

Ever since the park was named Pacific Rim National Park in April, 1970, citizen groups have been pressing Ottawa to change the name.

They claim the name is too statistical and lacks color.

When it was first announced, one Island newspaper in an editorial said "dull Ottawa has staggered the people's imagination by the lack of its own.

Other citizen groups said the name Pacific Rim sounded as though two bureaucrats sat down in Ottawa over a cup of coffee and came up with the name.

Despite repeated requests for a change of name, Ottawa has refused to budge.

Biography of Common Man in Progress

VANCOUVER (CP) — William Langlois, director of a British Columbia oral history project, is collecting an "autobiography of the common man" by listening to the reminiscences of the ordinary working people who helped to build the province.

From February to September this year, specially-trained, unemployed university graduates have taped interviews with ordinary people, some of them in Finnish, French and Russian and in native Indian and East Indian dialects. There are 5,300 final pages of transcript.

As preparation, the interviewers, who received salaries of $100 a week, attended seminars and workshops on aspects of oral history.

For first four months the topical and biographical interviewers studied the heritage of the cultural communities they were to visit. Later they dealt with the Depression of the 1930s, the labor movement and life on the Gulf islands.

UTOPIAN DREAM

Typical of the people they interviewed is Arvo Tynjala, 75, a retired fisherman who lives in the Finnish rest home in south Vancouver.

Oral historians wanted Mr. Tynjala to tell them of his 65-year stay at Sointula on up-coast Malcolm Island.

The fisherman said Sointula —"the place of harmony"— was the Utopian dream of a group of Finnish miners disenchanted with the hard life, low pay and hazardous conditions of Dunsmuir coal pits of the Nanaimo area.

Led by Matte Kurikka, whom they brought out from Australia, the miners founded the community Dec. 6, 1901. Less than four years later, it had been destroyed by lack of capital, isolation, distance from markets and mismanagement.

Kurikka, who edited the community's newspaper, Time, left and disputes broke out. But most of the community, which never numbered more than 200, stayed on after the liquidation of the colonization company.

EQUIPMENT LEFT IDLE

"The miners didn't have an idea what to do," Mr. Tynjala said, "only that they would clear some land and grow food for their own needs."

At the time he did not know what it was like to have a community founded by poor, working people with no capital backing.

Mr. Tynjala, who was born in North Dakota May 14, 1897, arrived with his family and three other farming families a year after Sointula's founding, but their farming equipment sat idle for 40 years because no land had been cleared.

Mr. Tynjala helped form a fisherman's union and stayed in commercial fishing from 1911 to 1952.

He attributed the failure of the community mainly to "the usual economic reasons." Of his own contribution to history Mr. Tynjala said:

"When you live through a thing, it's just an ordinary life. Nothing worth mentioning that I can judge. It's just many questions for one man to answer, 65 years after."

Uhlman Firm Over Skagit Plan

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman said Tuesday he would not step in immediately to stop the city from proceeding with plans to flood British Columbia's Skagit Valley by raising the level of Ross Dam.

Although Uhlman stressed in a statement that he opposed the project, he said he would comply with "the law of the city."

That law is an agreement worked out between Seattle City Light and the former B.C. administration of W. A. C. Bennett to flood the Skagit Valley in southwestern B.C. with waters from the dam in northern Washington.

Uhlman responded to a letter from five city councilmen who said they opposed the project. There are four other councilmen but no indication of their position on the issue.

The recently elected New Democratic Party in B.C. also has said it would attempt to halt the project.

The mayor pointed to a city council resolution passed two years ago directing him to pursue the project by applying to the Federal Power Commission. Hearings on the application are scheduled early next year.

Flooding some 5,200 acres of B.C. would be a poor exchange for more power in Seattle, Uhlman said in explaining his personal position.

The Skagit Valley "is a unique asset," he said. "It can't be replaced once it is lost."

Uhlman said he had been in contact with B.C. officials about the project, but he would not say what was discussed.

In yet another related development, Seattle councilman Sam Smith, who with four other council members is seeking a moratorium on dam construction, suggested the city arrange to purchase additional power from the Bonneville Power Administration in lieu of building the dam.

"We wouldn't want to get into a situation whereby Canada would be saying, 'no, you can't come in and you can't do this,' and we saying we're going to do it anyhow," Smith said. "That's nothing to look forward to."

But Gordon Vickery, head of Seattle City Light and a BPA official, said such an arrangement would cost the city "tens of millions of dollars" even if the power were available.

"There's some very tight load resources problems that have to be resolved," he said.

3-YEAR TABS ON ASIANS

OTTAWA (CP) — For the next three years, the federal government will be keeping track of the economic and social adaptation of about 4,700 Ugandan Asians who came to Canada after being expelled from their own country.

In announcing the study Tuesday, the department of manpower and immigration also reported that less than a month after the final planeload of Ugandans arrived in Montreal, almost half of the 2,200 new immigrants registered at Canada Manpower Centres have found work.

Forty per cent of the Asians have settled in Ontario and 20 per cent in Quebec. Five per cent are living in the Atlantic provinces, another five per cent in the Prairie provinces and 30 per cent in British Columbia.

The Ugandans will be asked to fill out questionnaires, which will be issued six months after their arrival in Canada, then after one year, two years and three years.

Since Nov. 24, the department reported, 3,300 Ugandan Asians have been receiving temporary financial aid.

More than 175 of these people are enrolled in manpower training courses.

CRTC Ponders Broadcast Needs Of Elderly

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission may have a comprehensive study done on the type of broadcasting service needed by the elderly, CRTC Chairman Pierre Juneau indicated Tuesday.

Therese Desjardins, one of the organizers of a recent seminar that collected views of elderly persons on radio and television service, came to the CRTC hearing to make a submission for more programming for the elderly.

She said such programming could inform the elderly of their rights concerning such things as pensions and of services available to them.

Juneau said a Toronto group has already approached the CRTC asking for a comprehensive study of the issue.

He then asked whether Mrs. Desjardins and her associates would be able to participate in such a study.

She replied that they do not have the resources for such a project.

LOTTERY FOR GAMES

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the Montreal Summer Olympic committee wants federal permission to hold a national lottery to help finance the 1976 Games.

C. O. R. Rousseau said in an interview Tuesday that receipts from such a lottery would help pay the cost of the Games.

"We already have received 60,000 requests for tickets and those are mostly from the United States."

Basic Toy Still On Top

By JOHN BARBOUR

NEW YORK (AP) — Dreams are what toys are made of—the best toys anyway. And Christmas is the season for dreams.

And some dreams last forever, and some never make it to New Year's Eve, which is the trouble also with some toys.

And this is the time of year when parents take those child-scrawled notes for Santa to the discount houses and department stores to buy a melange of vinyl, wood, steel, tin, plastic, polyester and batteries. It all gets paid off two to three months later by which time the batteries are dead, quite often the toys with them.

But, anyway, here we go again. Saturday morning television ads have primed the kids; the shelves are full not with visions of sugar plums but with sleek motor cars, dolls almost alive, noise, excitement, the real thing!

"Today," a toy man said enthusiastically, "a youngster can actually drive a car, actually fly a plane.

"Today a doll in itself is not sufficient. A doll has to do something."

This year there are airplane kits which take up the whole living room. A motor-driven pylon revolves and flies a plastic plane at the end of a tether. The child controls it and tries to land on the deck of an aircraft carrier.

PLENTY OF DOLLS

This year there is the burgeoning assemblage of dolls that do and are done to. They talk, they walk, they wet and generally make a nuisance of themselves. Browsing through a showroom, one shopper made the mistake of turning on one of these frilly toys. But he couldn't turn it off again. So he stood there helpless and listened while over and over the doll repeated its message, until rescue arrived.

Said one toy man: "At the age of eight a girl is getting too sophisticated to play with dolls. She begins getting more into arts and crafts."

There are dolls who have elegant hairdos and wigs. There are dolls named Love, Soul, Music, Peace. There is also a doll's head the size of a child's that not only needs its hair fixed, but its face made up. That for a young girl who hasn't seen the first hint of acne and who won't clean up her room.

This year there is a talking football game. One player picks a small record disk with his choice of offensive play. The other player turns a dial for his defence and guesses at the offence. They push a button, the ball is snapped, and a sportscaster's voice describes the results with crowd noises in the background.

Then there is a variant on an old theme, an old parlor game, called the Feelie Meelie. It's a closed box, with a hand hole. A child looks at an object on a card and reaches into the box, sorting through a number of objects with his fingers until he feels the thing that matches the thing on the card. So simple. So old.

BASIC TOYS SELL BEST

The toy industry finds that the things that are basic, that allow the most latitude to the imagination, sell the best.

Probably no one has matched the sales records or the popularity of a game invented in the depression days in Atlantic City, N.J. Monopoly, or a game that relies on the profundity of the English language, Scrabble.

A toy man, flanked by the season's wares, explained that many toys are outmoded in two or three years. Some, a few, live longer.

"Potato Head," a boxed version of creating a character out of a potato, is 20 years old as a brand toy.

It says something of the needs of children. What they remember is what they give something of themselves to. Raggedy Ann doesn't blow bubbles, but she's still there when a lot of little girls get up in the morning.

$325M for Winter Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to spend about $325 million this winter on special projects that it hopes will generate 140,000 jobs.

The figures were announced today by Finance Minister John Turner and Manpower Minister Robert Andras when dealing with a $500-million program aimed at reducing winter unemployment over the long term.

The two ministers announced:

—The local initiatives program (L.I.P.) will receive another $80 million immediately, which, added to appropriations made this fall, brings the winter total to $165 million.

—$10 million more for the federal on-the-job training program, raising the total for this program to $50 million this winter.

—$60 million to various federal departments for labor intensive works and activities during the winter.

—Expenditure of between $50 million and $100 million this winter on a new three-year provincial-municipal capital works fund.

In the last case the total fund for loans and grants to municipalities to finance capital projects is $350 million.

Under this program loans will be made available to provinces and municipalities up to May 31, 1975. Part or all of the cost of labor will be refunded, depending on circumstances.

Mr. Turner said the new program will raise his cash requirement for the current fiscal year to $2.2 billion dollars from the May estimate to $2 billion.

He said this includes the heavy and unanticipated government expenditures for the unemployment insurance fund. He did not give a clear explanation of why he needed so little extra money, except to say that there have been some increases in revenues and some cuts in expenditures.

The finance minister said to the estimated $325 million to be spent this winter should be added a $50-million carry-over of spending from last year's employment loans program. This would bring total expenditures to $375 million.

The expenditure compares with about $300 million that Mr. Turner estimated was spent on winter works a year ago.

The government cannot be certain how much of the new money will be spent this winter under the new provincial-municipal capital projects fund.

Mr. Turner said that half the on-site labor costs incurred before the end of the program in 1975 will be deducted or forgiven from the amount of individual loans.

The government would pay 100 per cent of these labor costs if the work was incurred during the low-employment period of Dec. 1 and May 31.

The fund would assist in such capital projects as roads, streets, schools, public buildings, recreation centres and "similar priority projects" of municipalities and provinces.

As the government cannot be sure how much of these loans will be required this winter, it cannot say what its total winter-works outlay will be.

But Mr. Turner estimated that between $50 million and $100 million will be loaned this year.

Under a formula that takes

Cold Will Stay

Victoria's cold spell is firmly entrenched according to airport weather officials, and freezing temperatures are expected to continue for several days.

Slightly less wind is forecast however, after two days of steady 35 to 40 m.p.h. winds, which brought an extra chill to temperatures that ranged in the twenties to low thirties.

Weathermen say there is no sign of more snow.

Tomorrow will be sunny and cold with he mercury dropping to 20 degrees overnight and rising to a high of 32 during the day.

Officially, the temperature at the Vancouver International Airport fell to 22 degrees. But the weather office said that when coupled with winds that reached 45 miles an hour, it produced a chill factor of about three degrees above zero.

Homes in parts of West Vancouver and North Vancouver were without power for almost three hours during the night after a tree—toppled by the winds—crashed down on a power line.

The temperature was 11 degrees in Prince Rupert overnight and 10 below at Williams Lake — both record lows for Dec. 6. It was 34 below at Germansen Landing and 17 below at Prince George.

In east-central Alberta passenger and freight trains are restricted to 30 miles an hour because cold weather is shrinking the rails on Canadian National Railways' main line.

The speed limit on 40 miles of the line east of here was imposed, a CN spokesman said Tuesday, because the gaps at some rail joints had grown to five inches.

Guards, Baggage Checks Ordered at U.S. Airports

Homeward-bound Christmas holidayers at Vancouver are finding that it's easier not to wrap their presents until they reach their destination, because Air Canada personnel are tearing off the fancy paper to examine contents if any metal is detected. It's all part of anti-hijack security.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — U.S. Transportation Secretary John Volpe announced Tuesday two new anti-hijacking steps — the posting of armed guards at passenger gates before every flight, and mandatory inspection of all hand baggage.

Cost of these, however, will be borne by the airlines not the U.S. government.

Meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers said that the United States and Cuba now have a "foundation of an agreement" on a hijacking treaty.

Rogers' comments were echoed in Montreal by Captain Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association, who said a Canada-Cuba treaty for the extradition of aircraft hijackers is "virtually ready to be signed."

Capt. Simpson said "there are a few minor hitches left to be ironed out."

Volpe said that the mandatory inspections of hand baggage — to be done by airline employees — would begin no later than Jan. 5, and that airports would be required to deploy armed guards by Feb. 6.

At a press conference, Volpe reiterated the administration's opposition to a federally-financed airport police force and said that the costs of the new anti-hijacking measures would ultimately be recovered by higher air fares.

Initially, however, the airlines would have to absorb the expenses of the baggage inspections, and airport operators — city and county governments, or special airport authorities — would have to pay for the guards.

Tuesday's announcement was immediately greeted by protests from airport operators and lobbyists for U.S. cities, who said that airport policing should be a federal responsibility and that the extra costs would strain local tax resources.

One official of the Airport Operators' Council International estimated that about 80 per cent of the country's airports don't meet expenses with airport revenues (such as landing fees, parking income, and concessions) and, therefore, must be subsidized out of general tax revenues.

Although there were no reliable estimates of how much the new steps would cost, John Shaffer, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said that fare increases reflecting the high airline expenses would be no more than $1.

Volpe said that as many as 3,000 guards might be required at the 531 airports with scheduled service. The AOCI said the cost might run as high as $75 to $100 million.

Before leaving for Brussels Tuesday, Rogers met for 40 minutes with Silvia Masnata, the Swiss ambassador to Havana, and handed him what Rogers called "an American draft" of a hijacking agreement for Masnata to carry back to Havana.

Although much remains to be negotiated, the state department said, both sides now agree that a hijacking treaty should cover both planes and ships.

It is understood in return that the United States will agree to restrict terrorist activities mounted against Cuba by Cuban exiles from U.S. territory.

'I'M SHOT! HELP . . .'

BELFAST (CP) — Three young children watched their father die on a village sidewalk late Tuesay as one of Northern Ireland's worst days of violence drew to a close. Five men were killed within 24 hours.

The confirmed death toll rose to 655 in more than three years of communal violence in the province.

The father who died was a Protestant militiaman, William Bogle, 27, who had taken his family for a drive in County Tyrone. They were in the Village of Killeter when four shots hit the car.

Bogle staggered to the sidewalk and collapsed, crying: "I'm shot! Help me, I'm shot!" He died in his wife's arms.

Truman Condition Turns 'Serious'

KANSAS CITY (Reuter) — Former president Harry S. Truman, 88, was in serious condition in Research Hospital today, a spokesman said. Truman was admitted to hospital Tuesday suffering from pulmonary congestion. He was said to be in fair condition then.

U.K. Tanker Aground

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A British oil tanker ran aground in the East River off Manhattan late Tuesday night, creating a mile-and-a-half-long oil slick, the U.S. Coast Guard said today. The tanker, the 659-foot Vitta, owned by Shell Bermuda Overseas Ltd. and registered in London, went aground bow-first at high-tide.

Huge Gem Haul

LONDON (AP) — Jewels worth an estimated $1.8 million have been stolen from the London home of Swiss-born Maria Holder, reputed to be one of the world's 10 richest women.

Ottawa to Hike Defence Funds

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Canada told the North Atlantic Treaty Organization today that it plans to increase defence spending this year and improve the quality of its NATO forces.

James Richardson, the new defence minister, outlined the plans in a report to NATO ministers meeting here. (See also Page 2.)

Afterward he told newsmen it was too early to give a precise figure on the defence budget increase. Spending has been frozen for a number of years at about $2 billion.

"I would like to think the people are proud of their armed forces, think they are necessary and important and are not unduly concerned by the expenditure," he said.

Richardson said the budget must rise to meet increased costs and new equipment needs. He told his NATO colleagues that Canada is preparing to consider proposals from the defence industry for a new long-range maritime aircraft to replace the Argus now in use.

He mentioned a new radio relay system in Europe and improved anti-tank systems as examples of how Canada is moving to improve the quality of its NATO forces.

Canada is continuing to consider ways in which the effectiveness of its NATO forces can be improved without a significant change in size, Richardson told his colleagues.

NICHOLSON STAYING ON

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced today that Lt.-Gov. J. R. Nicholson of British Columbia will remain in office "for the time being."

Lt.-Gov. Nicholson announced earlier he would resign at the end of November for personal and family reasons.

Trudeau gave no indication of how long the lieutenant-governor might continue in office.

Moon Trip Era In Final Hours

Times News Services

CAPE KENNEDY — An era comes to an end tonight when the astronauts of Apollo 17 leave the earth, the last men to voyage to the moon in the $25 billion Apollo program begun 11 years ago.

Astronauts Eugene Cernan, Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans are due to depart at 6:53 p.m. PST, making them the last of 11 Apollo crews to fly into space, the last of nine to voyage to the moon and the last of six to land on the lunar surface.

"We've been too busy to get philosophical or nostalgic about this last scheduled mission to the moon," Apollo program director Rocco Petrone said at a pre-launch press briefing Tuesday.

"My personal belief is that the true meaning of the Apollo program will take many years to unfold, that the impact will only happen when man awakens to the limitless frontier that space exploration is."

The space agency permitted a night launch because of an increased confidence in its ability to rescue the crew in case of an emergency abort at liftoff. Previously, manned night launches were not allowed.

The world again will be watching as the trio make their journey to the moon, but will see less on television than during past lunar expeditions.

Citing decreased public interest, the three major television networks have trimmed special coverage of the voyage.

SOCRED ELECTION COSTS: $911,169

Expense statements filed with the chief electoral officer in Victoria show the Social Credit League spent a record amount in the Aug. 30 provincial election.

The league spent $911,169.40 compared with reported expenses og $526,000 in 1969. This does not include amounts spent by candidates themselves.

The Liberal party reported spending $223,754, compared with $156,000 spent in 1969.

Earlier, the New Democratic Party reported more than doubling its 1969 campaign expenditures of $79,000 by spending $190,867.61.

The Conservative party reported spending $159,566.19 while the Communist party said it spent $4,800.08.

Popular Cold Pills Worthless: MDs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Popular pills heavily advertised as remedies for the common cold — such as Contac and Coricidin — can't even relieve runny-nosed symptoms, let alone cure them, medical experts testified today.

Two doctors with long experience in colds research told a U.S. senate subcommittee the ingredients used in over-the-counter cold remedies — particularly anti-histamines — are worthless in treating colds and come in doses too small to do any good anyway.

They said the same held for non-prescription cough syrups. Americans spend close to $1 billion a year on home remedies to treat their coughs and colds.

"What is disturbing is that the American public spends large sums of money treating their colds with over-the-counter combinations which contain some ingredient that are essentially ineffective, and others, although at least potentially effective, in too low a dose to be genuinely useful," said Dr. Philip Norman, a medical professor at Johns Hopkins University.

Both he and Dr. Carl Arbesman, a medical professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo, said that virtually all cold pills contain anti-histamine compounds supposedly effective in relieving runny noses. But they said anti-histamines, while effective in allergies, don't help colds at all and that this has been proved by numerous studies.

"In summary, then, the 'cold remedies' obtainable without prescription have not been proven to be effective," Arbesman said. "The ingredients are not anti-viral and cannot cure colds."

Arbesman also warned that at least seven brands of cold pills contain aspirin but contain no warning on their labels to alert persons who are allergic to it.

Running down a list of several popular brands of cold pills, Norman described their contents."

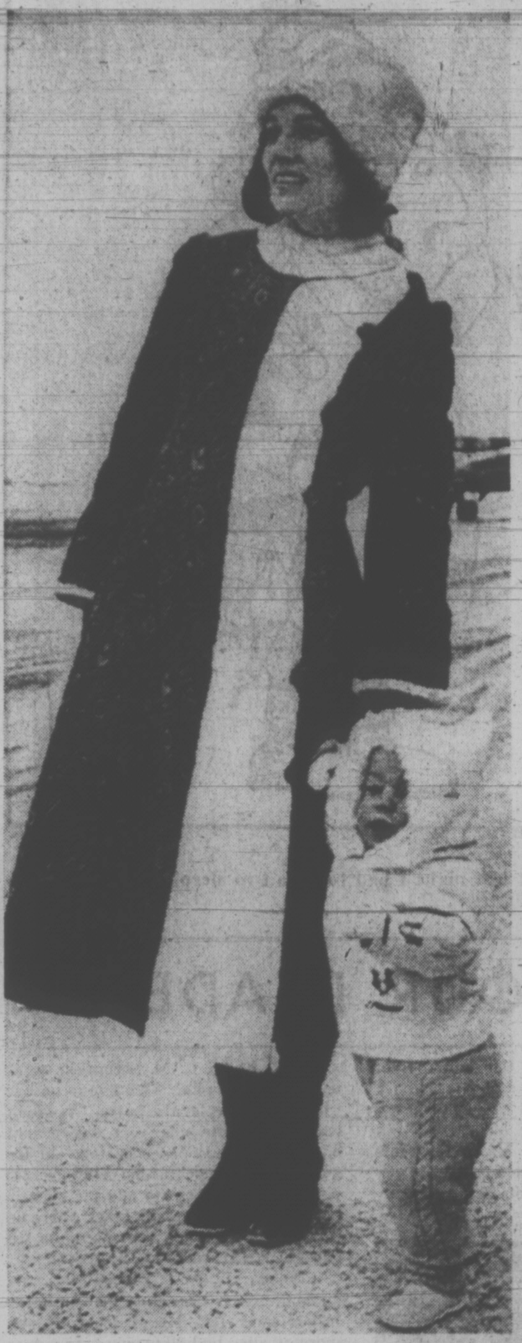
—Coricidin contains the equivalent of one Aspirin tablet and one-half the usually prescribed dose of an anti-histamine.

—Super-Anahist contains two anti-histamines, each one-quarter the usual dose, a bit less than one aspirin tablet, and a nasal decongestant at one-quarter to one-half the usual therapeutic dose.

—Dristan is composed of an anti-histamine at less than half the prescribed dose and a decongestant doctors only prescribe for external use.

—Contac contains small amounts of anti-histamine and decongestant in a time-release form that "retards absorption" so that it is impossible for the drugs to do any good.

Further, he said, Allerest claims to be for relief of "allergic colds," an ailment Norman said doesn't even exist and so must have come "from the imagination of an ad writer."



WAITING FOR DADDY at Ottawa airport is year-old Justin Trudeau, holding tightly to his mother's hand. Mother and child were on hand to welcome Canada's prime minister back from a weekend visit to England.

Breakdowns, Weather Plague Ferries

Engine problems and concern about subjecting passengers to rough seas upset B.C. Ferries schedules Tuesday.

The Queen of the Islands, the medium-sized ferry that runs between the Gulf Islands and the mainland terminal at Tsawwassen didn't make one Gulf crossing in Tuesday's windy and cold weather.

Her skipper was concerned that the seas would be too rough in the Gulf of Georgia so the ferry's passengers were diverted to Swartz Bay and then taken to the mainland by larger ferries.

Although the water around Swartz Bay was quite rough the stretch across the gulf was relatively calm.

Engine problems put the Queen of Vancouver, recently refitted, out of commission on the Swartz-Tsawwassen run. She is now at Tsawwassen where her crew are carrying out replacement repairs. She is expected to be operational again Sunday.

The Queen of Vancouver was replaced by the Queen of Nanaimo, which was taken off the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run.

The Queen of Nanaimo was half an hour late leaving on the 7 p.m. run from Tsawwassen because she waited for the bus diverted from the Queen of the Islands. She was also 30 minutes late leaving on the 9 p.m. run from Swartz Bay.

The Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run will not be short-shipped by the pulling of the Queen of Nanaimo until Friday when the weekend service is normally three ships, not two as during the rest of the week.

Also crippled by engine problems Tuesday was the Salt Spring Queen, which operates between Swartz Bay and Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

The Pender Queen will take her place until her repairs are completed, which will probably be late Thursday.

Meanwhile, officials said, repairs are being carried out on the Queen of Victoria, following her recent engine fire in Active Pass.

She is expected to be readied in time for the Christmas traffic.

Killer Gales Batter U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Winter gales battered the British Isles and surrounding seas today, killing at least six sailors and two motorists, flooding roads and homes and causing widespread damage.

Thirteen other seamen are missing and believed drowned.

The bodies of five of the dead sailors were discovered under an overturned liferaft in the English Channel. The coast guard said they were from the 1,957-ton Greek freighter Gold Coin, believed to have sunk off the coast of Kent. The ship had a crew of 17, and the other 12 men are missing.

A sailor on the British nuclear submarine Courageous was swept overboard off the Outer Hebrides and was presumed to have drowned.

On land, two men were killed when their car, buffeted by high winds, skidded into a truck on the icy Alloa-to-Dunfermline road in Scotland. A third man in the car was seriously injured.

Canada Refuses Entry To Stokely Carmichael

MONTREAL (CP) — Stokely Carmichael, leader of the All African Revolutionary Party, was refused entry into Canada Tuesday by immigration officials and deported back to the United States.

Carmichael, who was to appear at McGill University Tuesday night for a taping of the television program Under Attack, was ordered to fly back to Washington, D.C. following a 2½-hour meeting with his lawyers and immigration officials.

He had been declared inadmissible by Canadian immigration officials upon arrival and launched an appeal.

A second immigration officer was ordered to conduct what officials called a "further examination" and Carmichael was refused entry.

John Martin, producer of Under Attack for Screen Gems of Canada, said Carmichael had been in Montreal in the past for tapings of the program, sold to numerous private television stations across Canada as well as the major networks.

His last public visit there was in 1968 when he gave a speech before 1,500 student delegates to the Black Writers' Congress at McGill.

Martin said he "did not think the deportation was justified."

Immigration officials said he was deported under section five of the Immigration Act which decalres inadmissible "any person convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude."

They refused to comment on the nature of Carmichael's conviction.

Pub 'Revolution' Urge in Britian

LONDON — A long-awaited report Tuesday proposed a major easing of Britian's drinking laws to allow longer hours for pubs and the admission of children under certain conditions. The report, described as a blueprint for a "pub revolution," also suggested that the legal age for pub drinking be lowered from 18 to 17. And it predicted the development of continental-like cafes catering to the entire family with food and drink.

The proposals were generally welcomed by the British, who consume about 35 million barrels of beer a year, the equivalent of 30 gallons for each man and woman. But the prospect of children squirming around underfoot caused some alarm.

"Most people come to my pub to get away from their children," said Bob Turner at the Chestnut Tree, east of London. "And the kids might hear things they shouldn't. Customers are known to get drunk and use bad language..

The report, prepared over the past 20 months by a 13-member committee appointed by the home secretary, made it clear that children would not be wandering about in every inch of all 64,000 pubs in England and Wales. It said that pub owners could apply for permission to admit children only to certain rooms deemed suitable.

The longer hours, apart from pleasing Britons, would come as a source of joy to tourists, who often view the British way of drinking with some confusion. Looking for native conviviality under a thatched roof in the middle of the day, many tourists find only locked doors and bewilderment. The reason is that under present law, pubs close from 3 to 5:30 p.m. every weekday. They may open no earlier than 11 a.m. without special permission, and must close by 11 p.m. during the week. Sunday hours are 12 noon to 2 p.m. and 7 to 10:30 p.m.

BARRETT MEETS B.C. TEL HEAD

Premier Barrett met briefly with B.C. Telephone president Ernest Richardson Tuesday, but neither men made any statement about the talks.

"We didn't get any busy signals and we promised not to tap each other's lines," Barrett joked when asked about the meeting.

The premier, who has affirmed since his August election victory that government takeover of the utility is inevitable, said he and Richardson have been corresponding and both wanted the meeting.

Richardson confirmed in Vancouver that B.C. Tel was a topic of discussion, "but no decisions were made."

Saanich Park Report Disturbs Council

Three Saanich aldermen expressed concern Tuesday at the number of parks recommended for "reserve status" by planner Tom Loney.

Ald. Ed Lum, chairman of the parks committee, said he is "quite disturbed" by Loney's report in which he recommends that 34 of the municipalities 53 parks be specially reserved.

The reserve classification is a compromise between permanent dedication of parks and the flexible method of merely designating a park by bylaw.

Lum agreed with Ald. William Noel that changing land patterns can affect the status of parks and making parks permanent fixtures is not appropriate.

Lum said a situation could arise where a smaller park might be "consolidated" into a larger one as land use changes.

The loss of flexibility in determining the best use for municipal lands has been a deterrent to park dedication in the past, he said.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he did not oppose park dedication, but he felt a lot of the ones mentioned in Loney's report are "borderline situations."

Ald. Alan Newberry noted some parks obviously will remain so and it was important to dedicate them, he said.

"I think the staff should be congratulated for this report," Newberry said. "At long last we have a clear, detailed report."

The parks committee agreed with the planning committee, which earlier had expressed support for the recommendations, to discuss the report in detail with the parks administrator later.

LUMP AMONG WEEDS FETCHES $86,000

LONDON — Arthur Davey sold his "work of art" Tuesday, the one he dug up on his farm. He got a record $86,360 for it, and that is only half the tale.

It was in May that Davey, 39, was attacking garden weeds with a hoe when he struck a tiny lump of bronze. He rubbed off a bit of dirt, saw it was the figure of a man less than four inches high, and stuck it in his pocket.

His wife wanted to scrub it in the kitchen sink, but Davey said it was a "work of art" and wouldn't let her. His son tried to swap it with a friend for a toy car, but the friend only had a toy tractor so the deal fell through.

Eventually Davey's brother-

Eventually Davey's bortherin-law took the statuette along one day when he was delivering pig swill to the local squire. Lt. Col. John Freeman took one look, and that was that.

Christie's art auction house experts and those from the Victoria and Albert Museum identified the statuette as 12th century French The gilt bronze figure is of St. John the Evangelist. He stands in an attitude of mourning, the left arm holding the folds of a cloak and supporting a gospel.

The experts said it probably was part of a crucifixion group and probably was made in the Meuse region of France.

The price was a world auction record for sculpture earlier than 19th century. The previous record was for a work by Benvennu to Cellini.

"You did a good job," Davey told auctioneer Paul Whitfield after the auction.

Pylon Site Proposed

Victoria's land development committee recommended approval in principle Tuesday of allocating land at Smith's Hill Reservoir for construction of a 75-foot microwave tower needed by B.C. Telephone Co.

The committee asked municipal manager Bill Hooson to explore the advantages of selling the land to the telephone company, at a negotiated price of about $120,000, as opposed to a long-term lease.

Mayor Peter Pollen commented that if the former method were used "we would be selling at today's prices," whereas a 50-year lease adjusted at 10-year intervals could take account of increasing land values.

Aldermen were reluctant to see the land used for that purpose, however, as the site of about 5,000 square feet is located in a recently-established 21-acre park.

Defence for an Addict —Some Like It Louder

I was going to say that there ought to be a law, though perhaps we've too many laws as it is. But, really, isn't it time that the psychiatrists of the world confined their business to the couch and stopped rushing into print with theories to explain everything that strikes them as abnormal? Yes, Jack, it is.

Seems you can't do anything these days that's a little different without some over-articulate shrink issuing a statement in the public prints to classify you as a neurotic, maladjusted or warped in your little psyche.

If you happen to be one of those gents with a lot of turbulence in your life and cherish it, if you get those big ups and downs, go for lonely walks (introversion) or whistle aloud (extroversion) or do almost anything out of the ordinary, anything a turnip wouldn't do, you may find a ready opinion that you're not altogether right up here.

More and more you meet people who have become sort of self-taught, do-it-yourself home psychiatrists, people who are dedicating their lives to suppressing perfectly natural expressions, like screaming occasionally or jumping up and down. They've so many emotions corked up inside them they're about ready to bust.

I'm on this subject today because at least a dozen people have been looking at me with that certain sideways look and, indeed, suggesting right out loud that I'm about ready for a seance at the nearest cranium clinic. My crime is that I happen to like a good deal of volume when I listen to my records, a matter which I once thought was simply a question of personal taste, but now turns out to be far more insidious.

At least that is the cockeyed notion, as you'll have doubtless read, of one Dr. H. Angus Bowles, the eminent Montreal psychiatrist, who has come right out in type with a public denunciation of "stereo addicts." The Canadian Press quotes him as saying the stereo addict is quite liable to be "sadistic, psychotic. vehement, orgiastic and aggressive," these being the kind of words the profession uses at the drop of an id.

★ ★ ★

This fellow is talking about little old me, by the Lord Harry, and I'm not going to take it sitting down. Sitting down is the way I take my jazz — cross-legged, about eight inches from the speakers, a tall tinkling glass within reach, the volume knob turned just as high as it will go without knocking down the walls.

Give me a little early vintage Goodman or Lunceford or any vintage Ellington and plenty of decibels and I'm happy. I like to get right in there with the band, the way you do in Preservation Hall in old New Orleans and if Dr. Bowles doesn't like it he can go away, just as my wife does.

It isn't only jazz, either. You get a piece like Bach's Goldberg Variations with Glenn Gould at the piano and, for my money, the way to hear it is to climb right into the Steinway, which is exactly what stereo lets you do. You can get swallowed alive in that music, lifted by it until you soar, and if that's sadistic or vehement I'm Lawrence Welk.

Oh, I know this Dr. Bowles. I've never met him, but I know him. He's the kind of stereo party-pooper who wants the records way down low so that it will be a kind of background music for the sound of his own interminable voice.

I've met his type. "Turn it down, turn it down," he cries. "A fellow can't think!" So who wants to think when you might be in full, free flight?

You can bet your sweet life that accounts for this vicious attack on the stereo addicts. The doctor has gone skulking home from a record session where he wasn't able to get a word in over the Brubeck and this is his retribution.

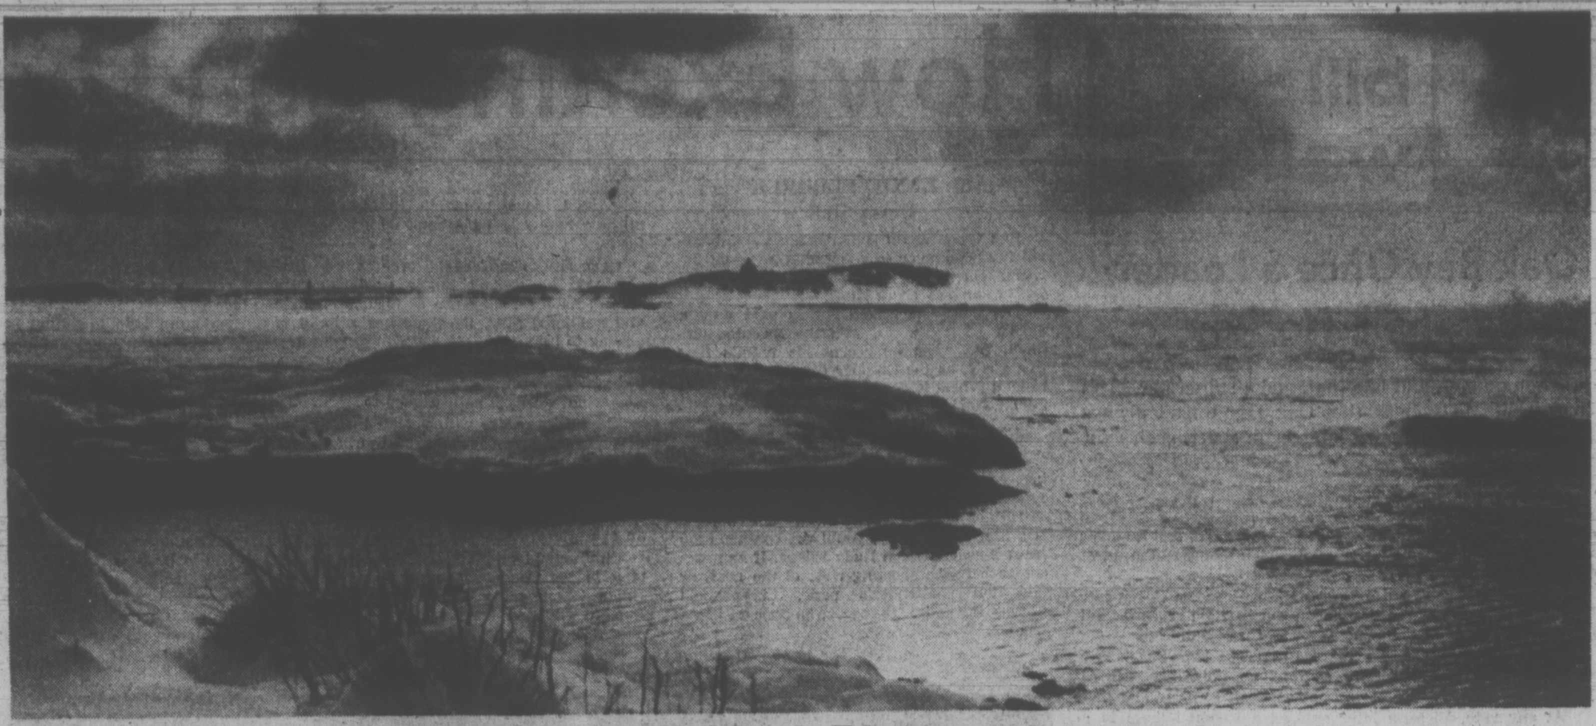
He reminds me of another of his breed who has just about ruined the life of a pal of mine, a great, big, jolly, fat fellow who never gave a second thought to his avoirdupois until a psychiatrist told him it was caused by worry.

"You over-eat because you worry," he told him.

Well, my jolly friend went to pieces. He got a guilt complex about every lemon meringue pie he ate. Every time he sat down at a table he started worrying about what was worrying him which, until then, had been practically nothing.

In no time at all he'd lost 40 pounds, he looked terrible, his wife had gone home to her mother, and another happy man's laughter was stilled.

The real story, of course, was that he liked to eat, just as I like that big sound from the stereo, and the moral of it is simply this: Be yourself if you can bear it.



The Black-Bellied Plovers Loved It

Boiling like the proverbial witch's cauldron, a strange canopy of steam hangs over the sea surrounding Trial Island off Oak Bay. Today's chilled skies made the waters beneath warm by comparison, creating an optical phenomenon rarely seen in the "banana belt" of Canada. Of all the birds that frequent the island sanctuary the most at home today were the black-bellied plovers who thrive in Arctic conditions. Lighthouse keeper Jack Horn and his family put out feed trays for their winged callers and holed up as winds gusted upwards of 45 miles an hour. (George Dufour Photo)

Radio Ads Exploit Claims Alderman

GRIEVE

C-FAX Radio is "exploiting the political climate in North Saanich for commercial purposes," North Saanich alderman Paul Grieve said Tuesday.

Grieve was commenting on a newspaper advertisement paid for by C-FAX, which editorializes on the North Saanich Dec. 9 civic elections.

The quarter-page advertisement, run last week in the Sidney Review, repeats an editorial broadcast recently by C-FAX managing editor Jim Hume.

It says, in part, the issue facing voters in North Saanich is "not planning, developers or subdivision but the gut issue of basic democratic government.

"The voters have to decide," the editorial continues, "whether they want government by a majority council or whether they want government by court order, the type of government they got in 1972."

Of the six men competing for the three seats on council, three, according to the advertisement, are "incumbents firmly committed to the principle of rule by majority" while the other three are "political neophytes, suspected of being Mayor Davis supporters."

"There's a great chance for exploitation in North Saanich," Grieve said, "and C-FAX is using it for commercial purposes."

"It's a biased and uncalled for thing for a radio station to do," aldermanic candidate Richard Kirk commented. "I thought it was supposed to be unbiased especially around election time."

Mayor Trevor Davis called the advertisement "surprising."

"But in this day of degenerate morals," he added, "nothing surprises me."

Clare Copeland, president of C-FAX, said the ad was run "to show the people of North Saanich that we're interested in their affairs."

The editorial was run as an ad, he said, as a way of advertising the fact that C-FAX has an editorial department which gives editorial comment over the air.

"It's right that we take a stand on an issue," Coepland said, "it's part of the area we serve."

Copeland said the opinions expressed in the editorial were "not necessarily the opinions of C-FAX" but rather the opinions of Hume.

Hume said he agreed that printing of the editorial might be construed as an attempt by the radio station to promote one side of the issued.

"It's unfortunate, Hume admitted, "there was no explanation along with the ad.

"The ad was meant to mean," he said, "that C-FAX now runs editorials and here's one about North Saanich."

A spokesman at the Sidney Review said there had been a great deal of reaction to the C-FAX advertisement — with dozens of letters being sent in pro and con.

'Foreign List' Comes to End

Victoria's practice of placing persons with "foreign-sounding" names on a separate voters' list and requiring them to prove voting eligibility, will be stopped.

City clerk and returning officer Morran Waller said Tuesday that in future there will be one voters' list only, and the onus will be on individuals to ensure they are Canadian citizens or British subjects.

Victoria aldermanic candidate Malcolm Anderson, who first raised the issue Nov. 18, filed a complaint last week with the B.C. Human Rights Commission, claiming that the city's method of compiling its voters' list was "discriminatory."

Anderson said the city maintained a separate list of those property owners with East Indian or Chinese names, and insisted that they give proof of citizenship.

However, Waller denied Tuesday that the decision to use only one master list stemmed from any pressure at the provincial level, and said it was purely an "internal" decision.

Judge Blasts Escapes

OSTLER

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The public is becoming increasingly alarmed and angry over escapes from William Head minimum-security prison, Judge William Ostler said in provincial court today.

Ostler commented while sentencing Thomas David Cogley, 23, who escaped from the institution Aug. 17.

"I can't understand these escapes. You seem to think it's a form of parole and it's not. An increasing number of you seem to think you can come and go as you please," said Ostler.

"The concept of William Head is being profoundly misunderstood by a number of convicts and the whole thing is being reviewed," he said.

★ ★ ★

Cogley was sentenced to four months to run consecutively with a two-year sentence imposed July 19, 1971, for possession of stolen property over $200.

Outside court, Colwood RCMP Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said there had been 32 escapes from William Head this year.

National parole officer Dewan Callahan said in an interview, "I don't know what the judges remarks would pertain to specifically" but "if you're going to have a minimum-security institution you're going to have a few guys go over the fence."

"Classification is the key," he said. Parole officers "have to try your best" to decide if a man is a "good risk."

Stopped Cold

More than people are feeling the cold.

The rotating Labatt sign above the brewery on Government, which customarily flashes the time and temperature, is still today.

With one of the chilliest perches in town, oil and grease in the motors which turn the sign congealed and the motors were turned off for fear of burning them out, said general manager Ken McNamara.

Time and temperature will stand still atop the brewery until the lubricants can be replaced with a thinner variety.

Ambulance Standards Planned in New Law

Health Minister Dennis Cocke announced today that he plans to introduce a bill into the winter session of the legislature which will permit the government to set standards for ambulance services provided in the province.

Cocke made the announcement by press release from his office.

He said a number of provinces in the country now control the quality of care provided by ambulance operators and are able to specify the minimum training, equipment and first aid supplies to be used by ambulances and their operators.

B.C. does not now have the power to specify such conditions, Cocke said, adding that the bill is intended to make this possible.

Regulations setting minimum standards will not be passed until officials of Cocke's department have consulted with the B.C. Medical Association, ambulance operators, municipal authorities and interested citizens' groups, he said.

In the Capital district, municipalities depend on a combination of public and private ambulance services as well as some volunteer crews.

Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of council's health committee, said the proposed legislation is a great idea provided it does not create a hardship for those areas now served by volunteer ambulance crews.

The provincial $1 per capita grant for ambulance services is inadequate and hopefully the government will review this too, he said.

Vote of Confidence for Pollen

Victoria city council gave Mayor Peter Pollen a unanimous vote of confidence Tuesday, after one alderman had accused another of raising "some sort of aroma" with unsubstantiated allegations directed at the mayor.

Ald. Tom Christie asked Ald. Percy Frampton why he had seen fit to write to the provincial government's Inspector of Municipalities requesting an investigation of certain allegations involving Pollen.

Christie said he was "disgusted" at the action and convinced the mayor had acted in no way improperly.

Frampton replied that he had merely recounted in the letter certain allegations made by a private citizen and did so solely for the purpose of "clearing the air." He had no way of knowing whether the charges were true or untrue.

(The allegations referred to had been raised last week by lawyer Ian Stewart, and were answered by Pollen at a press conference).

Pollen asked Frampton to specify the allegations and told council he would insist on a committee of council looking into the "revelations" concerning himself.

But the discussion fizzled out with Ald. Harold Olafson commenting that "we are blowing a tempest into a teapot," and Ald. Clyde Savage moving a vote of confidence in the mayor's integrity — which Frampton seconded.

Olafson said the news media appeared to have "purposely" blown up the whole affair, and Pollen added that "much of this confrontation would have been avoided if we had had more balanced coverage of the situation."

Goal: Homes for the Homeless

Christmas Deadline for USC Project

Early last January, 10 million Bengali refugees who had fled to India from the civil war ravaging their homeland began flooding back to their new country, Bangladesh.

They returned to find their homes destroyed, their villages shattered by the bitter fighting.

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, which in 1971 worked to provide food in the Indian refugee camps, is now working to meet the new need — for housing.

Housing for Bangladesh is the object of this year's Unitarian Service Committee fund-raising campaign.

Canadians are being asked to donate $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts-in-kind — clothing, medical supplies, food — by Christmas Day.

Over 100 projects in 13 countries are supported by the USC, but Bangladesh housing is this year's main target. By Christmas Day, the organization wants to have completed 1,000 houses.

Each 10x14 foot house, with walls of bamboo matting and a roof of asbestos iron sheets, costs only $140 to build but will house from six to 12 Bengalis. Construction is supervised by the USC's partner agency in India, the Rama Krishna Mission.

A special appeal is being made for money to buy saris for Bengali women, many of who have only the one sari they wore when they fled the country a year ago.

Besides helping to build houses, this year's Bangladesh project will provide a few pots and dishes to each household.

Part of this year's donations will go to other USC projects, such as a third children's home in Swaziland, Southern Africa; a rehydration-nutrition centre in Maghazi, the Gaza Strip, to treat infant victims of enteric disorders; and equipment for a new family planning centre in Hong Kong.

On-going USC projects include the highly-successful Agricultural Training Institute in Ranchi, India, where young farmers learn to double and triple their grain crop.

USC aid to Korea, which began in 1952, is continuing, and nine carloads of Canadian barley have been shipped

A USC-financed nutrition rehabilitation village in Botswana, Southern Africa, is a place where mothers may bring their children suffering from malnutrition. While the children are treated, their mothers get training in nutrition and child care.

Each dollar Canadians donate this month to the USC can buy:

—66 mid-day meals in Swaziland for a school child.

—50 cups of milk for children in Bangladesh and India.

—12 days barley rations in Korea.

—five medical visits to villagers in Mysore state, India.

—one sari, loincloth or blanket for a destitute Bengali or Indian.

Victoria gave $16,641 last year to the Milk for Bangladesh campaign, the highest total since the annual campaigns began here in 1953.

Donations this year to the Housing for Bangladesh campaign may be sent to P.O. Box 300, Victoria, or taken to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa.

Names of donors will be published in the Times.

Gabriolans To Meet On Planning

GABRIOLA ISLAND (CP) — The Gabriola Ratepayers' Association called for a public meeting Tuesday night to discuss the resignation Sunday of three members of the island's advisory planning commission and the discovery that the land development company Gabriola Wildwood Estates Ltd. was asked to help prepare a map for the planning commission.

The resignation Sunday of commission chairman Bill Matthews, vice-chairman Norman Nash and member Peter Bell leaves the seven-member commission with only two veteran members.

Wildwood Estates was stopped this summer in its attempt to subdivide a 224-acre stretch of the island into 550 lots. Dan Campbell, then municipal affairs minister, denied the company's application after a public hearing.

Matthews said Tuesday his resignation was only indirectly connected with the discovery that the development company had supplied the commission with a map.

He said the map "has nothing to do with the island (development) plan, so charges of conflict of interest are groundless."

He said no one else came forward with a map, so the company's help was not refused.

"It is a purely factual map showing existing subdivisions, tree farm areas and agricultural land."

Matthews said it was silly for Gabriola Island residents to continue their "vendetta" against Wildwood Estates.

"We cannot ignore a group which holds so much land here. The company is part of the island and it offered help."

The former commission chairman said he would attend tonight's public meeting, adding: "If it's a witch hunt they want, let them have it."

Appointments to the planning commission are made by the Nanaimo Regional District Board. The commission acts in an advisory capacity to the regional board on planning and zoning matters.

Deceit Charged By Poundkeeper

Saanich poundkeeper Albert Oost believes some people are using the municipal pound to dispose of their cats — pretending the animals are strays.

"People have a stray cat and tell us to pick it up and it's their own cat. This is a cheap way of getting rid of it," Oost told a Saanich council meeting Tuesday.

Earlier the committee considered whether two pound men were sufficient to meet the needs of Saanich in dealing with animal strays of all kinds.

Police, who receive most complaints, tell the public there is no pound service after 5 p.m., but when instructed to, police acting as deputy pound men will operate one of the pound trucks in response to calls.

Ald. William Noel said "I thought that is asking police to do more than they should be expected.

No further action was taken.

The committee authorized the municipal administrator to negotiate an agreement with a new poundkeeper for large animals.

Assistant administrator Dick Gibson reported Errol Hunter, of Hunter's Holiday Ranch, 374 Spartan, is willing to take over the duties of keeper in place of R. T. Birch and Son, 5062 West Saanich, who had requested an increase in their annual retainer from $600 to $1,200. The committee refused previously to raise the amount.

Hunter has facilities for keeping horses and cattle and was willing to be on call 24 hours a day for $600 retainer.

Administrator John Tribe said Hunter was proposed after "we shopped around" when the Birches seemed unwilling to continue the arrangement.

The committee agreed to reconsider its $200 a day fee for a three-day licence to operate a carnival, which was charged to the Kiwanis Club of Saainch last April.

The fee was charged by Saanich licence department when it was discovered the Wagner Shows carnival was operating at Town and Country shopping centre without a licence last April.

The show indicated licensing was to have been taken care of by the Kiwanis Club, which was to give its share of proceeds to charity.

The club had failed to obtain a licence and was then required to pay the full fee or have the show closed.

The action had left "a bad taste in the mouth of the Kiwanis Club," said Tribe, and the sponsorship had meant a deficit instead of a profit for the club.

The committee, urging council grant a $570 rebate to the club, agreed there had been some misunderstanding and mishandling of the affair. Fee for a charitable carnival is provided for in the bylaws at $10 a day.

The club will be asked in future to notify Saanich when it intends to sponsor an outside carnival for charity.

Car Sales Set Record

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Chrysler (Canada) Ltd. today announced record sales of cars and trucks in November and for the first 11 months of the year.

The announcement follows reports of higher November sales volumes from Ford of Canada, General Motors and American Motors.

Chrysler cars sales last month were 15,579, up 16.1 per cent from last year's November record of 13,424. Truck sales were up 58.9 per cent to a record 2,815.

Totals for the 11-month period were: 151,162 cars, up 15.5 per cent from 130,891 sold in the same period last year and 10.9 per cent higher than the 11-month record of 136,263 set in 1968; 26,729 trucks sold, up 54.9 per cent from the previous record of 17,254 set last year.

Ford reported car and truck sales for the 11-month period of 253,093 vehicles, greater than any other complete year in the company's 68-year history. Its November car sales of 17,625 units also broke a seven-year record for the months.

Gold Issues Lead Toronto Up

Led by gold issues, prices at Toronto posted moderate gains in active trading.

Beverage, communication, merchandising and real estate stocks were among sectors of the market with the most gains while construction and material, oil refining, pipeline and trust and loan issues were off slightly.

Advances were well ahead of declines, 267 to 202, while 270 issues remained unchanged.

Stelco was off 1¼ to $37⅛, Slater Walker ¾ to $16, Dominion Foundries ⅞ to $29¾, City Savings and Trust ¾ to $13 and Peoples Credit A ⅞ to $26⅞.

Agra Industries slipped ⅞ to $14, Moore Corp. ⅞ to $50, Scintrex 15 cents to $1.50, Curtiss-Wright 7 cents to 78 cents and Imperial Oil ⅝ to $44⅝.

Iso Mines climbed 15 cents to $2.70 and Pine Point ⅛ to $27¾. Bethlehem was off ½ to $15¾.

New York

New York plodded along today with only minor price changes. Trading was fairly active.

As in Tuesday's session, some investors were cashing in on stocks which have made strong gains recently. Analysts said profit-taking was a normal interlude in the market's long climb.

Northwest Airlines was the volume leader, off ¼ to $39⅛, with a block of 100,000 shares selling at $39. Public Service Engineering and Gas was off ¼ to $25, with 202,200 shares moving at $24¾. Masonite Corp. was down 1 to $64⅛, with 140,000 shares traded at $64.

Gulf was active and ahead ⅛ to $26⅛. Gulf was Tuesday's volume leader as a large secondary offering was sold at $26.

Montreal

Advances outnumbered declines in light trading at Montreal.

Canadian Tire rose 4 to $63, Great West Life 1¼ to $76¼ and Canada and Dominion Sugar 1½ to $26½.

London

Prices were mixed in quiet trading today on the London market.

ICI, Glaxo, Babcock and Wilcox and BSR were firmer but Tube Investment, Guest Keen, P. and O. and Hawker declined.

Giant Completes First Drilling

Giant Explorations has completed the first drill hole seeking iron and copper on its Nahwitti Lake property, 17 miles west of Port Hardy.

Further drilling is planned.

President L. P. Starck said surface stripping and trenching was also being carried out on a nearby zinc geochemical anomaly which is some 900 feet by 300 feet and open to the west.

No assay reports have been released so far.

Oak Bay Once a Leader In Baseball, Hockey

Some notes, and like that, and a subscriber, bless him, writes to suggest that Oak Bay wasn't always opposed to a community interest in sport, such as it is now.

"Check it out, and you'll see that Oak Bay was once a leader in sport, he penned, "and at one time had a baseball diamond, a grandstand seating about 2,000 people, and a cinder running track, three laps to the mile, which then was the finest on the Pacific Coast."

Sure enough, it was true. On the site now known as Windsor Park, the B.C. Electric in 1890 began construction of a baseball park, which was to be the home of the Oak Bay Ball Club.

Of course, it should be explained that was before Oak Bay was Oak Bay. It was unorganized territory until incorporated as a municipality in 1906.

At any rate, Victoria later entered a baseball team in a league which included Seattle, and Tacoma, and one of the players of that era was the legendary Hal Chase.

Chase went on to glory in the Major Leagues, and was generally regarded as one of the finest fielding first baseman of all times.

So much for history, or first: have ye all forgotten that Oak Bay also had the first arena here, and the very first artificial ice arena in all of Canada? That was in 1911, when the Patrick Arena was built at the corner of Fort and Epworth. It burned to the ground in 1929.

Now, everyone waits in anticipation of the next move by Oak Bay. Surely, it is about time a recreation complex of some type was provided for the youth of the municipality, and even from other municipalities too. Turn about is only fair play.

A quotable quote in this month's issue of Sport Mag concerns Fran Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings. When Fran was secured by the Vikings from the Giants, it was expected that he would put some life in the Viking offence. In the very first exhibition game this year, on the opening kickoff, Clint Jones rambled 99 yards for a touchdown. Whereupon, Tarkenton turned to Minnesota coach Bud Grant, and said:

"See, I told you I'd help your offence."

Incidentally, Chess now is officially a sport, or so say the editors of Sport. To wit:

Chess is like baseball: There are long periods during which nothing happens. Many of these periods are spent waiting for Bobby Fischer. This makes Fischer the Dick Allen of his game.

Chess is like the Olympic Games: In its finest hour it promotes ill-will . . .

Chess is like golf: Even talented stars can be accused of cheating . . . The Soviets insisting that Fischer used chemical and electronic warfare to break Boris Spassky's concentration.

Well, you get the idea, but at least people did line up to watch a five-hour TV report of Fisher's world title match. Where? Mostly in saloons, where else? So maybe it does qualify!

* * *

Meanwhile, perhaps all was not above board in some of the recent international skating competitions. Else, why would the International Skating Union take such drastic action as to suspend nine judges for whatever reasons, and varying periods. One even, a Mrs. Joy Ann Forster, was from Canada. Also, in an attempt to escape carping criticism in the future, the ISU has ordered a special seminar for judges to be held in conjunction with the 1973 World Championships at Bratislava in 1973. This is good, and to publish the names of the suspended officials is even better. At least failings are being admitted, and the culprits chastised.

And also, in 1935, 6,405 spectators witnessed the Grey Cup final, and the gate was $5,583. This year, there were 35,000 in the stands, and receipts were over $800,000. Football has come a long way. When FIFA coach Dettmar Cramer was here last week, he suggested that one way for Canada to produce a better Olympic soccer team for the '76 Games would be to have a national camp established out here on the coast, prior to the Games, even allow players who have college scholarships to have them transferred west, and generally take the game more seriously. In other places, he said, national camps are the rule rather than the exception. In Brazil, would you believe: six months?

* * *

Now that the B.C. Government has saved upwards of $70 million by not applying for the '76 Winter Olympics, which it wasn't going to get anyway, it will be interesting to see what is done with all that money, and will it be used to finance "a bigger and better" Festival of Sport? By the way, here's a good question that no-one has ever answered: Just what is the budget for the Festival of Sport? Even last year's costs would do. Well?

How Exciting Can Dynamite Be?

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Ron Chipperfield isn't the most flamboyant hockey player to come skating down the river. The 18-year-old Brandon Wheat Kings' centre can only score goals.

That's how it looked if you paid only a casual glance to No. 7 in the Brandon uniform. But when he scores his team's first five goals, as the Chipper did Tuesday night to lead Wheat Kings to a 7-4 Western Canada Junior Hockey League victory over the Victoria Cougars, you start paying attention.

Among the things you learn:

Not one with a hell-bent-for-leather skating style, Chipperfield does have speed, highly deceptive.

He has a blistering shot, and if five goals is a hint of accuracy, you'll get confirmation from Brandon coach Rudy Pilous. If he has a choice between shooting wide of the goal, or into the goaltender's pads, Chipperfield prefers the pads. That way, he at least has a chance.

Finally, Chipperfield has great anticipation with moves to match. He is as deceitful as a mob robbing a bank with water pistols.

Generally, Chipperfield creates the illusion that he doesn't hustle or bustle. He doesn't have to. Because of his anticipation and positional play, the puck has a habit of getting to him.

Watching Chipperfield is like watching a box of dynamite . . . nothing ultra-fancy about the package, until it goes to work.

The husky centre with yet another season of junior eligibility ahead of him put all those basics to work Tuesday at Memorial Arena for an output that boosted his goals total to 31 in 23 games. His team has played 30, but the Chipper missed seven games because of an eye injury.

Chipperfield and Victoria's mistake-prone play in the Cougar zone made it easy for Pilous to enjoy his visit. Coming in as the Eastern Division leaders, the Wheat Kings didn't look as impressive as Regina Pats, who were in last place when they showed up in the Blanshard Street rink.

Apart from Chipperfield, Robbie Neale, Dwayne Pentland and rookie Rick Blight, the Wheaties looked, at best, average. Still, they completed a three-game sweep from West coast teams because the Cougars lumbered and stumbled into similar mediocracy.

Victoria's awful sin was a lack of positional play in its own zone. Cougar coach Mitch Pechet was critical of his defence, but straying wingers created the greatest problems.

Forwards, for some inexplicable reason, consistently joined defencemen well behind the faceoff circles. That's far too deep for a common-sense breakout, and the bewildered defenceman had no one to pass to.

If there was a bright spot for Pechet, it had to be the play of his so-called third line. Put together before last Saturday's 9-2 romp over New Westminister, the line of Don Williams, Carl Cureatz and Frank Hyndman came up with a second straight pass mark.

Cureatz and Hyndman accounted for two of Victoria's goals. Williams drew assists on both and was more effective in the physical education department. His bodywork on attack made the line go.

More important, only Cureatz and Williams were on the ice for a Brandon score. That single minus came in a penalty-killing role.

Tuesday's game marked the start of a tough five-games-in-six-days run for the Cougars. They left this morning for a three-game hop into Alberta, starting in Calgary tonight, and hustle back to meet Flin Flon Bombers at Memorial Arena on Sunday.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Edmonton Oil Kings went into the third period trailing 2-0 but rapped in four goals to pull out a 4-2 victory over Swift Current Broncos, while Flin Flon Bombers pulled out of a 3-3 draw with Saskatoon Blades. Ex-Cougar Neil Melnyk pulled it out of the fire for Bombers by scoring a power-play goal with less than three minutes left in the game.

Paul Chases Past Glory

Victoria's Paul Fisher will be gunning for a title he last won in 1969 when the B.C. sectional figure-skating championships get under way Thursday at 8 a.m. in the Racquet Club.

Fisher, a member of the Victoria Figure Skating Club and one of four advanced city entrants in the sectional, captured the B.C. senior men's championship that year and went on to collect the Canadian junior men's title.

Fisher's clubmate, Brenda Thomas, will compete in the senior women's events while Barbara Maple and Maureen Jasper, both of the Racquet Club, will go after laurels in the junior division.

Competition continues through Friday at the Racquet Club before switching to Memorial Arena at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The competition concludes with an exhibition performance by five Vancouver skaters who have automatically qualified for the national championships.

Displays of skill will be made by Karen Magnussen, Canadian senior women's champion last year, Ruth Hutchinson, runner-up to Miss Magnussen; Canadian dance champions Barry and Louise Soper, and Paul Bonefant, runner-up in the Canadian senior men's championship.

Nixons Lose First

Saanich Block Brothers upset Victoria Nixons Trucking 6-5 Tuesday night in a penalty-studded South Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

It was the first loss in 14 games this season for the Victoria crew.

In the other scheduled encounter between Racquet Club Kings and Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking, no real decision was reached on the ice. Kings were short of players, including a backup goaltender, and had to substitute a player when starting netminder Dale Lunde received a bad skate cut on the head in the first period. Under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rules, each club must have two goalies dressed for each game.

Dick Stratton of Nanaimo, the league commissioner, is expected to decide shortly whether or not the game, which was played anyway, should be forfeited to Lake Cowichan.

Victoria was assessed seven minor penalties, three majors, three misconducts and four game misconducts while Saanich earned five minors and two majors in the free-wheeling contest. There also were a few fights in the stands.

Keon's Value to Maple Leafs Underlined by 300th Goal

By The Canadian Press

Dave Keon has reached another milestone in his National Hockey League career with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The little centre scored a goal and assisted on another Tuesday night to lead the Leafs to a 5-2 victory over Vancouver Canucks. The goal was his 13th of the season but it gave him a career-total of 300 in the NHL.

In other games Tuesday night, Los Angeles Kings dumped New York Islanders 6-1 and St. Louis Blues edged Detroit Red Wings 2-1.

Keon, who suffered through an off-season last year, has been a leader with the Leafs ever since he joined the club in the 1960-61 season, winning the Calder Trophy as a rookie, the Lady Byng Trophy twice for clean and effective play and the Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in playoffs when Leafs won the Stanley Cup in 1967.

However, his 300 goals are not the only barometer of his value to the team, for Keon's defensive skill is comparable to the best centres in hockey.

Add to these his penalty-killing ability and his work on the power play and Keon's value to the Leafs is considerable, especially at this time when the team is experiencing an unusual number of injuries to key players.

However, despite the injuries, the Leafs have won their second straight game on the road and Keon's steady play is partly responsible for this.

The Noranda, Que., native and Leafs' all-time scoring leader scored the first goal Tuesday night and set up the winner as the Leafs moved closer to fourth place in the East Division.

With the win, Toronto moved within two points of fifth-place Detroit and seven back of fourth-place Buffalo Sabres.

Pierre Jarry with two goals and Garry Monahan and Daryl Sittler with one each were the other Toronto scorers while Bobby Schmautz and Don Tannahill replied for Vancouver.

In Uniondale, N.Y., the plight of the expansion Islanders, last in the East, was illustrated by their lack of shooting against the Kings, who got two goals each from Bob Berry and Don Kozak.

In the entire game the Islanders managed only 16 shots at Los Angeles goalie Rogatien Vachon. In the second period they got just three—the first one more than 12 minutes into the period. And on three power plays, they could get off just one shot.

The Islanders' lone goal was a first-period fluke by Billy Harris. He lined the puck up against the boards, it bounced off, struck Vachon and trickled into the net.

Garry Unger scored his 11th goal of the season for St. Louis, then set up Mike Murphy's game-winner with less than three minutes to play against the Red Wings.

Marcel Dionne scored for the Red Wings who had been shut out for five consecutive periods before Nick Libett combined with Dionne to end that dry spell.

Salaries Hiked By Competition

TORONTO (CP) — The National Football League Players' Association (NFLPA) doesn't want the NFL to expand into Canada but would welcome the Canadian Football League in the United States, an NFLPA spokesman said Tuesday.

Ed Garvey, the group's executive director, said if the NFL came into Canada — Montreal or Toronto — it would probably mean the end of the CFL.

This would snuff out a source of competition for players, resulting in a drop in football salaries, he said.

Last week the CFL Players' Association said it was opposed to CFL expansion into the U.S. and against the NFL coming to Canada.

Garvey made his comments following a meeting between the CFLPA, NFLPA, the Major League Baseball Players' Association, the National Hockey League Players' Association.

The associations from the United States said that in sports where there was more than one league, basketball and hockey, salaries climbed because of competition.

Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHLPA, said the average salary in hockey this year will be $40,000-$45,000. He said the salaries had increased about 10 per cent a year until the World Hockey Association came along, but this year they had jumped about 40 per cent.

In basketball, salaries had jumped to an average of $60,000-$70,000, up from $25,000 seven years ago.

Representatives, however, charged that professional athletes are being exploited by the agents and lawyers who bargain for them.

Ward Enjoying Action Up Front

By The Canadian Press

Ron Ward seems to be enjoying his switch ffrom defence to offence and who can blame him.

Ward, who started the World Hockey Association season for New York Raiders as a defenceman, was switched to centre by coach Camille Henry and the move seems to have paid off.

The Cornwall, Ont., native, whose pro hockey career included a brief stint with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, scored two goals and assisted on another Tuesday night in New York's 6-4 win over Houston Aeros.

The three points gave him a total of 45—tops in the WHA. He has 25 goals and 20 assists.

In other games Tuesday night, Quebec Les Nordiques beat Winnipeg Jets 4-2, and in two sudden-death overtime games, Chicago Cougars defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Cleveland Crusaders downed Philadelphia Blazers 4-3.

Basketball Boxers Regain Tie for Top

London Boxing Club vaulted back into a tie for first place with Hotel Douglas in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League by trimming YMCA 83-75 Tuesday night at Cedar Hill Junior High School.

Boxers rallied in the second half to erase a 40-37 deficit at the intermission.

Jim McKay fired 22 points to lead Boxers while Duff McCaghey and Loris Corletto each added 14 points.

Jim Cunningham's 19 points were high for YMCA. Robin Allen added 15 and Gary Woodburn 14.

Hawks Get Redmond

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks obtained defenceman Dick Redmond from California Golden Seals in a National Hockey League trade Tuesday for defenceman Darryl Maggs.

Redmond was a top point man with the Seals this season with three goals and 13 assists. Maggs was scoreless while seeing limited action. Both players are 23.

NHL Close to Series With Soviets

CHICAGO (AP) — A 10-game series in 1973-74 between a top Russian team and as many as six National Hockey League clubs appeared in the making Tuesday as the NHL's governors concluded a two-day meeting.

NHL president Clarence Campbell got the go-ahead to meet in Montreal next Tuesday with representatives of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation to set up the series which would include six games in North America and four in Russia.

Several weeks ago, the Russians broke off proposed negotiations on the series, but Campbell said the Soviet hockey group now is ready to talk business.

"The Russians have made it plain their objective is to acquire as many hard dollars as they can," said Campbell. "In the past 10 years, touring Russian teams never got more than $5,000 per game in this continent, including the recent series with Team Canada."

The Russian series to be worked into the regular NHL schedule was the major news from the governors' closing session, Campbell said. He declined comment on the current legal battle with the World Hockey Association except to say $200 million "is at stake in the litigation."

Realignment of the NHL in 1974-75 when membership will be increased to 18 teams was put over until a special meeting in January at a still undetermined site.

The status of Kansas City, along with Washington, D.C., already given conditional franchises for 1974-75, remained doubtful because of financial complications.

The 1973-74 series with a top Russian team as far as the NHL is concerned is a joint venture with the NHL Players Association.

Campbell said the Russians prefer playing only three NHL clubs in the six North American games and a decision must be made in the Montreal meeting whether six or three NHL clubs will participate.

There is a possibility such clubs as New York Rangers, Chicago Black Hawks and St. Louis Blues, with large capacity stadiums, would play two-game sets with the Russian team, to be one of the top three clubs in Soviet competition — the Army, Dynamos or Spartaks.

Hoop Imports Boycotted

MONTREAL (CP) — The University of Sherbrooke would rather pay a $100 fine and lose two points in league standings than play what they consider to be an American-dominated basketball team.

The latest Sherbrooke default came Saturday when the team refused to play Montreal's Loyola College because, they said, 11 of the Loyola's 12-man basketball team are Americans.

And Tuesday, the athletic department of Laval University in Quebec City announced its men's basketball team will not play against Loyola because the U.S. players on the squad are depriving young Quebecers from playing the sport.

The situation also has produced a move to ban Loyola from participating in all intercollegiate sports in the Quebec University Athletic Association during the next academic year.

Andre Pelletier, athletic director at the University of Sherbrooke, said in an interview that other teams in the seven-university basketball league did not stand a chance against the Loyola squad, composed largely of Americans who had been actively recruited for the team.

Sherbrooke refused to play Saturday's game against Loyolla and Pelletier said he was ready to pay the resulting $100 fine, set by QUAA regulations. "Even if we have to pay $500, we will not play Loyola," he said.

"Their calibre is too high for any school in the province and they are destroying the game for the rest of the schools.

"There are 11 Americans and one Canadian on the Loyola team and the Canadian, one of the best players in the province, spends most of his time on the bench."

At a meeting of the QUAA board of governors here last week, Pelletier said there was a motion recommending that Loyola be banned from all QUAA sports for the 1973-74 academic year. There were four in favor, four against and one abstention.

"When the association could do nothing, we decided to act on our own," Pelletier said.

$325M for Winter Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to spend about $325 million this winter on special projects that it hopes will generate 140,000 jobs.

The figures were announced today by Finance Minister John Turner and Manpower Minister Robert Andras when dealing with a $500-million program aimed at reducing winter unemployment over the long term.

The two ministers announced:

—The local initiatives program (L.I.P.) will receive another $80 million immediately, which, added to appropriations made this fall, brings the winter total to $165 million.

—$10 million more for the federal on-the-job training program, raising the total for this program to $50 million this winter.

—$60 million to various federal departments for labor intensive works and activities during the winter.

—Expenditure of between $50 million and $100 million this winter on a new three-year provincial-municipal capital works fund.

In the last case the total fund for loans and grants to municipalities to finance capital projects is $350 million.

Under this program loans will be made available to provinces and municipalities up to May 31, 1975. Part or all of the cost of labor will be refunded, depending on circumstances.

Mr. Turner said the new program will raise his cash requirement for the current fiscal year to $2.2 billion dollars from the May estimate to $2 billion.

He said this includes the heavy and unanticipated government expenditures for the unemployment insurance fund. He did not give a clear explanation of why he needed so little extra money, except to say that there have been some increases in revenues and some cuts in expenditures.

The finance minister said to the estimated $325 million to be spent this winter should be added a $50-million carry-over of spending from last year's employment loans program. This would bring total expenditures to $375 million.

The expenditure compares with about $300 million that Mr. Turner estimated was spent on winter works a year ago.

The government cannot be certain how much of the new money will be spent this winter under the new provincial-municipal capital projects fund.

Mr. Turner said that half the on-site labor costs incurred before the end of the program in 1975 will be deducted or forgiven from the amount of individual loans.

The government would pay 100 per cent of these labor costs if the work was incurred during the low-employment period of Dec. 1 and May 31.

The fund would assist in such capital projects as roads, streets, schools, public buildings, recreation centres and "similar priority projects" of municipalities and provinces.

As the government cannot be sure how much of these loans will be required this winter, it cannot say what its total winter-works outlay will be.

But Mr. Turner estimated that between $50 million and $100 million will be loaned this year.

Cold Will Stay

Victoria's cold spell is firmly entrenched according to airport weather officials, and freezing temperatures are expected to continue for several days.

Slightly less wind is forecast however, after two days of steady 35 to 40 m.p.h. blow which brought an extra chill to temperatures that ranged in the twenties to low thirties.

Weathermen say there is no sign of more snow.

Tomorrow will be sunny and cold with the mercury dropping to 20 degrees overnight and rising to a high of 32 during the day.

Officially, the temperature at the Vancouver International Airport fell to 22 degrees. But the weather office said that when coupled with winds that reached 45 miles an hour, it produced a chill factor of about three degrees above zero.

Homes in parts of West Vancouver and North Vancouver were without power for almost three hours during the night after a tree—toppled by the winds—crashed down on a power line.

The temperature was 11 degrees in Prince Rupert overnight and 10 below at Williams Lake — both record lows for Dec. 6. It was 34 below at Germansen Landing and 17 below at Prince George.

In east-central Alberta passenger and freight trains are restricted to 30 miles an hour because cold weather is shrinking the rails on Canadian National Railways' main line.

The speed limit on 40 miles of the line east of Edmonton was imposed, a CN spokesman said Tuesday, because the gaps at some rail joints had grown to five inches.

Homeward-bound Christmas holidayers at Vancouver are finding that it's easier not to wrap their presents until they reach their destination, because Air Canada personnel are tearing off the fancy paper to examine contents if any metal is detected. It's all part of anti-hijack security.

Guards, Baggage Checks Ordered at U.S. Airports

Washington Post

WASHINGTON U.S. Transportation Secretary John Volpe announced Tuesday two new anti-hijacking steps — the posting of armed guards at passenger gates before every flight, and mandatory inspection of all hand baggage.

Cost of these, however, will be borne by the airlines not the U.S. government.

Meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers said that the United States and Cuba now have a "foundation of an agreement" on a hijacking treaty.

Rogers' comments were echoed in Montreal by Captain Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association, who said a Canada-Cuba treaty for the extradition of aircraft hijackers is "virtually ready to be signed."

Capt. Simpson said "there are a few minor hitches left to be ironed out."

Volpe said that the mandatory inspections of hand baggage — to be done by airline employees — would begin no later than Jan. 5, and that airports would be required to deploy armed guards by Feb. 6.

At a press conference, Volpe reiterated the administration's opposition to a federally-financed airport police force and said that the costs of the new anti-hijacking measures would ultimately be recovered by higher air fares.

Initially, however, the airlines would have to absorb the expenses of the baggage inspections, and airport operators — city and county governments, or special airport authorities — would have to pay for the guards.

Tuesday's announcement was immediately greeted by protests from airport operators and lobbyists for U.S. cities, who said that airport policing should be a federal responsibility and that the extra costs would strain local tax resources.

One official of the Airport Operators' Council International estimated that about 80 per cent of the country's airports don't meet expenses with airport revenues (such as landing fees, parking income, and concessions) and, therefore, must be subsidized out of general tax revenues.

Although there were no reliable estimates of how much the new steps would cost, John Shaffer head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said that fare increases reflecting the high airline expenses would be no more than $1.

Before leaving for Brussels Tuesday, Rogers met for 40 minutes with Silvia Masnata, the Swiss ambassador to Havana, and handed him what Rogers called "an American draft" of a hijacking agreement for Masnata to carry back to Havana.

It is understood in return that the United States will agree to restrict terrorist activities mounted against Cuba by Cuban exiles from U.S. territory.

'I'M SHOT! HELP . . .'

BELFAST (CP) — Three young children watched their father die on a village sidewalk late Tuesday as one of Northern Ireland's worst days of violence drew to a close. Five men were killed within 24 hours.

The confirmed death toll rose to 655 in more than three years of communal violence in the province.

The father who died was a Protestant militiaman, William Bogle, 27, who had taken his family for a drive in County Tyrone. They were in the Village of Killeter when four shots hit the car.

Bogle staggered to the sidewalk and collapsed, crying: "I'm shot! Help me, I'm shot!" He died in his wife's arms.

Gov't Readies Car Insurance

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Highways Minister Robert Strachan said today that the government has hired the treasurer of Saskatchewan's public car insurance plan to put together British Columbia's scheme.

Strachan also promised the legislation will be introduced for final adoption in the Legislature in the spring session.

The earliest date for implementation would be six months from the time the legislation is passed, Strachan said, but added it could take longer.

Hired as an "adviser" to Strachan is Norman Bortnick, 47, at an annual salary of $25,000. Bortnick will begin work Monday, Strachan said.

Bortnick started in the Saskatchewan government insurance office as executive assistant in 1953 and has held a number of posts in and out of that office since then. He is a chartered accountant.

Strachan said he would give out no more details of the program between now and the time the legislation is introduced.

But he said he already knows the alternatives involved and the next decision is which of these is best. The car insurance may or may not be tied to the issuance of car and drivers licences, he said.

He said he could make no statement on whether rates would drop for certain types of driver, but said bad drivers would not be getting low rates because of subsidy from the public.

NICHOLSON STAYING ON

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced today that Lt.-Gov. J. R. Nicholson of British Columbia will remain in office "for the time being."

Lt.-Gov. Nicholson announced earlier he would resign at the end of November for personal and family reasons.

Ottawa to Hike Forces Spending

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Canada told the North Atlantic Treaty Organization today that it plans to increase defence spending this year and improve the quality of its NATO forces.

James Richardson, the new defence minister, outlined the plans in a report to NATO ministers meeting here. (See also Page 2.)

Afterward he told newsmen it was too early to give a precise figure on the defence budget increase. Spending has been frozen for a number of years at about $2 billion.

"I would like to think the people are proud of their armed forces, think they are necessary and important and are not unduly concerned by the expenditure," he said.

Richardson said the budget must rise to meet increased costs and new equipment needs. He told his NATO colleagues that Canada is preparing to consider proposals from the defence industry for a new long-range maritime aircraft to replace the Argus now in use.

He mentioned a new radio relay system in Europe and improved anti-tank systems as examples of how Canada is moving to improve the quality of its NATO forces.

Canada is continuing to consider ways in which the effectiveness of its NATO forces can be improved without a significant change in size, Richardson told his colleagues.

He said he warned them that all NATO countries must expect further public pressure for reductions in defence spending as negotiations progress with the communist bloc, leading toward detente in Europe.

SOCRED ELECTION COSTS: $911,169

Expense statements filed with the chief electoral officer in Victoria show the Social Credit League spent a record amount in the Aug. 30 provincial election.

The league spent $911,169.40 compared with reported expenses of $526,000 in 1969. This does not include amounts spent by candidates themselves.

The Liberal party reported spending $223,754, compared with $156,000 spent in 1969.

Earlier, the New Democratic Party reported more than doubling its 1969 campaign expenditures of $79,000 by spending $190,867.61.

The Conservative party reported spending $159,566.19 while the Communist party said it spent $4,800.08.

Popular Cold Pills Worthless: MDs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Popular pills heavily advertised as remedies for the common cold — such as Contac and Coricidin — can't even relieve runny-nosed symptoms, let alone cure them, medical experts testified today.

Two doctors with long experience in colds research told a U.S. senate subcommittee the ingredients used in over-the-counter cold remedies — particularly anti-histamines — are worthless in treating colds and come in doses too small to do any good anyway.

They said the same held for non-prescription cough syrups. Americans spend close to $1 billion a year on home remedies to treat their coughs and colds.

"What is disturbing is that the American public spends large sums of money treating their colds with over-the-counter combinations which contain some ingredient that are essentially ineffective, and others, although at least potentially effective, in too low a dose to be genuinely useful," said Dr. Philip Norman, a medical professor at Johns Hopkins University.

Both he and Dr. Carl Arbesman, a medical professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo, said that virtually all cold pills contain anti-histamine compounds supposedly effective in relieving runny noses. But they said anti-histamines, while effective in allergies, don't help colds at all and that this has been proved by numerous studies.

"In summary, then, the 'cold remedies' obtainable without prescription have not been proven to be effective," Arbesman said. "The ingredients are not anti-viral and cannot cure colds."

Arbesman also warned that at least seven brands of cold pills contain aspirin but contain no warning on their labels to alert persons who are allergic to it.

Running down a list of several popular brands of cold pills, Norman described their contents."

—Coricidin contains the equivalent of one Aspirin tablet and one-half the usually prescribed dose of an anti-histamine.

—Super-Anahist contains two anti-histamines, each one-quarter the usual dose, a bit less than one aspirin tablet, and a nasal decongestant at one-quarter to one-half the usual therapeutic dose.

—Dristan is composed of an anti-histamine at less than half the prescribed dose and a decongestant doctors only prescribe for external use.

—Contac contains small amounts of anti-histamine and decongestant in a time-release form that "retards absorption" so that it is impossible for the drugs to do any good.

Further, he said, Allerest claims to be for relief of "allergic colds," an ailment Norman said doesn't even exist and so must have come "from the imagination of an ad writer."
